JOHNSON FLAYS WITHHOLDING OF NAVY PACT DATA

Asserts Committee Should Have It.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 7.—[Special.]—The right of the senate to equal power with the President in making of treaties was asserted today by Senator Hiram Johnson [Rep., Cal.] in a formal statement attacking the Hoover administration for its action yesterday in withholding important secretary correspondence dealing with the London naval agreement from the foreign relations committee.

As the outstanding champion of the opposition against treaty ratification, Senator Johnson assailed the arguments advanced by Secretary of State Stimson in support of the executive decision to refuse the senate access to the treaty documents. The California senator indicated in addition that he will inaugurate a new fight to obtain the secret correspondence when the foreign relations committee meets in executive session Monday to begin executive consideration of the pact.

Urges Another Request.

Senator Johnson's plan is to urge the committee to make another request for the documents and to accompany it with a statement that the committee considers these papers essential to that clear understanding of the treaty needed before a report can be made to the senate. The Johnson position is that the senate, as copartner with the President in treaty making, is entitled to the same information regarding the treaty as the executive and should withhold action until it gets all the facts.

Whether Chairman William E. Borah [Rep., Idaho] of the foreign relations committee will back up Senator Johnson was not made known definitely today. Senator Borah said he had all the information regarding the pact that he needed to make up his mind and that he was ready to begin preparation of a report for the senate. He hoped, he said, that the report could be completed this coming week. Senator Borah added, however, that some senators may want more detailed information and that their requests would be considered.

Says Door Is Open.

In his statement Senator Johnson asserted that Secretary Stimson had opened the door to publication of the papers relating to the London treaty when he introduced into the foreign relations committee record the navy general board secret memorandum of Sept. 11, 1930, which contained a portion of the British-American correspondence during the Hoover-MacDonald conversations last fall.

"It is silly, and worse," Mr. Johnson said, "for any individual to contend that he can put into the public record and publish a part of the correspondence bearing upon the treaty and then, holding up his hands in holy horror at a request for all of the correspondence, pretend that while a part of the record, upon which he relies, may be by him given to the public, the giving of all of it to his partner in treaty making would be incompatible with the public interest."

Senator Johnson asserted that Secretary Stimson, in advancing one of his major precedents in support of the Hoover refusal to turn over the treaty documents, had presented but a "half quotation" from a message sent to the house by George Washington in 1796 and that a full reading of the context showed the precedent to be, in fact, a stronger argument for the senate than the presidential position.

Refers to Jay Treaty.

Senator Johnson had reference to a request made by the house of representatives in 1796 for correspondence touching on the negotiation of the Jay treaty. In that case, Senator Johnson disclosed today, President Washington declined to give the information to the house, but did turn it over to the senate for its confidential information.

"The power of the President to negotiate treaties is derived from the constitution," Senator Johnson said in beginning his statement, "which says: 'He shall have power by and with the advice and consent of the senate to make treaties, provided two-thirds of the senators present concur.'

Washington Quoted.

"In the making of treaties, therefore, the duty of the senate is as important and solemn as that of the President. Apparently this is forgotten in the present discussion. The secretary of state goes back to the famous Washington message of 1796 and quotes it as follows:

"'The nature of foreign negotiations requires caution and their suc-

GANGSTER SHOT TO DEATH, SUNK DEEP IN CANAL

75 Pounds of Iron Wired to Body.

Another of Chicago's major gangsters, Eugene [Red] McLaughlin, who at the age of 26 years had achieved a police reputation as "the man of a hundred crimes," was found slain yesterday.

His body, rising to the surface of the drainage canal at Summit, in the churn of a passing tugboat, was sighted by a fisherman. Summit police recovered the body at 1 p. m. and, for the next six hours, it lay unidentified at the county morgue.

The murder marks another episode in the gangster wars that broke out a week ago when Philip Ignolfo was killed on the south side and three members of the Druggan crew were slain in a machine gun attack on a hotel at Fox Lake. Because McLaughlin's brother, Robert, president of the Checker Cab company, was reported to have been a member of the Fox Lake party that was fired on by the machine gunners, the police at first believed there might have been a connection between Red McLaughlin's death and the triple slaying, but investigation failed to support this theory.

Body Weighted with Iron.

McLaughlin's wrists were bound behind with telephone wire and his body weighted with 75 pounds of angle iron. He had been shot twice through the head from behind, one bullet emerging from his chin and the other from the left cheek. From the nature of the wounds, the police conjectured that the instrument of execution was a .45 caliber pistol.

In the pockets of his silk lined suit of green were a platinum watch, its crystal edged with 40 diamonds, a motorists's courtesy card, issued by the police of Miami Beach, Fla., to one P. E. Bradley of Miami Beach; half a $10 bank note, a sheaf of religious pictures painted on squares of silk, and the photograph of a sun tanned young woman in a riding habit.

The name on the courtesy card sent the police on a false trail and for hours their theory was that the victim was a Miami gangster. An inscription on the back of the girl's photograph was the clew which ultimately led to identification of McLaughlin, who had been three times accused of murder and possessed a police record since he was 16.

"Gene, I'll be loving you always—Maria," was the inked message, which had almost been obliterated by long immersion in water.

At 6:30 p. m. a friend telephoned to Robert McLaughlin a report of the discovery of the body, and quoted to him the inscription on the photograph. The friend asked if Eugene McLaughlin, younger brother of the Checker president, were missing.

Missing for Two Weeks.

"He's been missing two weeks," said Robert McLaughlin, and hastened to the county morgue.

Attendants turned back the sheet. McLaughlin glanced at the tousled red hair, the cleft chin and strong jaw. "It's Gene," he said.

"A better kid never walked in shoes," the elder McLaughlin declared. "He returned from Miami

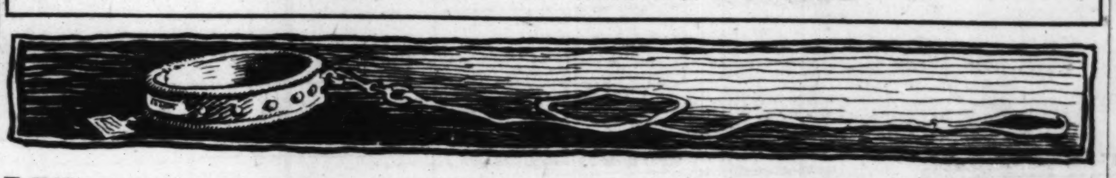
A TRIBUTE TO A FAITHFUL FRIEND



HIS ancestors came from China. Back in 1910, on a small island steamer between Manila and Hongkong, I bought one of them, a fluffy little chow puppy, from a Chinese steward, and later I acquired two more in Hongkong.

They had no pedigree, even though their ancestry extended back through thousands of generations into the remote depths of Chinese antiquity, but if there is anything in heredity, these nameless forbears were of high character.

With the three puppies, and provided with a consular certificate to insure their admission to the U. S., I embarked on the old Asia, which, despite her age, made the trip safely, although wrecked and looted by Chinese pirates on her next voyage. In course of time I reached Chicago, with the dogs in excellent condition.

Six years later several successive litters of little chows had arrived with Biblical frequency. The original pilgrims had begat and begat, so that Chicago had a constantly widening area populated by their descendants.

The original three had passed from my possession, but when I finally married, in 1917, one of our wedding presents was a grandson of two of those who had come over on the Asia. He was about six months old, playful, friendly and with an angelic disposition. From the very beginning he seemed inspired with an ambition to be the most perfect of all dogs, an ambition that I feel was fulfilled.

I named him Shenzi, which is Swahili, but which sounds like the name of a Chinese province. It was soon evident that he was no ordinary dog. Kindliness and intelligence were happily combined with a dignity that commanded your respect as well as your affection.

They say chows are one-man dogs, faithful to their masters but sullen to others. If this is so, then Shenzi was the exception. He was friendly to all, but not effusive with strangers. He merely became more dignified.

When our first baby came we wondered how Shenzi would greet it. At first he pretended not to see it and looked everywhere else. He probably didn't understand what a baby was or else he regarded it as merely a temporary dislocation of the family routine. But soon after, when he thought he was not observed, he would lie near the crib, as though he had here a responsibility that he must faithfully fulfill. The same course he followed with the successive babies, although by this time he must have known pretty well what babies were. But not until they had passed beyond the infant stage and acquired personalities of their own did he abandon his studied aloofness and take them into his affections.

He patiently endured the roughness of the children and if they became too rough he simply got up and left them. When he thought they were alone he lay by their doors, ready to call for help at any unusual sound.

In all our plans he was considered as one of the family. When he failed to return home at his regular hour, some one remained awake to let him in. In these days of automobiles a dog is merely a dog to many a reckless driver and a dog takes chances on the country roads. On more than one occasion, when he failed to return, we have gotten out of bed in the chill late hours of the night to search the roads along which he might have wandered, dreading what we might find lying limp and motionless by the roadside.

Except for these nocturnal absences during his younger days, when there is lure in the moonlight and many fascinating smells of rabbits to be investigated, his conduct never caused us worry or concern.

They talk about "charm." Some people I know have it to a remarkable degree. You like them the minute you see them and often you don't know really why. Well, that was one of the chief characteristics of Shenzi. You couldn't help liking him, for with his bright and kindly eyes, brimming with friendliness and as honest as the day is long, he simply walked into your heart and was welcome. His tail, that eloquent insignia of canine gladness, was always ready to wigwag his messages of good cheer.

I can imagine no dog, or human either, with a finer character and disposition, although I know the devoted owners of other beloved dogs may challenge this opinion.

His table manners were above reproach. He would never grab or show unseemly greed, no matter how hungry he might be. He received his food with mute gratitude. You were made to feel that he loved you for yourself alone and not for what he hoped you might give him.

And beneath his gentleness there was always a self-respecting dignity that never left him. If all dogs were like Shenzi, the highest compliment any human could receive would be to be called a dog. He was a gentleman if there ever was one.

At last he began to fail. Thirteen years is old for some dogs and, little by little, we noted with resignation the unmistakable signs that his days were nearing their end. His hearing failed, infirmities began their grim encroachments, his eyes began to dim, and he spent his hours sleeping or dozing. It was pathetic to see how bravely he tried to respond to our greetings with his old-time eagerness.

He was put in the care of the best veterinarian, whose kindness to animals was known to be genuine, and it was hoped that he could be carefully nursed through the cold months until I could rejoin him in the summer, when I planned to make his last days as happy as possible.

He died while I was away. In his last days I hope he didn't think he had been deserted by the friends he had loved and who in turn had loved him so devotedly. Blind, infirm, destitute of smell and hearing, he simply passed away, and if there is a heaven for dogs, then he is there.

In time a stone monument, carved and inscribed, will take its place in the little animal graveyard beneath the trees where other beloved pets have gone before and where in life he loved to lie, looking off across the meadows at the setting sun. It will be my slight tribute to a most faithful and unselfish friend.

U. OF C. MAY GET 2 LABORATORIES; TO COST 2 MILLION

Two new laboratories, to cost $2,000,000, are in prospect for the University of Chicago, President Hutchins told alumni assembled last night in Mandel hall for the annual Alumni day. One of the laboratories is to be devoted to hygiene and bacteriology and the other to anatomy.

Informal information has been received from the general education board of the Rockefeller Foundation that the board will provide $1,000,000 toward the cost if the remaining $1,000,000 is provided otherwise, President Hutchins explained. Half the board's allotment, $500,000, will be turned over as soon as half the amount to be subscribed otherwise is produced.

Dr. Frederic Woodward, vice president of the university, announced that $1,631,000 of the $2,000,000 subscribed by alumni in 1924 has been paid. An additional $815,000 has been given by the general education board, swelling this particular fund to $2,446,000, from which an annual income of $138,000 is now derived, he said.

Find Woman Hit by Royal Ban Divorcee

[Copyright: 1930: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, June 7.—An explanation was made today to solve the society mystery of yesterday's canceled court presentation. Search of the marriage records revealed that Mrs. Christopher Courtney, wife of Group Captain Christopher Lloyd Courtney, who received notice from the lord chamberlain that her presentation at the first royal court on May 14 had been struck from the official records, was a divorced woman.

Presentation at court is forbidden to divorced women.

Mrs. Courtney, who was presented by Lady Salmond, wife of Sir John Salmond, marshal of the royal air force, was married to Capt. Courtney Sept. 21, 1926, in the prince's row register office in London. The records there showed Mrs. Courtney appeared as "Constance May Rayson, formerly Greensill, spinster, aged 27, the divorced wife of Alexander Arnold Rayson."

Case Very Unusual.

The certificate shows her father's name as George Edward Greensill, civil servant. Mr. Greensill and Geoffrey Courtney were witnesses at the wedding.

The rules of court procedure are so well known to debutantes and their sponsors that never before has there been a case quite like Mrs. Courtney's. Court officials carefully scrutinize the original list submitted to them and in many cases these are reduced privately beforehand.

Twenty-seven years ago, when the presentation of Mrs. Eric Gordon, later Lady Granville Gordon, to Queen Victoria was canceled, the official action, also in connection with a divorce case, was taken twelve years after the presentation and in another reign.

Speculate Sponsor's Position.

There is considerable speculation as to the position of Mrs. Courtney's sponsor, Lady Salmond, daughter of Lady Desborough Brancket, lady of the bedchamber of the queen, who, it is reasonable to assume, is well versed in court procedure and the written and unwritten laws of court etiquette. If Lady Salmond was unaware that Mrs. Courtney was a divorced woman then she is open to the charge of making a presentation of a person with whom she was insufficiently acquainted.

Divorce, as it is now understood, is a comparatively modern institution in England. Previous to 1857-'58 a marriage could be dissolved by a special act of parliament. An act of 1857 transferred the jurisdiction in divorce and matrimonial cases to a new civil court.

Mystery SOS Breaks Reed's Radio Speech

An extended summary of Senator Reed's speech appears on page 7 in The Tribune this morning.

New York, June 7.—[Special.]—An S O S call, supposedly from a ship in distress, tonight stopped all radio broadcasting on the Atlantic seaboard from New England to Georgia for twenty-six minutes.

The Radio Marine corporation said the call probably came from a vessel in far eastern waters. After the most powerful stations in the east were unable to pick up further calls, broadcast service was renewed.

Breaks Into Reed Speech.

The call caused a break in the broadcast of the speech of former Senator James A. Reed at Sedalia, Mo., which was carried over a nation-wide hookup. The part of Reed's speech that was missed consisted of criticism of what he called the "radio trust."

Paul Reed, publicity representative of the Columbia Broadcasting system, charged that other New York broadcasting stations remained on the air for ten minutes after station WABC was ordered to be silent. He stated that officials of the Columbia system had been unable to learn the source of the S O S signal, adding that he did not know "if political influence was behind it or if some New York politicians wanted to interfere" with Mr. Reed's address.

COMPLAINTS MADE HERE.

THE TRIBUNE last night received telephone complaints from Chicago radio fans that "piano playing and other disturbances" prevented clear reception of that portion of Senator Reed's address dealing with radio.

BAILEY AHEAD OF SIMMONS IN SENATE PRIMARY

BULLETIN.

Raleigh, N. C., June 8, 1 a. m.—[Special.]—The latest returns from yesterday's Democratic senatorial primary show Bailey leading Simmons by 21,000 votes.

Raleigh, N. C., June 7.—[U. P.]—With a count a little better than one-sixth complete, Josiah W. Bailey was leading Furifold M. Simmons for the Democratic senatorial nomination by more than 13,000 plurality in today's primary.

The count stood: 307 out of 1,806 precincts, Bailey, 37,443; Simmons, 23,596; Estep [wet], 148; Bailey's plurality, 13,487.

Bailey, who is an attorney of Raleigh, entered the primary to "punish" the venerable Senator Simmons for deserting the national Democratic ticket headed by Al Smith in the last presidential election.

It was the first real opposition Simmons has had since he entered the United States senate in 1901.

Bailey was leading by 1,500 in Buncombe county [Asheville]; 600 in Gaston county [Gastonia] and Simmons by about 500 in Mecklenberg county, in which Charlotte is located and which is the largest county in the state. In Raleigh where the count was slow, Bailey was ahead by about 200. Simmons' forces expect to gain in the rural districts.

Early in the day, the Simmons forces complained to election officials that "Hoovercrats" were not being permitted to vote in the primary.

MEXICO TO PROBE HISTORY BOOKS TO FIND "TAINT"

MEXICO CITY, June 7.—(AP)—The minister of the interior has requested the Mexican state governors to make a thorough investigation of the history textbooks used in the schools to discover if any books in use contained derogatory references to Mexico.

The circular is an outgrowth of the recent seizure of several hundred books at the American school in Mexico City.

Announcement also was made that the department of the interior henceforth will supervise motion picture films brought into Mexico for the dual purpose of developing Mexican movies and eliminating pictures considered derogatory to Mexico.

COLORED MANIAC ATTACKS WOMAN; SHOT BY RESCUER

Mrs. Anna Schuster, 26 years old, an expectant mother, was criminally assaulted late yesterday a few doors from her home, 6535 Dakin street, by Jesse Banks, 24 years old, a Negro inmate of the nearby Chicago State Hospital for the Insane. Hearing her screams, Herman Esborn, 3945 Natchez avenue, ran out of his house with a pistol and shot Banks twice in the chest. Mrs. Schuster, suffering from shock, was carried into her home and the Negro was returned to the hospital, his condition critical.

RUMANIA GIVES BACK THRONE HE QUIT FOR WOMAN

Parliament Deposes Boy King Today.

BY WILLIAM SHIRER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1930: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BUCHAREST, Rumania, June 7.—Former Crown Prince Carol, back in the Rumanian capital from which he was driven in disgrace four years ago, tomorrow will be given the throne which he threw away for the love of a red headed girl, Mme. Magda Lupescu, daughter of a wealthy Jewish junk dealer in Bucharest.

Following the resignation tonight of Premier Juliu Maniu, leader of the Peasants' party, and his cabinet, the chamber of deputies and the senate was called in extraordinary session for 11 o'clock tomorrow morning to place the 36 year old prince on the throne upon which his 8 year old son, Michael, now sits.

Will Change Constitution.

The procedure which will be followed to crown Carol king probably will be, first, his appointment to the regency, in place of his brother, Nicholas, and, second, his assumption of the throne, probably a few days later. To put him on the throne, the constitution must be altered. The law of Jan. 4, 1926, which took away Carol's right to ascension to the throne and named his son as king, must be repealed. This formality is to be taken care of by the extraordinary session of parliament tomorrow.

The resignation of the Maniu cabinet tonight followed an all day sitting. The cabinet split on the proper method of handling the situation and decided the best way out was to resign. Prof. George Mironescu, foreign minister in the Maniu cabinet, was immediately charged with forming a new cabinet. He announced late tonight that he had succeeded. He, himself, will be premier and foreign minister.

Seeks Return to Ex-Wife.

Carol's first act this morning was to file application for annulment of the divorce which Princess Helene obtained from him on July 21, 1928. Government officials advised this as the simplest step to unite the royal couple, although it was also suggested that they might remarry. Patriarch Miron Christea, head of the Orthodox church and member of the regency, is reported to favor annulment of the divorce, which he, in his capacity as ruling leader of the church, is in a position to grant.

The divorce proceedings against Carol were started by Princess Helene on June 6, 1928. Carol's friends in Rumania opposed it, and the prince's lawyer, Gen. Condescus, tried to hold up the decree. The divorce was given on the grounds that Prince Carol had "violated the sanctity and dignity of marriage." Neither Carol nor Princess Helene were present when the decree was read.

Coup Perfectly Executed.

Prince Carol's perfectly executed coup was the result of a carefully prepared plan. The prince himself declared today that not the least remarkable factor about it was that it did not leak out prematurely, as so many people had been taken into confidence. The coup was engineered with the aid and complete knowledge of the Maniu cabinet and the army. It is reported reliably that both the Italian and Jugo-Slav governments also were informed of the plot and assented to it.

A fortnight ago Princess Helene went to Vienna.

"I am here for the Toscanini concerts," she told friends.

She did not go near the Rumanian legation there, but was spirited through a side door into the Jugo-Slav legation where, it is now learned, she interviewed Carol. They discussed plans for his return, and a day later Princess Helene returned to Bucharest and Carol went back to Paris.

Flies from Munich.

Carol left Paris last Sunday for Munich, where he worked out the final plan for his return. With two companions, Dimitrescu and Gatoski, and a pilot, he hopped off at dawn yesterday in the Farman French plane. A mishap almost overtook them at Koeroesfoe, on the Rumanian-Hungarian border, where the plane made a forced landing because of a shortage of oil.

But the military aviation officers at Klausenburg were on the lookout for him, and a big bombing plane came to the rescue. The oil tanks were refilled and Carol continued on his way triumphantly to Klausenburg, Transylvania, where the Rumanian garrison gave him a big ovation.

At Klausenburg he transferred to a

Rumanian military plane and, dressed in the uniform of a general, flew to Bucharest, where another regiment of troops was drawn up to receive him.

Meets Premier in Palace.

He was driven hurriedly to the palace, where he was received by Premier Maniu, other members of the government, and his younger brother, Prince Nicholas. The whole plan went off like clock work, and today the country was as calm as if nothing extraordinary had happened.

This city tonight is filled with milling crowds, overflowing the streets and shouting "Long Live King Carol." It is a good natured mob and up to midnight the police reported no trouble. This afternoon a mob of Carol's supporters invaded the offices of several Liberal newspapers, ran up flags, and plastered the buildings with signs of "Long Live King Carol." They retained good order and no arrests were made.

Rumors that Carol had returned got about the capital at 7 o'clock last night while parliament was still sitting. During the debate, Alexander Vayda Voevod, minister of the interior, rushed into the chamber and whispered to some of the other government ministers. News of Carol's return then quickly spread through the chamber. The deputies cheered wildly.

Carol Sees His Son.

Carol, in the meantime, installed himself in the Cotroceni, one of the royal palaces. He immediately asked that his son be brought to him, and little King Michael, rubbing his sleepy eyes, got the first glimpse of his father in four years. Carol then conferred with his brother, Prince Nicholas, who assured him of his support and his intentions of resigning his seat in the regency in favor of Carol.

At midnight Premier Maniu called and was closeted with the prince for an hour. At 2 a. m. Carol left the palace and drove to headquarters to inspect a regiment of chasseurs. He was given a rousing ovation.

In the meantime, the departure of Queen Marie from Bucharest was nicely timed. She left yesterday morning via the Orient express for Oberammergau, accompanied by the Former Archduchess Cyril of Russia. She ostenisbly knew nothing of the plot, although circles close to the court here say that she knew the plans and timed her departure accordingly. When informed of Carol's coup at Vienna today she said:

"As a mother, I am naturally happy at the reception my son received. I always stand by my people and I hope there will be no trouble."

Liberals Accept Return.

Today parliament and the regency sat all day. The Bratianu liberals, who had so bitterly opposed Carol's return, swung into line this morning when the leaders of the party realized that Prince Carol's return was a "fait accompli." At a special meeting, which former Premier Bratianu refused to attend, the Liberals announced that they would "bow to the wishes of the people in this matter."

Prince Carol's return means that he and his brother Nicholas are just exchanging rôles. Nicholas, it is reported, has a girl whom he wants to live with in Paris like Carol has been doing for the last four years. The story, as told in diplomatic circles here today, is:

Nicholas is known to love Mme. Saveanunee Dumitrescu Tohan, and all efforts of the royal family to break up the affair has failed. A short time ago Mme. Saveanunee went to Vienna, where she is reported to have given birth to a child. Prince Nicholas then informed Queen Marie that he intended to marry her.

QUIT RIGHTS IN 1926

Prince Carol, who has long been a figure of interest throughout the world, renounced his right to succeed his father, King Ferdinand, on Jan. 1, 1926. In renouncing the throne he also relinquished all of the prerogatives which were his as crown prince, even to the extent of giving up membership in the royal family.

Carol's renunciation was accepted by King Ferdinand and the government, and a proclamation was issued making Prince Michael, baby son of Carol and Princess Helene, as heir to the throne.

Despite the public intimacy with Carol's affairs, some mystery surrounded his action in giving up the throne. The Rumanian royal family said it was the result of domestic troubles. Carol, himself, a few days later said that princes have a right to their own souls like any other person. But other sources claimed that Carol was forced out of the succession for political reasons.

Had Many Love Affairs.

From the domestic side of the question, Carol had for some time embarrassed his own family and other European relatives by his love affairs. The first of these was with Zizi Lambrino the daughter of a professor, who, although poor, was of a good family. This marriage occurred at Odessa in 1918 and was aided by the Germans, according to the claims of Queen Marie, who tried to persuade Carol not to make the morganatic match.

Carol and Zizi lived together for some time. They had one son, who now lives in Paris. He is 11 years old. Zizi failed some time ago in legal efforts to establish the boy's right to Carol's name. At this time Prince Nicholas, Carol's younger brother, only 15 years old and in poor health, was considered as King Ferdinand's successor. Early in 1919 King Ferdinand and Queen Marie succeeded in annulling Carol's marriage to Zizi, and Carol was sent on a six months' trip to Japan

"to forget." Shortly before he went away, however, he tried to kill himself, but only inflicted a bullet wound in his leg.

Weds Princess in 1920.

In the autumn of 1920 Carol married Princess Helene of Greece. Carol settled down for a time after this royal marriage, promising his parents to take his position of crown prince seriously. But he still had his mind on his first love affair, and Queen Marie had a difficult time in keeping Carol by the family hearthside. Stories from central Europe during these times told of his numerous amorous adventures.

From the political side Carol was known not to favor the régime of the Bratianu brothers, one of whom was premier and the other finance minister, both of them belonging to the liberal faction in Rumania. According to Carol, the rule of the Bratianus signalized graft, corruption, and oppression. The Bratianus had the support of Queen Marie, who was the real ruler of Rumania. From this situation, it was said, Queen Marie was persuaded by the Bratianus, especially Vintila Bratianus, to force Carol to renounce his claims to the throne.

When this action was decided upon it was necessary to find a pretext, and this was found in Carol's association with a Madam Lupescu, daughter of a Jewish junk dealer. Anti-Semitism has always been strong in Rumania, and the cry was raised that there might be a Jewish queen in Carol was permitted to succeed to the throne. This argument was used with King Ferdinand, who finally agreed to the demands of the premier that Carol must be ruled out of the succession to the throne.

"STILL LOVE HIM, BUT WON'T HINDER HIM," CAROL'S SWEETIE SAYS

[Copyright: 1930: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, June 7.—[Special.]—Mme. Lupescu, abandoned by Prince Carol of Rumania, took an attitude of abnegation when interviewed today.

"Although Carol is dearer to me than life, I have never tried to stand between him and his kingdom and always have been prepared to make any sacrifice for him," she said.

"There has been no quarrel between us. Though I have been blamed, it is a fact that I never kept him from his kingly office. I never wanted to be queen, nor did I ever even cherish the hope to become his wife. I announced three years ago I would never stand between him and his country if Rumania should call him back or if his sense of duty should command his return.

"Carol and I were never able to go anywhere in public together without attracting embarrassing attention But now I have voluntarily returned to the independence I enjoyed before Carol and I came together. I had been divorced from my husband before then.

Mme. Lupescu, who is 31 years of age, intends for the present to remain at her château near Paris, where a full length portrait of Carol in uniform still hangs.

Queen Marie, in Germany, Accepts Return of Carol

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MUNICH, Germany, June 7.—Dowager Queen Marie of Rumania, mother of Prince Carol, announced tonight that she "accepts the present change in Rumania." The Rumanian queen arrived here tonight, supposedly under a strict incognito, en route to Oberammergau. Marie, who usually enjoys the limelight, sounded almost fretful as she commanded the Rumanian minister to see to it that her visit here was "quiet and restful."

After conferring with Marie, the Rumanian minister announced:

"We accept the present change in Rumania. We believe it will greatly help to stabilize conditions and it safeguards the rights of the eldest line of our dynasty. Our information is to the effect that Carol will become regent until his son, King Michael, is of age. The army is behind Carol."

The queen, who had intended to remain in Germany four weeks, plans to return to Bucharest next Saturday, the minister said.

France Fears Disorders.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, June 7. — Although the Quai d'Orsay has not yet been informed officially of the exact trend of events in Rumania, considerable uneasiness is felt in official circles here after Prince Carol's coup. It is feared his return may result in disorders. The French believe the anti-Carolist forces will not permit his return to the throne without a fight.

It is pointed out here that the situation is particularly delicate owing to the tension between Rumania and Russia. It is felt in France that if trouble breaks out in Rumania, the bolsheviks may try to take advantage of it.

It is not forgotten, either, that a couple of months ago it was insistently reported throughout the Balkans that Carol was secretly backed by Benito Mussolini. This report was denied.

Judging from the official French reaction to Carol's return, it was an unpleasant shock. The usually efficient diplomatic intelligence service had kept a discreet eye on Carol ever since his arrival in France several years ago, but it was evidently foiled by elaborate precautions taken for the prince's flight. The official Le Bourget air field, where Carol took off, was completely mystified until an inquiry disclosed that on Thursday night a couple of Rumanians, one giving his name as "Capt. Popp," hired a plane to Munich. "Capt. Popp" is now believed to have been Carol.

The truth is that nothing is known of the movements of Carol since he broke off with his mistress, Mme. Lupescu, eight days ago.

King Michael, who will lose throne he ascended in 1927.

OARD OF TRADE O OPEN IN NEW OME TOMORROW

oover to Start Action in $22,000,000 Building.

ighty-two years ago the Board of ade of the city of Chicago began ctioning in a little, poorly lighted m over Gage & Haines' flour store South Water street. Tomorrow ding in grains, provisions, cotton, d securities will be started by the mbership in the new $22,000,000 ard of Trade building, the board's ifth home.

The final session in the plain brick ilding at 453 South Clark street hich has housed the traders for hteen months was held yesterday. e last hour was given over in large rt to horseplay. Water, sample ain, sample eggs, and ice cream re hurled promiscuously, and one ader, Louis Alsberg, was struck in tion picture style with a cherry pie.

Ceremonies as impressive as care- l thought and great resources can ke them will mark the formal open- of the new structure, whose forty- ur stories facing La Salle street at ckson boulevard make it the most minating to the eye of all the build- gs in interior America's biggest finan- al district.

Hoover to Start Trading.

President Hoover is to press a but- n in Washington to signal that busi- ss may begin. John A. Bunnell, esident of the board, will call Liver- ol, the great center of grain trading Europe, by telephone and let Alex- der Slater Jr., president of the rn exchange there, hear the roar of e traders as the opening gong unds. Tomorrow is a holiday in verpool, but the board members are gather in their building to get this essage.

Preceding the opening the members the board will parade from their mporary quarters to the new build- g. The parade route is north on ark street to Monroe street, west to Salle street, and thence south again Jackson boulevard. The fife and um corps of the Board of Trade post the American Legion, successors in military way to the old time traders ho formed two batteries of artillery the civil war, will lead the march.

In the evening a banquet, to which 60 members and their guests have en invited, will be held in the Ste- ns hotel. Silas H. Strawn, attorney d civic leader, will be the principal eaker, with Mr. Bunnell, fifty- venth in the line of Board of Trade esidents, acting as toastmaster.

It is the magnificence of the new ructure itself, however, that is ex- cted to overshadow all ceremonial oceedings. Its observation tower, 2 feet above street level, is the hest point in Chicago. Its great k, facing La Salle street, thirteen in diameter, can be read for ks. Symbolic figures representing at and corn, the grains which the and rains of the midwest ripen pour into the marketing facilities the Board of Trade, stand beside giant timepiece.

This clock, like all the others in building, is geared to a master chanism animated by signals from national observatory at Arling- n. Inside the building splendor rsts out on every hand. Black and very metal decorations are spread the walls and the ceilings of the bbies, with the motif of the corn d wheat furnishing the harmonious sis of the artistry.

Large Trading Room.

At the fourth floor level is the new ading room, almost cathedral-like in s size, its lofty ceiling, and its high windows. The floor is 112x165 and e ceiling extends upward through ur floors to a height of fifty-seven et. The roar of the traders in the ts is toned down to a great extent specially prepared walls.

The pits themselves, successors to the other less splendid pits in which the great traders of the past, Old Hutch and Patten and their op- nents, bought and sold in the hun- eds of thousands and even the mil- ons of bushels, are of teakwood, im- ported because that wood is believed be most durable.

Six in number, these pits are each equipped with a device that permits the almost instant transmission of information on trades to a central control room, where it is passed on to ticker services.

A seperate room has been installed for the security market, which was established within the last year.

In the basement is a safety deposit section, guarded by mechanical facilities of lavish size. The vault has room for 20,000 safety boxes. The large front door, of steel, weighs forty tons and is opened and closed electrically.

CLUBWOMEN BACK DRY LAW AND CALL OPPOSITION 'SINISTER'

Denver, Colo., June 7.—[U. P.]—Three million women, through their delegates to the General Federation of Women's Clubs, went on record today in favor of rigid enforcement of prohibition.

Mrs. Florence Dibert of Johnstown, Pa., sought to have the resolution amended so that it would make no mention of "sinister" influences "seeking to undermine the efficacy of the 18th amendment."

"I feel that some people are honest in their convictions and that the word 'sinister' is very strong," Mrs. Diber told the delegates.

Mrs. Virginia White Speel of Washington, D. C., said: "I am in favor of the word 'sinister.' Any movement that seeks to undermine our government is sinister."

MARY S. WILDER FILES BILL FOR DIVORCE AT RENO

Mrs. Mary Scott Wilder, young Lake Forest matron, filed suit for divorce yesterday in Reno, Nev., against Paul Wilder, wealthy broker, according to a dispatch received last night. Her bill, which Wilder, it is reported, will not contest, charges mental cruelty. A property settlement has already been made and the case will be heard tomorrow. The couple has one son.

The Wilders were married in December, 1927, at Memphis, Tenn., home of Mrs. Wilder's family. Wilder, then in training as an army pilot at San Antonio, Tex., hastened to Chicago in search of a best man to find that all his friends were in army army camps. His brother, Harry, a student at Cornell, sped from Ithaca, N. Y., to Memphis to act at the wedding ceremony.

5 MILLION GIVEN FOR COLLEGE TO BAR ATHLETES

Louis Bamberger and Sister Endow It.

New York, June 7.—[Special.]—While students of other universities are rooting for their football teams, attending proms, or indulging in "close harmony" around fraternity house fireplaces, serious minded individuals enrolled in one to be established will be striving solely for advancement in learning in pure science and high scholarship.

Louis Bamberger, formerly head of the Newark, N. J., department store firm of L. Bamberger & Co., and his sister, Mrs. Felix Fuid, have made an initial endowment of $5,000,000 for the establishment of a school to serve as an "institute of advanced study," and at which there will be none of the customary college activities—except study.

Athletic Teams Barred.

This projected super-school of higher learning, which is to be established in or near Newark, will have no athletic teams, glee clubs, or fraternities. There will be no undergraduate body. All students will be advanced ones.

"The purpose," says the announcement, "is not to follow the customary university models which combine both undergraduate and graduate work in the same institutions but to establish a unique home of advanced learning in which, under competent advice, students and workers may explore any field of research into which their interest or ambition may call them, work in which they may reasonably promise some advancement in the field of human knowledge."

Dr. Flexner First Director.

The first director will be Dr. Abraham Flexner, formerly secretary and director of the division of medical education of the general education board, and he has undertaken to assemble a faculty and staff of the highest merit and promise in various fields. Temporary quarters may be opened while plans are developed for permanent buildings, according to information from Mr. Bamberger's office. A certificate of incorporation has been prepared. The letter of invitation states that no account is to be taken at any time of race, religion, or sex.

FISHERMAN HOOVER CATCHES 20 TROUT, ONE 16 INCHES LONG

Orange, Va., June 7.—[U. P.]—President Hoover caught one of the largest trout landed this year at his Rapidan camp this afternoon. It was a beautiful rainbow, 16 inches long. During the morning the President landed about 14 other fish, all of them brook trout. He returned to the stream in the afternoon and landed about a half-dozen more.

Mrs. Hoover has shown marked improvement after two days of complete rest in the quiet of the camp.

Seriously Injured When Glider Falls 100 Ft. Here

Edward Schulski, 21 years old, of Grand Rapids, Mich., was seriously injured last night when a glider he was testing fell about a hundred feet into the Wilson field, at Lawrence avenue and River road. He was taken to the Belmont hospital with a fractured right leg, a broken shoulder blade, and possible internal injuries. The glider belonged to the Middle West Glider company, 1100 South Dearborn street.

STRAWN'S HOPES RAISED BY VOTE ON RELIEF BILLS

Discounts Opposition of Two Aldermen.

The opposition of two aldermen who on Friday voted against an indorsement of the Chicago financial relief bills will not harm the legislative program at the special session in Springfield, according to Silas H. Strawn, chairman of the citizens' committee which drew and presented the bills. Forty of the 42 aldermen present at the council session, he pointed out, voted their indorsement.

"I believe the trouble with the two dissenting aldermen—Sheldon W. Govier [9th] and O. E. Northrup [19th]—is that they do not fully understand the situation," said Mr. Strawn. "The local governments must have relief and, of course, that will mean a raise in taxes. It is not a question of choice but of necessity.

Would Stop Reckless Spending.

"However, the program includes the minimum of taxes necessary to extricate the governments from their financial difficulties. And the budgetary control legislation, which is a part of the program, precludes reckless expenditures."

Govier and Northrup, in opposing the bills, asked how much taxes would be increased by the measures and how much money will be raised for the city, schools, and county by the bills.

"We are working on the figures now which will answer those questions," explained Mr. Strawn, "and will probably have them ready next week. I do not know whether we will give them out then, as it may be a matter of discourtesy to the legislature to disclose them before the legislators have seen them."

Dr. Stewart, Bishop Elect, to Dedicate Church Today

The Rev. Dr. George Craig Stewart, bishop coadjutor elect of Chicago, will dedicat the new St. Ansgarius Episcopal church, known as Chicago's memorial to Jenny Lind, Swedish singer, this afternoon at 4 o'clock. The building, erected at a cost of $75,000, is located at Thorndale and Maplewood avenues. Assisting in the services will be the rector, the Rev. William Tullberg, the Rev. Dr. Herbert Prince, Lake Forest, and the Rev. Walter Pond, St. Barnabas church, Chicago.

SUES CAB FIRM FOR $100,000 FOR AUTO INJURIES

Irving D. Doyle, 4121 North Laramie avenue, yesterday filed a $100,000 damage suit in the Superior court against the Checker Taxi company. He brings the action for injuries received last January when struck by a cab.

Two deaths yesterday raised the 1930 Cook county motor toll to 376. The victims:

Mrs. Emma Pflantz, 49 years old, 823 North May street. Died in the county hospital of injuries received when struck by a hit and run motorist as she alighted from a street car at 81st and Halsted streets on May 5.

John Conroy, 23 years old, 503 North Clark street. Died of lockjaw which followed an infection in his leg resulting from injuries in an auto accident a year ago.

Cutmore Warns Against Tax Reduction Groups

Harry S. Cutmore, director of the reassessment, yesterday warned taxpayers to beware of purported tax reduction organizations, which are exacting a fee for securing reductions in assessments. He declared that most of the organizations are taking fees for adjustments made by the reassessment staff and invited all property owners to bring their complaints to the assessors before joining any association.

'RED' M'LAUGHLIN IS FOUND SLAIN IN DRAIN CANAL

Gangster Is the Victim of Many Bullets.

Beach on May 16 and called at my office, saying he had bought a car and wanted a new paint job put on it at the Checker garage.

"He said he was stopping with mother [Mrs. Margaret McLaughlin, 6315 North Artesian avenue].

"He'd been in town four days when mother said he was missing. I was anxious—I put up a $20,000 reward for information leading to finding him, dead or alive—just among my friends, of course."

Robert McLaughlin's face was wan and his cheeks sunken. He said he had not slept soundly since his brother disappeared. Policemen at the morgue pressed him for a clew to the slayers.

"I don't know—I don't know," he said. "He was friendly with them all—the west side outfit, the north side boys, and the bunch on the south side. Yes, he knew Al Capone—was friendly with him, too."

Denies Beer Gang Rumors.

Questioned regarding rumors that young McLaughlin, George Druggan, and Joe Bertsche had organized a beer syndicate to compete with Edward (Spike) O'Donnell on the far south side, Robert McLaughlin displayed indignation.

"How could he organize a beer syndicate," he demanded. "He'd only been back four days when they 'took' him."

The elder McLaughlin was more interested in arranging for embalming of his brother's body. He asked, almost begged, the morgue attendants for permission to have the body moved to Judge John Sbarbaro's mortuary at 708 North Wells street. The attendants refused. They said the body must be held until after the inquest, set for 10 a. m. tomorrow.

Accused in Taxi Shooting.

The record of Red McLaughlin had been interwoven with Checker cab warfare since August, 1924, when he was accused of attempting to murder Harry J. Morley, then general superintendent of the company. Morley, a former policeman, was shot in the temple in front of the Checker offices at 1401 Jackson boulevard.

McLaughlin, a truculent youth whom Morley had discharged as a Checker driver, was sought for the shooting. He was arrested, booked for attempted murder, and released when Morley declined to prosecute. Three weeks later he was seized again, charged with an auto theft. He was not brought to trial.

That same month, Joseph [Lefty] Wright, foreman of the Checker concern, was shot in the company garage, taken to Jefferson Park hospital, and there shot again as he lay abed by some one who had climbed the hospital fire escape. McLaughlin was one of seven accused of the shooting, but was discharged for lack of evidence.

Freed After "Ride" Murder.

In October, 1925, Irving [Sonny] Schlig, so-called airplane bootlegger, was taken for a ride and slain. McLaughlin was accused, refused to testify in court, and was discharged for lack of evidence.

McLaughlin achieved his reputation for ruthlessness the following year. In May a policeman caught him strangling a jewelry salesman, from whom he was trying to wrest a case containing $75,000 in diamonds.

He won his release on a $100,000 bond. Within two weeks Samuel Brandler, New York gem broker, identified McLaughlin as the man who had robbed him of $50,000 in diamonds on May 12, five days after McLaughlin's earlier exploit.

The $100,000 bond was forfeited and McLaughlin declared a fugitive. The hunt was still in progress when, in December, Joseph Wokral, seeking reelection as president of the Checker Cab company, was shot in the head. On his deathbed Wokral named Red McLaughlin as his slayer. The following month Robert McLaughlin was elected president of the company, an office he has since retained.

Convicted; Juror Bombed.

McLaughlin was arrested, freed for lack of evidence on the murder charge, and convicted of the second jewelry holdup, but this conviction did not come until May, 1928. Two days following his conviction, the home of Fred Eicke, one of the jury, was bombed.

Never linked with the bombing, McLaughlin carried an appeal to the Supreme court and was released from Joliet prison on bond, an action which the Chicago crime commission pronounced "scandalous."

Going to Wisconsin to enjoy his freedom, McLaughlin was arrested by the constable of Hayward, Wis., whom he attacked with monkey wrench as the constable was reaching for his lockup keys. The constable fired and McLaughlin went to a hospital at Ashland, Wis., critically wounded in the abdomen.

His trial for the jewelry theft brought his brother, Robert, a citation for contempt of court. Robert was accused by Walter Newman, the principal prosecuting witness, of attempting to prevent his testifying by intimidation. Robert was sentenced to thirty days in county jail by Judge McGoorty, before whom the robbery trial was conducted. Through appeals and delays, he escaped serving the sentence.

McLaughlin was last accused of murder in January, 1930, when Barney J. Mitchell, treasurer of the Checker Cab company, and Glenn Jackson, a Checker driver, were shot to death following a champagne party at Robert McLaughlin's home. The evidence being insufficient, he was released after questioning.

His last court appearance was on Feb. 12, when the jewel robbery case with finally disposed of by the state's motion to nolle prosse. A day later McLaughlin departed for Miami.

RAIL WORKER SLAIN

The body of Caspar Rockette, 38 years old, a track worker for the Chicago and North Western railway, was found yesterday in a field at Prairie road and Washington avenue, Niles Center. He had been shot to death. His wife, Angeline, 2153 Ridge avenue, Evanston, reported him missing to the Evanston police yesterday morning. She said he left home Wednesday evening in a state of anxiety, saying he was going to Chicago to consult a lawyer. The police suspect he was involved in a personal feud. He had two small children.

IRON HANDS OF CLOCK SAVE LIFE OF POPE PIUS XI.

VATICAN CITY, June 7.—[U. P.]—The narrow escape of Pope Pius XI. from a serious accident Friday was revealed today. The pope was addressing 4,000 members of the Fascist recreational centers from Italy when the glass face of a huge clock in the front central loggia of St. Damascus courtyard fell from its position. The iron hands of the clock caught, however, and held until firemen who saw the danger climbed up and fixed the clock face in position with ropes. The clock face would have fallen where the pope was standing had the hands failed to hold.

ARREST WOMAN BANK CASHIER AS $35,000 THIEF

Shawneetown, Ill., June 7.—(AP)—Mrs. Bess Ohlinger, former cashier of the City National Bank of Shawneetown, was arrested here today on a federal warrant charging embezzlement of $35,000 of the bank's funds. The shortage was discovered four months ago, when preparations for the consolidation of the bank with another bank were under way.

Mrs. Ohlinger is charged with taking the money over a period of several years, but what disposition she made of it has not been learned.

WAR VETERAN SLAYS WOMAN, ENDS OWN LIFE

Thomas Gallagher, 40 years old, world war veteran and night clerk at the Astra hotel, 5326 Winthrop avenue, yesterday killed Mrs. Ethel Pope of Dallas, Tex., and then shot himself to death with the same revolver in a room at the hotel. The two had been living there as man and wife.

Miss Ann Snyder and Miss Vera Anderson, occupying an adjoining room, testified at the coroner's inquest they were awakened by a woman's sobs and that they then heard two shots. They tried to call the night desk, but as there was no answer, they went back to sleep, they said. The bodies were not found until Walter C. Dunn, the hotel manager, arrived at 7 in the morning.

Letters showed Mrs. Pope and Gallagher had been corresponding for some time, and that she came to Chicago three weeks ago

NOTED SURGEON BATTLES DEATH FROM INFECTION

DR. CARL A. HEDBLOM.

Dr. Carl A. Hedblom, authority on chest surgery, was operated on yesterday at St. Luke's hospital to check blood poisoning which he contracted while performing an operation. He has been seriously ill for a week from the infection and, while his condition was reported as fair yesterday, attending physicians said he is not out of danger.

The infection was caused a week ago yesterday when Dr. Hedblom pricked the index finger of his right hand with a fine needle. The puncture made by the instrument was so minute that he was unable to find it afterwards, but knew that it had pierced the skin.

By last Monday the infection had spread into his arm and he was ordered to the hospital. Since then several well known physicians have been in consultation and yesterday morning it was decided to operate to open the infection. The operation was performed by Dr. Sumner L. Koch of the Passavant hospital.

"Dr. Hedblom's condition is fair," said Dr. Koch after the operation. "He had a serious infection and is not out of danger yet. I believe that he will get better."

Dr. Hedblom is a graduate of Harvard university medical school, and from 1913 to 1916 was a professor of surgery at the Harvard medical school in China. For eight years afterward he was a member of the medical staff of the Mayo clinic at Rochester, Minn., and then for two years was chief of the surgical department of the University of Wisconsin medical school.

He resigned from this position in 1925 to become head of the department of surgery at the University of Illinois medical college in Chicago. He has written several works on thoracic surgery.

NSTEIN JUGGLES PACE-TIME IDEA O DEPICT WORLD

eks Equation to Explain ll Known Phenomena.

right: 1930: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, June 7.—After Prof. Al- t Einstein's speech at Nottingham versity last night the whole scien- world now awaits with keen in- est his production of an equation or ups of equations which will give a plete picture of all physical phe- mena. The distinguished German sicist has been evolving his theory relativity into a bigger heory to ex- in all physical action and reaction. The completion of this theory calls a special study of the importance electro-magnetic phenomena, in hich Dr. Einstein discards the the- y of the ether, which he considers makeshift, fabricated to explain mething for which scientists at the e did not have the right explana- n. It will be his purpose to recon- e in equations electro-magnetic phe- mena with gravitation and geome- y.

Claims Solution Near.

Prof. Einstein's speech explained w he was working to produce one t of equations which will describe mpletely our physical system. He d he thought he was close to it. The savant gave a taste of the man- r in which he would bring strident terations to our concept by the em- asis he placed on the importance space as a factor.

"It now appears," he said, "that ace will have to be regarded as a imary thing with matter only de- ved from it, so to speak, as sec- dary result. Space now is turning ound and eating up matter. We e always regarded matter as a pri- ry thing and space as a secondary sult. Space is now having its venge."

Prof. Einstein's address, which was livered in German, was translated Dr. I. H. Brose. A stenographic port of Dr. Brose's translation of e lecture in part follows:

"Prof. Einstein does not wish you accept his remarks on credit, but shes to explain in the clearest way ssible what he considers to be the end of modern physics. What he s to say is his purely subjective pinion and it is by no means gen- ally recognized. He thinks he can e you at least some outline of what s view is of the future of the subject, t he does not want his remarks to regarded as assertions; he wants em to be regarded as humble expres- ns of his opinion.

Explains Primitive Concepts.

"He will now concentrate our at- ntion on fundamental conceptions hich lay at the beginnings of the undations of physics. Prof. Einstein akes clear what the pre-scientific ew was and explains that the primi- e concept was that of a rigid body d that relationships in the positions rigid bodies preceded all ideas of ace; that space was not a primary nception and that it was only rough dealing with the position and lationships of bodies that the idea space later emerged.

"These ideas of space were due, of urse, to contact relationships be- een bodies and it is interesting to ow that the classical science of the eeks did not operate with space but clusively with bodies. A rigid body at the bottom of all the conceptions geometrical space of Euclid.

"The idea of a space continuum en- red into science only when analyt- al geometry was invented by René escartes. How did the idea of space iginal arise? The Greeks ap- oached position in geometry by con- dering the position of bodies with gard to each other. This, of course, ggests a body of reference. We e familiar with coördinate systems geography in the way in which ey were used, for instance, in maps.

Explains Force Idea.

"Space appears expressed in body- e form by means of these axes of ference. This is really the way in hich space as such entered into geog- phy in the first place and there s no physical basis for it. Rela- e motion occurs only with reference one or more bodies. The great ange took place in that view when aac Newton proposed his mechanics.

"The fundamental idea of Newton's echanics was the introduction of the ea of force—that is to say, accelera- on. Acceleration can be imagined ly in reference to a real rigid body. is a wonderful tribute to Newton's enius that he could go so far as to ve space a definite physical reality.

"He included it amongst the other alities. This is an aspect of his eory which has not been understood has been neglected or misunder- ood by some of his followers. Prof. instein is very anxious that this par- cular point be emphasized—that ace entered as a definite physical ality. It was a point which was issed even by the philosopher Kant.

"A remark should be added about e physical idea of space. There are o aspects. In one of them, space is be regarded as the quintessence of sitional possibilities of bodies, and, condly, as a definite dynamic system reference.

Newton's Space Absolute.

"Prof. Einstein emphasizes that ewton's space is to be regarded as solute in the sense that the posi- nal possibilities of rigid bodies are be considered as quite independent outside forces, although he does t take temperature into considera- on. This space is independent of all ysical causes and is something hich is absolute in itself.

"In Prof. Einstein's opinion, a defi- te change in the view of nature after e time of Newton occurred when the ea of the electromagnetic field was troduced by Michael Faraday and erk Maxwell. The only real things that time were bodies, space, and me. Those were constructive ele- ents from the physical viewpoint of e times. There were no others.

"Faraday introduced the idea of "a eld" and his contemporaries were und to that method of introducing idea of a state owing to the man- r of thought of their time.

Invent Space-Body Link.

"They, therefore, introduced a new dy called ether—or at least a new which they called ether to represent a physical state. The introduction of ether was necessary in order to allow electro-magnetic phenomena to occur in space. This view received considerable strengthening at the hands of a Dutchman named Lountz, who showed that in the electro-magnetic theory of states all ponderable bodies were those of ether and not of material bodies themselves.

"Looking back now we might ask why ether, as such, was introduced. Why not have called it 'state of ether or state of space?' The reason was they had not yet got to realize the connection or lack of connection between geometry and space, and so they felt constrained to add to space a variable brother, as it were, which could be a carrier for all eltectro-magnetic phenomena.

"The next change in the idea of space was comparatively small. It was due to a special theory of relativity sometimes called the "restrictive" theory of relativity. Classical physicists had two separate continua which were to be regarded as a performing stage for continua. Those were space and time. Altogether, they formed four dimensional continua, three being in space and one in time.

Light Problem Arises.

"But it had to be subdivided into two blocks, due to the fact that there were a before and an after and to satisfy the requirements of simultaneity. It was found, however, that to satisfy the demands of the constancy of propagation of light the subdimensions of space and time could not in this way be preserved or carried out.

"The space-time phenomenon of the special theory of relativity was something absolute in itself, inasmuch as it was independent of the particular state of motions considered in that theory.

"A definite change in our ideas about the rôle and constitution of space was due to the enunciation of the general theory of relativity, for which the ground had been prepared by the special theory, relativity. The law of inertia—we called it Newton's first law of motion—has shown a gap in its logic because we were not able to tell when coördinate systems were in acceleration or in rotation. We had no definite means of establishing it.

"This is what is known in the general theory of relativity as 'the principle of equivalents.' It implies that an accelerated, coördinate system can be regarded in a certain sense as equivalent to what was known as the 'inertial system.' Watches and measuring rods were not found to operate in the same way for accelerated systems as for coödinate systems of the special theory of relativity.

Create Non-Euclidian System.

"To preserve the theory of relativity for the accelerated motions as well as for the uniform regular motions of the special theory of relativity, Euclidian geometry, having been found to be too restrictive had to be rejected and a new geometry of space found. In order to preserve position possibilties of space we were compelled to regard them as no longer independent of positions of other bodies.

"In other words, the privileged position of geometry had to be given up and the view point of covariants, as it is known to mathematicians, has been gained. This means that for a description of physical phenomena we must regard all generalized coördinates as of equal validity.

"What, as general theory, has relativity then actually achieved? Prof. Einstein does not want to enter into the question of three experimental tests which have all conformed to his suspicions, but the main achievement of the general theory of relativity is that it has advanced a uniformity of view of the physical world structure. The metrics of space can be derived directly from the full equation and it produces a number of hypotheses which were originally thought necessary to account for physical phenomena. It has built, so to speak, a bridge between geometry and physics."

SLAYER OF DRYS IS SAVED FROM ELECTRIC CHAIR

Starke, Fla., June 7.—(AP)—J. W. Buchanan, Taylor county farmer, convicted slayer of two federal prohibition agents, has been saved from the electric chair, where he was to die next Tuesday, by a court order. Circuit Judge A. Z. Adkins late today issued an order restraining J. S. Blitch, as superintendent of the state prison, from carrying out the death sentence.

The order canceled the death warrant against Buchanan, declared unconstitutional the law of 1923 "authorizing the imposition of the sentence of death upon persons convicted of crime in the state of Florida by electrocution and by the superintendent of the Florida state prison" and remanded Buchanan to the penitentiary to serve a life sentence.

JURORS ACQUIT PAMPINELLA ON SECOND BALLOT

Freed in Election Killing of Slaughter.

John Pampinella, Deneen political worker in the Forty-third ward, was found not guilty yesterday by a jury in Judge McGoorty's Criminal court of the murder of William H. Slaughter, shot to death on registration day, March 11.

The verdict was received with cheers. Two ballots were taken. The first was nine to three for acquittal. The jurors argued for some time, it was learned, before voting on the second ballot, when they returned the not guilty verdict.

Slaughter, a colored minister, was working for a so-called Thompson organization when killed. Pampinella testified his relations with Slaughter throughout the day were friendly, and that they did not quarrel. He claimed to be a victim of circumstances.

"I never had a revolver in my hands in my life," he said.

Records Show Other Charges.

The records of the Criminal court show that the present trial is not the first time Pampinella has faced a criminal charge, but no testimony as to his record was introduced. The prosecutors said they were unable to introduce it as evidence.

The records show that Pampinella was indicted on Oct. 20, 1927, for automobile stealing. One defendant confessed and implicated Pampinella, but he was acquitted in Judge Harry B. Miller's courtroom.

A robbery charge made against him in April, 1927, dragged through the courts for two years. It was finally nolle prossed. The records show that on April 20, 1927, Pampinella was charged with snatching a box containing $1,130 and some checks from Ignatz Hesser, 2417 North Halsted street, a wholesale cigar dealer, while the latter was riding on a street car. Leo Abbinanti was a co-defendant.

Granted Separate Trial.

Pampinella was granted a separate trial. Abbinanti was convicted fifteen months later. After the motion for a new trial dragged for nearly another year without action he was finally placed on probation and the case against Pampinella was nolle prossed.

Assistant State's Attorney Euclid Taylor, in the closing arguments, asked that Pampinella be given the death penalty. Judge McGoorty held an extra session of court in order to complete the case.

Killed as He Walks Into Umbrella Thrust at Him

Thomas Clark, 50 years old, 949 West Madison street, lurched along Madison street near Halsted yesterday afternoon. A passerby thrust out his umbrella to fend him off, and he walked into the tip of it. The passerby hurried on. Clark fell to the walk. When he did not rise, bystanders investigated and found him dead. The umbrella had inflicted a neck wound. The body was taken to the county morgue, where it was claimed by a brother, Dennis Clark, 930 Rush street, who made the identification.

KILLED IN FALL ON STAIRS.

Joseph Brown, 50 years old, a laborer, was carrying a quart bottle of milk up the stairs of his home at 629 West 18th street last night. He slipped on the top step, fell to the bottom, fracturing his skull on the bottle. He was instantly killed.

TRAINED NURSES HUNT WAY OUT OF JOB CRISIS

Profession Finds It Has Too Many Members.

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN.

Twenty thousand young women will stream out of hospital training schools this summer to join the ranks of graduate nurses, a profession known to be overcrowded. Before snow flies it is forecast that a considerable percentage of these girls must turn to other lines of work, the majority will be uncertain of their future, and only a comparative few with the most irreproachable educational background, native intelligence and energy will eventually attain real success in the profession.

For several years discerning members of the profession, realizing what was happening, have been making ernest efforts to help ill advised young girls from taking up nursing as a career. Some of the results of the investigations under way have already been made public. Others will be discussed at the national convention of the American Nurses' association and the National League for Nursing Education to be held in Milwaukee this week.

"Quality, not Quantity, Counts."

In the words of Miss Evelyn Wood, president of the Illinois League of Nursing Education, "it isn't quantity, but quality that counts now." By which she indicated that the only need that exists in the nursing field today is for the highly trained and thoroughly educated young woman whose preparation fits her for the most exacting and specialized jobs. Miss Wood believed that the graduate nurse whose schooling stopped at the first year of high school or earlier and who has been trained in a mediocre school will get only spasmodic employment at best, and her years of apprenticeship will have been all but wasted.

Inquiry in Chicago among those qualified to speak on this subject has elicited an almost unanimous confirmation of the complaints of nurses who find themselves out of work because of the tremendous competition.

Dr. May Ayres Burgess of New York was appointed in 1926 to direct a committee on the grading of nursing schools. In 1928 she reported to the convention of nursing organizations at Louisville the progress of the studies made.

Report of Nursing Survey.

"Nursing schools," reads one paragraph, "are multiplying with great rapidity. The contrast between the growth of nursing schools and that of medical schools is striking. In 1880 there were 100 medical schools; in 1890 there were 133—in 1900, 160. Shortly thereafter came the Flexner report, which attracted attention all over the country to problems of medical education. The result was a campaign to raise the quality of medical education.

"While apparently there was no concerted attempt to reduce the number of medical schools, that was one of the results. The number decreased steadily until in 1926 there were only 79. Nursing schools, on the other hand, showed a totally different picture. In 1880 there were 15; in 1900, 432; in 1920 there were 1,775, and in 1926, 2,155,

"In medicine in 1880 there were over 3,000 graduates. By 1900, over 5,000. Then came the reorganization—and the number dropped to 3,000 in 1920. In 1926 it was 4,000, which medical authorities estimate will be the case through the next forty to fifty years.

"In nursing in 1880 there were 157 graduates. In 1900, well over 3,000; in 1920, about 15,000, and in 1926, nearly 18,000. The rate of increase is far beyond that of the general population. There are probably at present (June, 1928) about 200,000 graduate nurses in the country, and about 130,000 physicians."

Many Nurses Jobless.

Mrs. Lucy Van Frank, registrar for the first district, Illinois State Nurses' association, the largest registry in the country, reports that last winter there were always on hand 200 to 300 graduate nurses, waiting for jobs two to three weeks at a time.

Four recommendations presented to the profession by Dr. Burgess were:

To raise nursing school entrance requirements so that only the properly qualified will be admitted.

To replace student nurses with graduates for hospital bedside nursing, which would increase the cost of operation but also raise the standard of service.

To help meet hospital costs of graduate service by securing funds, and to improve the quality of graduate nursing so that hospitals will demand it.

To get public support for nursing education, and to awaken the public to the fact that if society wants good nursing it must pay the cost of educating good nurses.

Legion Commander Visits Chicago

HEADS OF LEGION AND G. A. R. ARE GUESTS OF VETS

Soldiers of Civil War Greet Commander Foster.

The national commanders of two groups of American ex-soldiers—Maj. E. L. Bodenhamer of the American Legion and Commander in Chief Edwin J. Foster of the Grand Army of the Republic—spoke in Chicago last night at meetings of their respective organizations.

Maj. Bodenhamer was guest of honor at a dinner dance in the Hotel Sherman given by the Cook county council of the Legion. Commander Foster spoke before a scant two score of his aging comrades at Memorial hall in the Chicago public library, where the department of Illinois had arranged a reception for him. The commander is 80, but a young man in the ranks of his organization, as he told the group last night.

Speaks of Thinning Ranks.

"We're going pretty fast, boys," he said, as he stood before the rows of half-filled benches in the hall. "An average of 100 old soldiers and soldiers' widows are dying every day and there aren't more than 50,000 of us left. We were more than 2,000,000 strong when we organized."

Commander Foster is on a tour of inspection of Grand Army posts which will take him over most of the middle western states before he returns to his home in Worcester, Mass. Commander Henry B. Davidson of Springfield, the state head, and a number of others made short speeches of welcome. A dozen of them dined with the commander in the Hotel Sherman before the reception.

Maj. Bodenhamer spoke to the banquet meeting and devoted himself to the need of hospitalization of disabled war veterans, a primary plank in the Legion platform.

"In view of the unfair neglect of the disabled, and in view of the fact that it is poor economy for the government to wait until an acute situation confronts it," he said, "the Legion favors a hospital policy which contemplates a government agency to anticipate the need, in order that a man can get just and fair care in time, perhaps, to give him a fighting chance for recovery."

"Last fall at the national convention in Louisville it was conservatively estimated by experts that there was an urgent need at that time for 9,000 beds, and that the increase in the cases of the mentally sick alone is 600 per month. In December congress passed a hospital construction bill which will provide, perhaps in two years, for about half the number needed, or 4,500 beds. This leaves the same number unprovided for and it is our hope that some piece of legislation to care for these men will be passed."

TRIBUNE EMPLOYE WINS AWARD FOR PRINTING DEVICE

From now on newspaper readers will have less occasion to ponder over such baffling confusion as this in the news columns: "Teh beautiflu co-de wsa arrestde for pseednig§%$ Etaoinshrdlu." For S. J. Sennett, chief linotype engineer for THE TRIBUNE, has invented a device which reduces transposition of letters in the linotyping process 70 per cent.

Mr. Sennett yesterday returned from the newspaper mechanics convention at West Baden, Ind., with half the prize money for the best mechanical device for improving the manufacture of a newspaper. The other half of the $2,500 prize went to a New York printer for a device used to improve the system of counting newspapers.

The prize was offered recently by the New York Sun.

Newark, O., June 7.—(AP)—Sir Josiah Stamp, English railroad magnate, and Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, today planted trees in the Dawes arboretum, six miles south of here.

The arboretum, owned by Beman G. Dawes, brother of Ambassador Charles G. Dawes, was established a number of years ago, and it has been Dawes' ambition to have all prominent leaders in industry and government plant trees in the huge plot.

Sir Josiah brought the tree planted today from his estate in England.

JIM REED TELLS WHAT HE THINKS WRONG AND WHY

Spares Neither G. O. P. Nor Prohibition.

Sedalia, Mo., June 7.—[Special.]—James A. Reed, former United States senator from Missouri, in a speech bristling with condemnation of President Hoover, an onslaught on prohibition, and tariff, and even the national Democratic organizations, stood before thousands of Missouri Democrats tonight and delivered what many consider to be a bid for the 1932 Democratic presidential nomination.

He addressed an overflowing crowd which came from all sections of Missouri to pack the live stock stations at the state fair grounds here. His speech was broadcast over a nation-wide radio hook up. It was a climax to an all day rally and barbecue.

Attacks Results of Prohibition.

Reed sent blow after blow against the Anti-Saloon league, which he termed an adjunct to the Republican party. He also delivered several thrusts at the prohibitory law and Bishop James Cannon Jr.

"They told us," he shouted, "that under prohibition crime would cease. Instead it sweeps the country in a crimson flood. They told us the doors of jails would be barred by spiders' webs and habited by solitary bats. The constant clanging of prison doors registers the endless procession of felons who come to crowd the cells.

"They told us temptation would be removed from the youth. Now millions of boys and girls drink hootch from the same bottle, poisoned by the government or made by 10,000 illicit stills. They promised us a millennium of virtue. They have given us a saturnalia of vice."

He turned his fire on the national Democratic organization and pleaded that the party of Jefferson should make no compromise with temporary expediency at the expense of party principles.

"Even a national convention," he said, "reduced by the hope of temporary victory into the approval of false doctrines and make-shift expedients cannot permanently destroy the fundamentals which today, as in the past, are the soul of the Democratic party."

Rakes Hoover Administration.

Reed denounced the Hoover administration, claiming it supported monopolies in business "under tariff politicians," scored the "radio trusts" and denounced the encroachment of chain stores. He ridiculed the administration's farm relief policies and said the unemployment situation of today and the business situation were attributable, at least in part, to unsound policies fostered by the President.

He denounced the proposed tariff bill as "atrocious beyond belief—nothing more or less than robbery under the forms of law."

He ridiculed Hoover as "a President whose achievements can be written in ciphers." He referred to the President's cabinet as "the weakest body ever assembled around a presidential council table."

"I do not presume to speak for the Democrats or the national party," he said. "I only ask the privilege of speaking to them."

Blames Stock Crash to G. O. P.

Republicans have "prostituted the great federal reserve system to the service of the greatest gambling hell ever organized on this earth," Reed charged, and continued:

"It has been made the tool of the managers and speculators of the stock exchange. The money of the country was by high interest premiums withdrawn from legitimate business and poured into the insatiate maw to give rotten stocks fictitious values and unload them upon millions of victims. The unloading process being accomplished, credits were suddenly withdrawn, prices shattered, and the plucking process completed."

"The speaker declared that "for fifty years the Republican party has been the tool of the manufacturing and capitalistic interests."

"It has built a tariff wall high, hog tight and bull-strong," he said, "thus forcing the consumer to purchase almost exclusively from domestic manufacturers, thus permitting these concerns to consolidate as monopolies and to extort conscienceless prices. Thus, by law and monopoly, a forced tribute has been laid on every man, woman and child. Competition everywhere is destroyed.

Great corporations have been organized to establish chain stores, and by unfair competition and unjust devices to put out of business thousands of independent grocers, butchers, and tailors. Today thousands of formerly independent merchants are walking the streets in search of employment."

Warns of Radio Trust.

The former senator turned to the "radio trust."

"It is impossible by any metaphors yet devised to picture that combination which seeks to dominate and throttle the spiritual and intellectual life of the world," he asserted. "It would seem that human cupidity could not reach so far or human insolence become so gross as to attempt to control and monopolize the very atmosphere we breathe, and yet that is exactly what a group of great capitalists are attempting through the organization of huge monopoly."

Reed charged that the radio is in control of the Radio Corporation of America, "its monopoly resting on three or four patents." This monopoly has combined with the Marconi and other companies so as to be able to control wireless telegraphy, he alleged.

"Thus," he continued, "this infamous combination proposes to control the empire of the air and to permit its enjoyment and use only by those who pay its tribute. Let me tell every man who loves freedom of speech to remember that freedom of speech amounts to little unless there is freedom of communication."

A frank invitation to the Democrats to nominate Reed for President in 1932 was made by John T. Barker, city counsellor of Kansas City and former attorney general of Missouri, one of the speakers at the rally.

LIONEL ATWILL.

MRS. MAC ARTHUR AND ATWILL THE ACTOR ARE WED

Both Divorced Twice in Past.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 7.—[Special.]—Lionel Atwill, the actor, and Mrs. Douglas MacArthur, daughter of Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury of this city, were married this afternoon at Rainbow Hill, the MacArthur home in Eggleston, Md. The Rev. Edgar G. Powers performed the ceremony.

The wedding was attended by a few friends and members of the bride's family. She has two brothers, Oliver Eaton Cromwell and James H. Cromwell. After a reception, the couple left for a wedding trip on their new yacht, which lay in readiness off one of the piers of the Maryland Yacht club.

Both Divorced Twice.

The application for a marriage license gave Mr. Atwill's age at 45 and Mrs. MacArthur's as 36 and stated that both had been divorced.

The actor's first wife was Phyllis Relp and his second was Elsie Mackey. The latter appeared in several productions with him and they were divorced in 1928.

The bride, who was the former Miss Louise C. Cromwell, was married in 1911 to Capt. Walter B. Brooks Jr. of Baltimore, from whom she was divorced in 1920. It was not known that she had obtained the divorce until after Brooks, who had been serving with the American army of occupation in Coblenz, surprised society by announcing his secret marriage to Miss Marian Lloyd Rice of Albany, at Baltimore on Aug. 26, 1920.

Weds Army General.

Two years later the former Miss Cromwell became the wife of Brig. Gen. Douglas MacArthur at a brilliant wedding in the Stotesbury residence at Palm Beach and the couple left shortly after for three years in the Philippines.

Last June Mrs. MacArthur obtained a divorce in Reno on the same grounds on which she had gained her first divorce, namely, incompatibility.

Mr. Atwill, who was born in Croydon, England, came to this country in 1915. He has appeared in many plays here, including "The King Can Do No Wrong," in 1928, and "Fioretta," in 1929, and also has been a producer.

ZEP TRIP SOLVES PROBLEMS; OCEAN SERVICE POSSIBLE

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, June 7.—[U. P.]—Trans-oceanic commercial service with airships can begin forthwith as a result of the technical observations made on the Graf Zeppelin's tour of three continents, Dr. Hugo Eckener said today. The Zeppelin's tour clarified many problems of trans-oceanic flying which previously had been unsolved, Dr. Eckener said. Hence commercial routes could be opened at once.

Commencement Week Gets Under Way at DePauw

Greencastle, Ind., June 7.—[U. P.]—Alumni chapel at Depauw university today opened the program of commencement week, during which hundreds of graduates and former students will return to the campus. Freeport, Ill., June 7.—(AP)—Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward today ruled that prohibition agents had no right to invade a home unless armed with a search warrant. Philip Griebe, East Dubuque, Ill., contended agents had raided his home without a warrant in violation of his constitutional rights. The court upheld him.

Gangsters' Girl Forfeits Bond on Theft Charges

Margaret Hamilton, 24 years old, known as Peggy Collins, the jinx girl of gangland, companion of five gangsters who were slain, forfeited bonds of $6,000 yesterday when she failed to appear in Judge Joseph Schulman's court to answer two charges of shoplifting. A capias was issued for her arrest. The Hamilton woman was arrested in her rooms at 40 East Oak street on Tuesday night on two fugitive warrants charging shoplifting in Cincinnati, where she was known as Anne Burke.

HIDES IDENTITY TO AID MOTHER'S SUIT; IS JAILED

Sentenced to 20 Days for Contempt.

Harry Parker, a chauffeur, was sentenced to twenty days in the county jail for contempt yesterday by Judge Hayes in the Superior court for giving perjured testimony. Parker was a witness in the $50,000 damage suit brought against the Bijou Academy theater, 16 South Halsted street, by his mother, Mrs. Anna Parker, 70 years old, 3414 Warren avenue. He was taken to the county jail at once.

Mrs. Parker was seeking damages for injuries received on Oct. 21, 1928, when she fell in the theater and broke her left leg. She testified that a defective seat caused the fall and that she has been crippled permanently. Witnesses supported her claim.

Denies Sister's Story.

The last witness gave his name as Harry Ryan. He said he witnessed the accident with his wife, Mrs. Mary Konkel Ryan. Both said that they had helped carry Mrs. Parker from the theater. Ryan testified that he had never seen Mrs. Parker previous to the accident.

Attorney John Bloomingston called John Konkol, 2141 Superior street, for the defense. Konkol testified that Mrs. Ryan is his sister and that her husband has been dead several years. He declared that the witness Ryan is Harry Parker, the son of Mrs. Parker.

Parker was recalled by Attorney Stuart Krohn. He said he faked the testimony without knowledge of his mother's lawyer. He said that he was passing the theater as his mother was carried out and changed his name because he believed that a jury would not credit his testimony if it were known that he was Mrs. Parker's son. Mrs. Ryan fled the courtroom.

Mother Pleads for Son.

Mrs. Parker pleaded for her son. He attempted to absolve himself by stating that he would not benefit by the testimony.

The judge instructed the jury to return a verdict of not guilty in the damage suit. The mother can bring a new suit.

"Your conduct was without reason," the judge declared. "It was entirely unnecessary because your mother had a case. The court cannot allow such a flagrant violation of law to pass unnoticed."

Judge Denies New Trial in Life Insurance Case

Superior Judge David yesterday denied a motion for a new trial asked by the Inter-State Men's Insurance company of Des Moines, Ia., against which Mrs. Orpha Anderson of Detroit won a jury verdict of $7,656 on a life insurance policy of her husband, Ralph. Anderson disappeared from a boat in Lake Michigan in 1919. The insurance company contended that Anderson is still living. Attorney Benjamin Bachrach announced that he will appeal to the Supreme court, citing among 31 objections the fact that Judge David had referred to Mrs. Anderson as "the widow."

LABOR BOARDS JOIN CAMPAIGN FOR CAR PLAN

More Business Groups Vote Approval.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Twenty civic, business and labor organizations have indorsed the proposed indeterminate transit franchise, which will go to a referendum on July 1. The names of eight of these organizations were announced yesterday by Ald. J. B. McDonough, chairman of the nonpartisan committee favoring the ordinance. They are:

Building Trades council.

Cook County Wage Earners league.

Stony Island Business Men's association.

Foreign Language Newspapers association.

Ninety-fifth Street Business men's association.

Chatham Chamber of Commerce.

Fullerton Avenue Business Men's association.

Dorchester-Brookdale Improvement association.

Twelve Previous Indorsements.

Favorable expressions, previously received were from the following: The Chicago Association of Commerce, Chicago Real Estate board, directors of the West Town Chamber of Commerce, North Town Kiwanis club, Birchwood District Improvement association, Peterson Woods Improvement association, North Town Business Men's association, Lincoln Square Commercial association, West Rogers Park Business Men's association, West Ridge Improvement association, Arcadia Terrace Protective association, and Peterson Woods-Arcadia Terrace association.

The only organization with a citywide membership which has announce its opposition to the ordinance is the Cook County Real Estate board. Eighteen members of that organization revolted yesterday against the board's action. They filed a petition with the secretary which "requests and demands" a special members meeting of the board on June 27.

Plan New Vote by Board.

"At that meeting," says the petition, "one of the undersigned will present a motion to rescind the entire resolution adopted at a special members meeting held May 27, wherein the wording places the Cook County Real Estate board on record as opposing the transit ordinance."

It further says that at the meeting one of the petitioners "will present a resolution favoring the success of the transit ordinance."

The protesters are L. A. Werner, Harry M. Nichols & Co., H. H. Bowland & Co., C. H. Adams & Co., C. E. Whitehead, William C. Bender & Co., Carl M. Pedersen, Elizabeth Metcalf, Arthur M. Dymess, Jens C. Hansen, Robert J. Bulett, Frank A. Mulholland, Perry Wilson & Co., M. James Flynn, Ryan, Colgan & Co., Walter Larson, Frank Murnighan and S. Rogers Touhy. Messrs. Mulholland and Flynn are members of the McDonough nonpartisan committee.

Labor Groups O. K. Ordinance.

The building trades council, of whose 125,000 members a large percentage are out of work, unanimously adopted a resolution commending the ordinance. The resolution was signed by all the officers of the council, including Patrick F. Sullivan, president; Martin J. Durkin, vice president, and J. J. Conroy, secretary.

The preamble of the resolution says that "members of the building crafts unions, the nature of whose work requires them to make daily use of the street and elevated lines, are vitally interested in the proposed development of our transit facilities."

"We believe," the preamble goes on, "that the settlement will do much toward restoring activity in the building industry, because the ordinance requires the new consolidated company to spend not less than $200,000,000 in the next 10 years—at least $65,000,000 of which must be spent in the next three years—while the city agrees to spend approximately $100,000,000 in subway construction during the same period.

Work for Building Trades.

"Experience has shown that new factories, apartment buildings, stores, and dwellings spring up along every new transportation line, thus creating work for the building mechanics for years to come."

The resolution proper says that the council "indorses the ordinance and urges the members of the affiliated unions and the voting members of their families to go to the polls on July 1 and vote 'Yes' on this ordinance, which means so much to our unions and to all the people of Chicago."

Wage Earners League Approves.

The approval of the Wage Earners league came at a meeting of its executive committee yesterday at the league headquarters, 130 North Wells street. Michael J. Kelly, head of the organization, said that a series of labor meetings will be held to promote the success of the ordinance, starting June 16.

"For several decades," said Mr. Kelly, "there has been an apparent well meaning opposition, voiced by a minority against any improved transit facilities. With them this has become an obsession, and yet this recalcitrant faction has yet to offer a solution to the thousands who hang on the straps daily. Some improvement must be made.

Tells Plans for Meeting.

"The Wage Earners' league is cooperating with the Building Trades council and many of the largest trade unions of the city in support of the ordinance. The meeting on June 16 will be addressed by Ald. O. F. Nelson, Patrick F. Sullivan of the building trades, Jerry Horn of the Flat Janitors' union, Arthur Wallace, secretary of the Painters' District council; John Stretch, president of the bricklayers; William B. McFetridge of the School Janitors' union, and William J. Rooney of the sheet metal workers.

The Foreign Language Newspaper association, in its resolution, pledged itself to do all in its power for the ordinance.

Paul McBride, son of Mrs. Walter McBride of 33 Bellevue place, was solemnized quietly at 5 p. m. yesterday at the Lake Forest residence of the bride's parents. Mrs. Laflin wore a flowered chiffon frock and a natural color straw hat and carried a bouquet of white iris. There were no attendants and only members of the families were present. Mr. and Mrs. McBride are to spend their honeymoon in the orient.

2 WOMEN AID IN ROBBING OF NEW YORK BANK

New York, June 7.—[Special.]—Two gangs of bandits, operating at almost the same time, raided banks in Queensborough and in Newark, N. J., this morning and got away with approximately $35,000 in cash.

About 9 o'clock three men and two women, all armed, wearing gas masks and carrying what appeared to be tear bombs, invaded the Richmond Hill National bank in Queens, shackled four employés, and fled in an automobile with $19,000 in cash.

Less than thirty minutes later four dapper young men, flourishing revolvers, left a fifth man at the wheel of a car outside, entered, and held up the Clinton avenue branch of the South Side National Bank and Trust company in Newark, forced five employés and three customers into a corner, scooped up $15,000 from a teller's cage, and escaped in their car.

GETS 18 YEARS FOR MURDER.

Westminster, Md., June 7.—(AP)—Paul W. Edwards, convicted of the poison murder of his aged foster father, William T. Keefer, was under sentence of 18 years in the penitentiary today, the maximum for second degree murder, of which he was found guilty two weeks ago.

MILLS SAYS CAR BILL PUTS CITY AT LINES' MERCY

Attacks Argument That It Will Aid Jobless.

BY JOHN MAYNARD HARLAN.

[Former attorney for the Lisman plan and now attorney for another competing car franchise proposal, who in the subjoined article replies to the arguments of Walter L. Fisher for the transit franchise.]

Walter L. Fisher says that the Chicago Metropolitan Transit company represented by me is a "paper corporation." He evidently finds it necessary to excuse himself for having advised the local transportation committee of the city council not even to consider the ordinance presented by me for that company providing for a forty year grant.

Now let us take a look at the Chicago Local Transportation company, to which under the dominating influence of Mr. Fisher the city council has granted a so-called terminable permit, which, because terminable only under impossible conditions, is in fact a perpetual grant. The Chicago Local Transportation company was organized on May 7, 1930, through the law firm of Isham, Lincoln & Beale, Mr. Insull's chief counsel, with a capital stock consisting of thirty shares of no par value.

Names Three Incorporators.

The incorporators were Frederick D. Hoffman, Otto Gressens and Louis J. Dixon and each subscribed for ten shares of the no par stock. If either of the incorporators is a man of significance in the financial world I am not aware of the fact. No banker or capitalist has undertaken to vouch for the financial responsibility of that corporation. No showing whatever was made or demanded as to its financial responsibility or potentialities. If that is not a paper corporation, then I would like to know what Mr. Fisher would call it.

Now take a look at the Chicago Metropolitan Transit company. It was incorporatted on Feb. 18, 1930, the incorporators being juniors in the well known office of Chapman & Cutler. It is backed by Chicago capital and the men interested naturally were unwilling to have their names disclosed as seeking a duel with Mr. Insull and his associates until and unless the city council by placing their ordinance on the ballot would give opportunity to the voters to choose as between a forty year grant and a perpetual grant. But they offered through me to deposit forthwith with the Chicago Title and Trust company an amount in cash and listed securities which, taking the securities at their market value, would aggregate one million dollars.

Offers Deposit as Guarantee.

That deposit was to be made as a guarantee that the guaranty fund provided for in the proposed forty year grant would be established before or at the effective date of the ordinance. A corporation that is ready to lay down one million dollars as a guaranty of good faith and ability to perform is not a paper corporation, and Mr. Fisher cannot belittle it by so calling it.

The Chicago Title and Trust company declined to accept the deposit, as did also all other important trust companies in the loop, each one assigning as a reason for its refusal that its acceptance of the escrow would be inconsistent with its already established relations to the transit interests. I hold written evidence of what I have just stated as to the efforts made to induce acceptance of the deposit.

Quotes Fisher's Statement.

Mr. Fisher in his official statement says: "The representatives of the existing transit companies positively refused to deal with the city on any other basis" than that of a terminable permit. Perhaps if he had welcomed the proposal of the Chicago Metropolitan Transit company as one deserving consideration the outcome of even that degree of competition might have been that the existing companies would have abandoned the attempt to procure a perpetual grant and would have expressed willingness to accept a forty year grant.

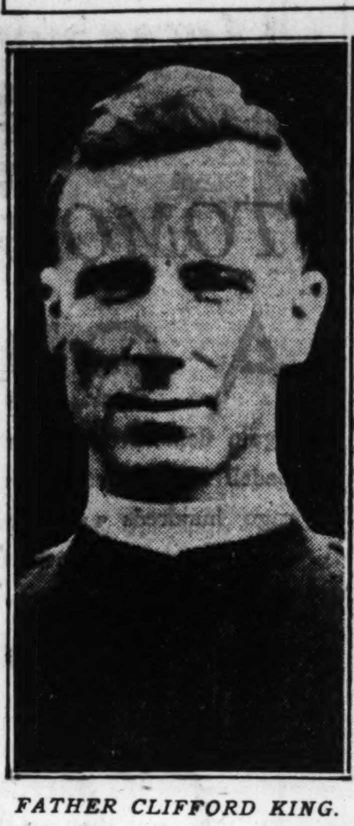
If Mr. Fisher had wished to give the public, the city, and the car riders the full benefit of competition he would have advised action under the Guernsey resolution providing for competition between all applicants for franchises whether so-called terminable permits or for a fixed term of years. That resolution, passed unanimously by the city council on Jan. 18, 1930, requested the local transportation committee to give notice requiring the prompt submission of all applications for terminable permits or term grants.

"Steam Roller" Charged.

Suggestions by the committee for changes in the terms of the resolution were readily accepted by Ald. Guernsey and the resolution recast accordingly, but Mr. Fisher's great influence, which might have brought about serious consideration of that resolution, was withheld and the steam roller was kept moving all the time behind closed doors and went merrily on its journey through the committee and through the council until now it is up to the people to say "Yes" or "No" to the question whether they will surrender forever the control of the city's streets to a private corporation.

I don't think the people will ever approve that proposition and I would like to hear Mr. Fisher's potent voice raised against it even at this late date.

CAPTIVE IN CHINA



FATHER CLIFFORD KING.

HANKOW, China, June 7.—(AP)—Father Clifford King, captured by bandits a week ago at the Catholic mission at Sinyangchow, 100 miles north of here, is still being held prisoner, it was learned today.

The outlaws demand a supply of arms and ammunition before releasing him from a village 20 miles west of Sinyangchow. Ransom money is not demanded.

Father Bruno Hagspiel, provincial superior at the Society of the Divine Word at Techny, Ill., yesterday said Father King was born in 1888 in Mineville, N. Y., and that his mother and other members of his family now live at Denver. Father King achieved note in the United States as the founder of the Catholic Students Mission Crusade. He was educated at Techny, where he also took his religious orders. He left there in 1919, going to Yen Chow Fu in the province of Shantung, China, where he was ordained.

32 SOLDIERS DIE IN BRAZIL; SHOT DOWN IN AMBUSH

RIO DE JANEIRO, June 7.—[U. P.]—Thirty-two soldiers were dead today and there was a probability at least 50 others had drowned during an ambuscade at Agua Branca, where Parahyba state militiamen encountered a band of guerrillas two days ago.

The casualties were reported in Pernambuco dispatches, which said 80 guerrillas, headed by "Capt." Luiz Traingulo, ambushed the militiamen, shooting them down as they rode by in 12 trucks.

Sixteen of the soldiers reached Espirito Santo, state of Pernambuco, the reports said. The reinforcements were en route to aid Capt. Joao Costa in a planned attack by government forces on the town of Princeza, guerrilla stronghold.

PROVIDE PARKING FOR 33,000 CARS AT U. S. AIR RACES

Radio and Blimp to Help in Traffic Control.

BY HAL FOUST.

An observation blimp, low wave radio communication, and 368 policemen, soldiers and sailors are included in the tentative plans for automobile traffic control at the national air races, Aug. 24 to Sept. 1, at the Curtiss air port. Daily attendance is expected to run as high as 125,000.

From the air, traffic experts will watch the progress of automobiles on the nearby roads and on the parking lots. Radio communication with strategic intersections on land will dispatch motorcycle policemen or cavalrymen to the rescue of stalled cars. By radio likewise, automobile can be routed to avoid congestion spots as they develop.

Parking for 33,000 Cars.

Parking facilities are provided for 33,000 cars on lots immediately to the north, to the west and to the south of the air port. President Cermak of the county board has agreed to widen the approaches to these lots so that parking will be expeditious.

The Curtiss field, lying between the Milwaukee road and the Waukegan road, north of the Glenview road, can be reached by automobile from six directions. This makes the handling of the large crowds almost entirely a matter of control.

Five of these approaches, on Lake avenue, Shermer road and Lehigh road, will handle one-way traffic during the rush hours. Cars will be parked on the side of the airport from which it is approached. When the crowd disbands, the direction of the one-way drives will be reversed and automobiles will leave the races over the same road on which they arrived. All of this movement will be controlled by radio communication from the air observation, according to the tentative plan.

For Public Conveyances.

The sixth approach, from the east on Willow road, will be kept clear for bus and taxi shuttle service between the races and special trains. It would also be used as an emergency exit when traffic on all five of the other routes would be inbound.

The surface condition of these roads at present is not the best. They are of gravel and stone construction. The county has volunteered to smooth the surface and treat it with calcium chloride to eliminate dust. The county, and the state also, has further promised that the routes to the airport will be kept clear of detours during the races.

This week, a meeting will be called for adoption of the traffic control plan for the races. The army, the navy, the state, the county, and Chicago and other municipalities will be represented and the railroads, taxicab companies, bus companies, and motor clubs will send their experts. The cooperation of all agencies of travel is sought.

MAN THOUGHT DEAD IN AUTO MYSTERY PROVES HE IS ALIVE

Freeport, N. Y., June 7.—(AP)—C. C. Ridenhour, former Mobile, Ala., man and acquaintance of H. H. Schroeder, effectually proved today that it was not he whose burned body was found in Schroeder's automobile at Indianapolis last week.

He was unable, however, to throw any light on the disappearance of Schroeder, whom he said he had not seen for a year or more.

When a charred corpse was found in Schroeders burned automobile on the morning of May 31 it was first believed to be Schroeder's body, but later it was thought the corpse was that of another man. Schroeder cannot be found.

MANIAC KILLS HIS OLD MOTHER, THEN HIMSELF

Kenney, Ill., June 7.—(AP)—The tragic career of Frank Riley, 49, was over today. He had lost his wife, gone insane and improved, only to learn that his four young children had burned to death in his home while he was in insane asylum. He escaped three times in three years. Yesterday was the third time, and he climaxed that freedom by beating his 80 year old mother to death with an ax and cutting his own throat with two razors. A coroner's inquest today disclosed these facts.

AUTO GAS KILLS MECHANIC.

Frank Anderson, 38 years old, a mechanic, was found dead in his garage in the rear of 6443 South Union avenue yesterday and police ascribed his death to carbon monoxide.

CONGRESS HOPES TO ADJOURN IN 2 MORE WEEKS

Washington, D. C., June 7.—(AP)—Congressional leaders have set June 20 as their adjournment goal.

In the house this is regarded as a comparatively simple task once the tariff bill is out of the way, but several matters are pressing for attention in the senate which might twist askew the plans for ending the session.

A veterans measure holds the possibility for another tangle between congress and the President.

It is confidently expected at the capitol that the long pending tariff measure will be sent to the President within ten days and possibly next week.

RIOTERS ATTACK POLICE IN INDIA; TWO ARE KILLED

Fire on Mob of 1,500 in Clash Near Calcutta.

BOMBAY, June 7.—(AP)—News of a serious riot in Gheehngat, a village in the Daspur district of Midnapore, has reached here. Two police sub-inspectors and four constables were attacked and injured by villagers. One sub-inspector is reported since to have died and the other is missing. The constables were deprived of their arms, ammunition and uniforms.

Another serious incident was reported to have taken place yesterday at Balislai, in the same district. Fifteen hundred volunteers assembled to manufacture contraband salt and 17 were injured when the police fired after a charge with their sticks.

As a result of the disorders the inspector-general of Bengal police left for Midnapore tonight with reinforcements.

Name New "War Council."

The Bombay congress committee met in secret session today and appointed a new "war council" to carry on the civil disobedience campaign of the Nationalists. Eight leaders were arrested yesterday.

The general court martial of 17 soldiers of the second batallion, 18th Royal Rifles, ended today at Abbotabad and the court will send its recommendation to the officer in charge of the northern command for final disposition. The native soldiers were charged with mutiny in refusing to obey orders during the disturbance at Peshawar some time ago.

British airplanes loaded with bombs have driven from their caves the wild Afridi tribesmen who for a month have been menacing the strategic city of Peshawar on the northwestern frontier of India.

Eighty airplanes have participated in the attacks and have dropped 5,000 bombs. British troops made a thorough search of the area southwest of Peshawar today and found that the hill warriors had withdrawn.

Europeans were cheered today by the news that two British officers and the wife of one of them had been released by raiders, who carried them into Afghanistan Wednesday. Those kidnaped were Maj. E. L. Farley, Capt. J. C. Frere and Mrs. Frere. They were held across the border by Achakzai tribesmen after being removed from their motor cars, but were treated considerately. Their release was obtained by a chieftain of the Indian side of the border.

India Legislators Quit.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BOMBAY, June 7.—The civil disobedience campaign is entering a new phase with a tendency for the Indians to withdraw wholly from the legislative and provincial assemblies, thus assuring virtually no opposition to Viceroy Lord Irwin's program for the session at Simla next month.

On the other hand, the government is ordering stronger laws and emergency ordinances against the violators as the non-payment of taxes is rapidly overshadowing the salt campaign.

Picket British Owned Movies.

Picketing of foreign shops is extending throughout India. In the larger cities the picketers are being arrested for obstructing traffic. Even British owned movie theaters are picketed.

A homespun famine exists in many regions, but the leaders are advising natives to go about with only loin cloths rather than wear foreign material.

REPORT RUSSIAN OFFICIALS FLEE SIBERIAN REVOLT

Train Is Blown Up on Chinese Border.

BY JOHN POWELL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, China, June 7.—An official government dispatch from Harbin, Manchuria, reports that a Harbin bound freight train from Vladivostok was blown up by revolting soviet peasants and laborers at a station a few miles east of Pogranichinaya, on the Chinese-Russian border.

Due to soviet censorship at the border, details are not available, but another message said that all soviet government officials as well as soviet communist party officials at Khabarovsk were forced to flee and that the city is in the hands of the peasant workers' committee.

The North China Daily News, British paper here, today published a long review of the recent Siberian developments, stating that while Vladivostok is still held by the soviet red army, the whole of eastern Siberia is seething with rebellion and that there were three recent instances where sections of the red army, including Chinese and Corean communist divisions, had gone over to the rebels, who are said to have proclaimed war against the soviet government and the third internationale.

The review said the rebellion started when several thousand miners at the Suchan mines, using primitive weapons and home made ammunition, drove the red army and cheka police out of the district and cut the railway connecting the mines with Vladivostok.

Charges Reds Mobilize.

The article alleged that the soviet government was mobilizing so-called international units, composed of Magyars, Letts, and dependable cheka troops, equipped with airplanes, tanks, and gas bombs, in an effort to suppress the uprisings.

The article concludes, "Further events in the Siberian drama are likely to occur shortly."

Army Awaits Rebel Advance.

HANKOW, China, June 7.—(AP)—Nationalist government troops and Kwangsi province rebels were expected tonight to fight a decisive battle at Yochow within a day or two. The result would have an important bearing on the drive of the rebels toward Hankow, Wuchang, and Hanyang, 175 miles down the Yangtse river from Yochow.

The Nationalist military headquarters stated 40,000 Nationalist troops had concentrated at Yochow, Hunan province, and dug in, awaiting the arrival of the invading Kwangsi forces. The military tightened the government's precautionary measures around the Hankow-Wuchang-Hanyang area and declared martial law in those cities. Nationalist troops patrolled the streets.

Advices from Changsha said the city was quiet after its occupation by the Kwangsi rebels. Fifty thousand of them began moving northward today in three columns, one against Kiukiang, Yangtse river port in Kiangsi province; another directly toward Yochow, and a third toward Shasi, upriver from Hankow.

KINGSFORD-SMITH DELAYS START OF OCEAN HOP TO U. S.

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, June 6. (AP)—Capt. Charles Kingsford Smith and his three comrades of the air tonight deferred their proposed flight to America and flew back to Baldonnel airdrome from Curragh camp to await suitable weather for the takeoff.

The flight had been set to start at dawn tomorrow [Sunday] but weather reports from London dashed the hopes of the Australian air pioneer who in 1928, spanned the Pacific ocean in the "Southern Cross," the same plane in which he intends to try to fly the Atlantic.

The weather forecast that blighted his hopes for tomorrow was for uncertain conditions over the Atlantic, with a 40 to 50 mile west or southwest wind.

The first week of the GREAT READJUSTMENT SALE has shown us that we were right, and that we knew what the public wanted. In fact the past week has made us think that, instead of letting men out and adding to the unemployment, our force of salespeople and clerks should be augmented. The many comments of customers and friends about the ideas expressed in the first editorial were received with great pleasure by every member of the organization, and answering many questions, the READJUSTMENT SALE will continue until such time as conditions warrant a more normal business.

It is indeed gratifying to know that the people of Chicago appreciate the efforts that are being made to readjust conditions in order that true prosperity may again be an accepted fact. We expect the same eager response this second week, so come early and be prepared to buy.

NYE TO FINISH CAMPAIGN FUND QUIZ BY JULY 15

Hopes to Start Illinois Hearings on June 27.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Senator Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota, chairman of the committee investigating senatorial campaign expenses, announced in Chicago yesterday that he will close hearings on the expenditures in the McCormick-Deneen campaign in Illinois by July 15.

"We hope to complete our inquiry into the primary campaign sufficiently in advance of the election campaign to prevent our hearings being considered in any way a part of the contest," he said.

"We are planning to open our hearings in Chicago the latter part of this month, say about June 27. If that is not possible we shall start in immediately after July 4 and try to finish by the middle of the month."

Hears Reports on Inquiry.

Senator Nye, who is on his way to take part in the North Dakota campaign this week, came from Washington yesterday with the secretary of the committee, John Andrews, a St. Paul newspaper man. Together they spent several hours receiving reports from committee employés and assigning them to new tasks.

Speaking of these reports, Mr. Nye said that an effort has been made to shorten the examination of witnesses as much as possible by advance inquiries intended to reduce to a minimum the number of questions put to the persons summoned before the committee. He explained that the committee hopes to know in advance exactly what information it wants from each witness when he takes the stand.

"But there probably will be a large number of witnesses," he said, "as the investigation is an extensive one.

Audit of Accounts Ready.

"The audit of the accounts submitted by Senator Deneen and Mrs. McCormick has been made although the report is not before us formally. Two independent organizations that supported Mrs. McCormick, the Ruth Hanna McCormick volunteers and the Progressive Voters' league, also have books that are to be audited."

In reply to a question, Senator Nye denied that the committee had learned of the omission of an item of $15,000 or any other amount from Mrs. McCormick's statement. A report that such a discovery had been made was published in Chicago on Friday.

During his last visit to Chicago, Mr. Nye announced that a Chicago concern of auditors had been retained to go over the McCormick and Deneen books, but he declined to make public its name. Yesterday he confirmed reports that the work is being done by the Bemis company.

Lloyd Bemis Directs Audit.

He gave the name of Lloyd E. Bemis as that of the auditor in charge. Mr. Bemis is the son of Prof. E. W. Bemis, who was brought to Chicago as a utility expert by former Mayor Carter H. Harrison and the late Herman J. Bauler, then an alderman, to back up their "70 cent gas" fight in 1911. Prof. Bemis also has served the city in other utility rate matters. Lloyd Bemis' mother was formerly a member of the county board. She is a Democrat and the family is considered Democratic.

Senator Nye said the audit included the records of Roy O. West, Republican national committeeman, insofar as they concerned his part in the Deneen campaign, and the books of Thomas J. Healy as treasurer of the Deneen local organization.

HOHENZOLLERNS GO TO DOORN FOR SILVER WEDDING

Ex-Crown Prince Greets Wife at Port.

DOORN, June 7.—(AP)—A dozen or more strangers, with their children, today came to Doorn and made their way to an old estate on the edge of this quaint Dutch village.

They wore no court regalia or military trappings, yet they comprised the remaining members of the house of Hohenzollern and formed the most notable gathering of that historic line since the brilliant pre-war days of Potsdam's splendor.

They came to celebrate with the former kaiser and war lord of Germany the silver wedding jubilee of his son, the erstwhile Friedrich Wilhelm, crown prince of Germany, and his wife, Cecelie.

Hohenzollerns Arrive Early.

In the group were heads of the house of Mecklenburg, whose line dates back beyond its conquest by the Germans in 1160, as well as the later Hohenzollerns, who ruled Brandenburg in 1415 and all Germany until the red days of 1918, when the empire crumbled in revolution.

Many guests at the anniversary celebration had preceded the former crown prince and princess. They included Prince Adalbert, the duke and duchess of Brunswick, the duchess of Hesse, the former kaiser's sister, and the wife of the late Prince Heinrich, the former kaiser's sister-in-law.

Princess Hermine, the former kaiser's wife, came from Germany yesterday and the two princes, Eitel Friedrich and August Wilhelm, will arrive tomorrow. Prince Henry of Reuss went to Hamburg today and thence to Cuxhaven, where the former crown prince and his immediate family greeted his wife, who returned from Argentina on the steamship Cap Norte and where the Nationalist Women's society made a gift to her for the charities in which she is interested.

Nationalists Greet Princess.

Awaiting her also were the felicitations of the Nationalist party in the Prussian diet "in memory of Germany's greatness of twenty-five years ago and in gratitude for what the house of Hohenzollern has done for the fatherland."

The crown prince, after quietly observing the actual anniversary date at Hamburg yesterday, with his wife and two sons, Wilhelm and Hubert, and two daughters, Alexandrine and Cecelie, will join his relatives here.

The Doorn celebration will be of a private nature and will consist of divine service in the chapel of Doorn manor and dinner in Count Bentinck's home.

KILLS GUNMAN IN WILD CHASE; GETS HERO PRIZE

Risks Life to Shoot in Reckless Race.

The murderous career of Rocco Di Rosa was brought to an abrupt end by a police bullet on May 13 after a detective bureau squad had chased him nearly two miles. Because of the bravery displayed by Patrolman Harry W. Fielder, who fired the one shot that killed Di Rosa THE TRIBUNE has awarded him the hero prize of $100 for May.

Fielder risked his life in facing Di Rosa, alias Harry Ross, who was armed with two revolvers. Fielder was in danger also when the gunman swerved his automobile in an effort to wreck the police car.

Race at 60 Miles an Hour.

The squad, led by Sergt. Lawrence Cooney, sighted Di Rosa at Milwaukee and Crawford avenues in a car that they knew had been used in a holdup. Sounding the gong, the squad commanded Di Rosa to halt. The latter drew a gun and sped on. Soon the two machines were roaring north in Milwaukee avenue at a sixty mile an hour pace.

As the squad car closed in at Milwaukee and Byron avenues, Fielder stepped on the running board, and drew his gun. Di Rosa also drew a gun and then, while traveling at a fast speed, swerved toward the squad car.

Fielder fired, killing Di Rosa and the police chauffeur drove up on the sidewalk to avoid the collision. Di Rosa's car grazed the front fender of the police car and hit a telephone pole.

Hunted for Murders.

Di Rosa was sought for the murder of Jeff Wander in a holdup in Wander's roadhouse at Downers Grove and for returning later to murder Edward Karesch, who had identified Di Rosa as the slayer of Wander. He also had been charged with another killing.

In speaking of Fielder's action Deputy Commissioner Stege commended the "extraordinary perseverance and bravery displayed by him in facing danger at the hands of a dangerous criminal." Fielder lives at 4840 Lexington street.

Three other policemen received commendation from their captains for their parts in shooting affrays during May. Policeman John Barton of the Stock Yards station, who jumped from a moving car when he saw Charles Seavers press a gun against the head of his wife near 5619 Wentworth avenue.

As the policeman fired, Mrs. Seavers jumped away. Seavers aimed at Barton and pulled the trigger, but the cartridge failed to explode. The policeman killed him.

When Policeman Richard Hoffman was backing out of his garage at 2719 North Oak Park avenue on the night of May 17 he noticed two men. Hoffman interfered and was pulling the top man off when the man on the ground snapped his trigger twice at the policeman. Hoffman fired. The assailant was identified as Duno St. Pierre, who had been arrested for robbery in 1919.

Policeman Edward Harder of the Stock Yards district on May 21 noticed a man staggering down the street with a gun in his hand. Harder identified himself as a policeman and the man fired. Harder and three other policemen returned the fire killing the bandit.

Turn Sod Today for Winnetka Church Group

Ceremonies of ground breaking for the new $375,000 group of buildings of Christ Episcopal church, Winnetka, will take place following the morning services of the church today. This was announced by the Rev. E. Ashley Gerhard, rector, who will turn the first sod. William V. McIlvane, senior warden, R. Floyd Clinch, junior warden, and E. S. Ballard, acting chairman of the building committee, will take part in the ceremony. The group of buildings includes a parish house, rectory and chapel. The new buildings are to be located in the heart of Winnetka, while the parish church is several blocks away on Sheridan road.

CENSUS SIGNS ROUSE INTEREST IN CITY'S TOTAL

Using the unofficial figure of 3,350,000 as its estimate of Chicago's 1930 population, the Association of Commerce will begin a three day campaign tomorrow to make the citizenry statistic-conscious. The campaign will end Wednesday when the actual total will be announced at a luncheon in the Hotel La Salle.

This 3,350,000 figure has been used by the association as its guess. It may vary 100,000 either way, it is believed. The last official estimate of the bureau of the census set the Chicago figure at 3,157,400 on July 1, 1928.

Randolph to Count Total.

But until the actual count has been announced Wednesday, the association has asked that motor busses, store windows and theaters be placarded with signs carrying the estimate. By a special grant from Washington Col. Robert Isham Randolph, the association's president, will give the total at the luncheon. It would ordinarily be released from Washington.

The announcement will be tinged with suspense. The six census supervisors will each present Col. Randolph with a sealed envelope containing the district total. They will then assist him in adding the figures and he, in turn, will mark the total on a blackboard.

Plan City Celebration.

Then, if present plans prevail, the cheering will be drowned by the shrieking of a symphony of whistles, locomotive, factory, and auto, and the corrected total will straightway be substituted for the estimate. It has been suggested that a large plane, carrying the new figure in illuminated digits, be flown over the city Wednesday evening. The figures given out Wednesday will be subject to revision, which may occupy a fortnight more.

Coincident with these ceremonies the association announced that about 250 neighborhood business organizations will celebrate their local totals. The public schools are expected to present census programs.

COURT CLEARS WAY TO WIDEN LA SALLE STREET

The legal obstacles that have held up the widening and paving of La Salle street between Ohio street and Lincoln park have been removed, according to G. A. Dahlberg, attorney for the board of local improvements. The Supreme court has denied a petition of property owners for a rehearing on their objections. A short time ago the court decided in favor of the city. The board of local improvements now, Dahlberg said, has the power to proceed. The paving proceedings, he said, will be confirmed in court this week.

DEARBORN, MICH., GROWS 1,926.7%; NOW HAS 50,660

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 7.—[Special.]—Dearborn, Mich., in the metropolitan area of Detroit, is the fastest growing city in the central states to date in the 1930 census returns. Between 1920 and 1930, Dearborn increased from 2,470 to 50,660, a gain of 1,926.7 per cent.

The only other city with a gain surpassing Dearborn's is Beverly Hills, Cal., which grew 2,485.8 per cent. The 1930 population of Beverly Hills is 17,428, so Dearborn stands in a class by itself among the larger urban centers. The only other cities, yet recorded with increases over the 1,000 per cent mark are Seminole, Okla., 1,109.8 per cent; Irondequoit, N. Y., 1,007 per cent, and Shaker Heights, O., 1,007 per cent.

Hamtramck Led in 1920.

In the decade prior to 1920 the fastest growing city in the United States was Hamtramck, Mich., with a gain of 1,266 per cent, while Highland Park, Mich., was a runner-up with 1,028 per cent. In the last decade Hamtramck made a gain of 15.7 per cent and Highland Park 14 per cent.

With the 1930 figures missing for only Detroit and Bay City, indications are there will be only one change in the population lineup of the first ten cities in Michigan. That will be the moving up of Jackson into seventh place formerly occupied by Kalamazoo. In 1920 Kalamazoo had 112 more inhabitants than Jackson, but Jackson now leads by 428.

The population figures for the largest Michigan cities, as shown by the preliminary supervisors' counts, and the comparative standings, follow:

Rank			Population
1920.	1930.		1920.	1930.
1	1	Detroit	993,678	....
2	2	Grand Rapids	137,634	168,234
3	3	Flint	91,599	156,422
4	4	Saginaw	61,903	80,409
5	5	Lansing	57,327	59,321
6	6	Hamtramck	48,615	56,283
8	7	Jackson	48,374	54,879
7	8	Kalamazoo	48,487	54,388
9	9	Bay City	47,554	....
10	10	Highland Park	46,499	52,817

Omaha Gains to 214,184.

Omaha, Neb., June 7.—(AP)—The 1930 census gives Omaha a population of 214,184, a gain of 22,583 or 7.1 per cent over 1920.

Guam's Population 18,521.

AGANA, Guam, June 7.—(AP)—The population of the island of Guam, including the United States naval station personnel, was announced today as 18,521.

ASSOCIATED PRESS FIGURES.

The Associated Press in conjunction with the census bureau announced the following figures:

You enjoy its SUPERIOR PERFORMANCE even on the roughest roads

You probably know the Oakland Eight best as a car of superior performance. Its exceptional speed—its thrilling pick-up—its masterly hill-climbing power are qualities that people are apt to note and remember. But the Oakland Eight is a car of unusual comfort, too!

A car whose remarkable roadability invites you to open the throttle—and take even the roughest roads with a feeling of restfulness and safety. Reasons? Here they are: An 85-horsepower engine whose high ratio of power to the weight of the car eliminates all sense of effort or strain. A low center of gravity that minimizes swaying and keeps you hugging the road securely. A wheelbase of generous yet convenient length, and carefully worked-out springs whose action is controlled by Lovejoy Hydraulic Shock Absorbers. Skillful distribution of weight that contributes to harmony of motion. A steering gear that works on roller bearings.

Performance on the perfect road is one thing—performance where the going's rough is another. You get them both in the Oakland Eight. Come in—and let us prove it!

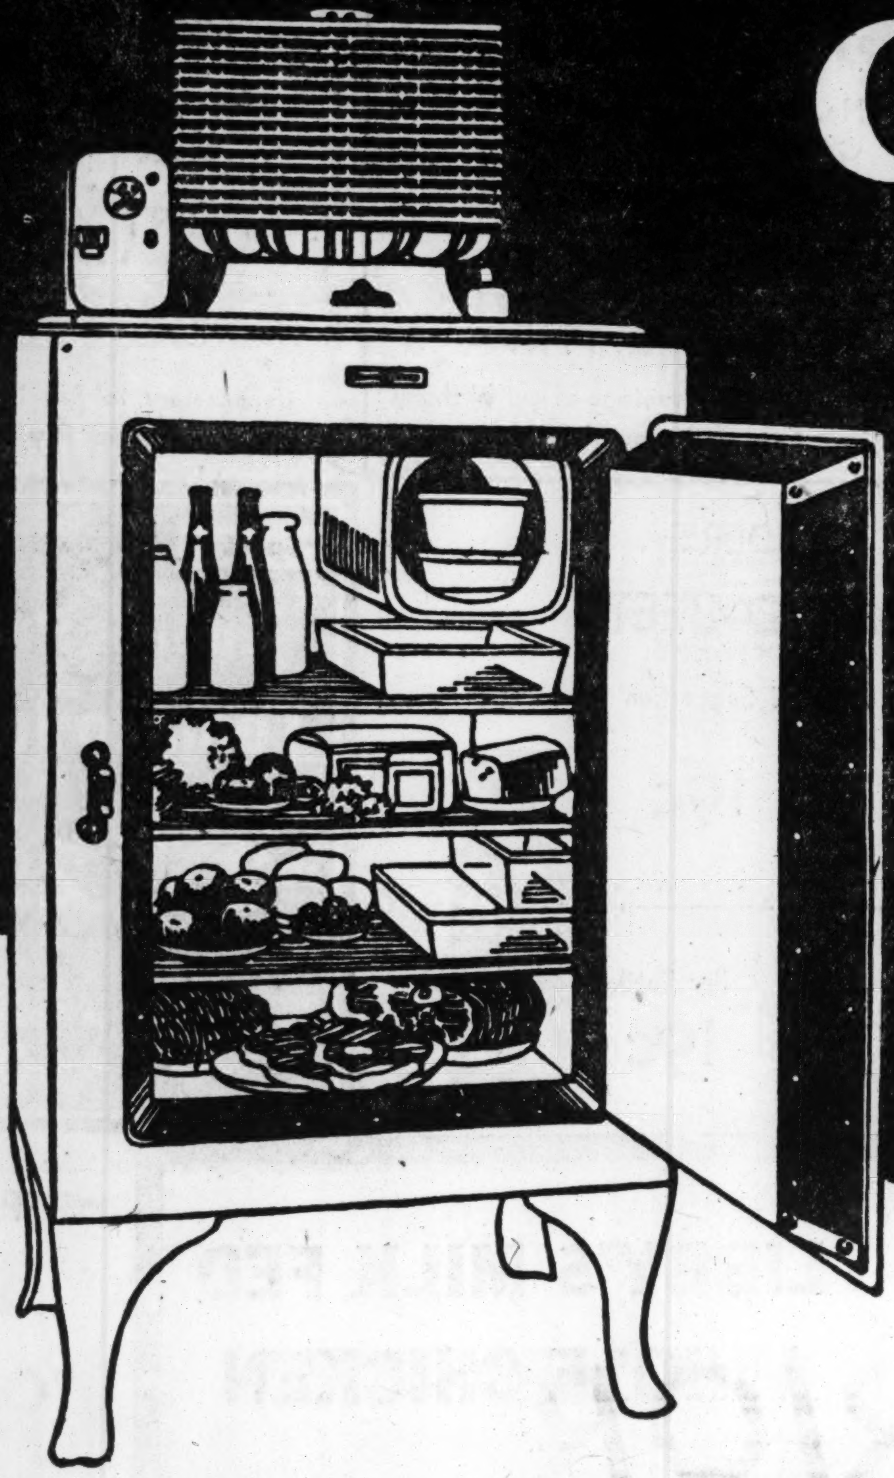
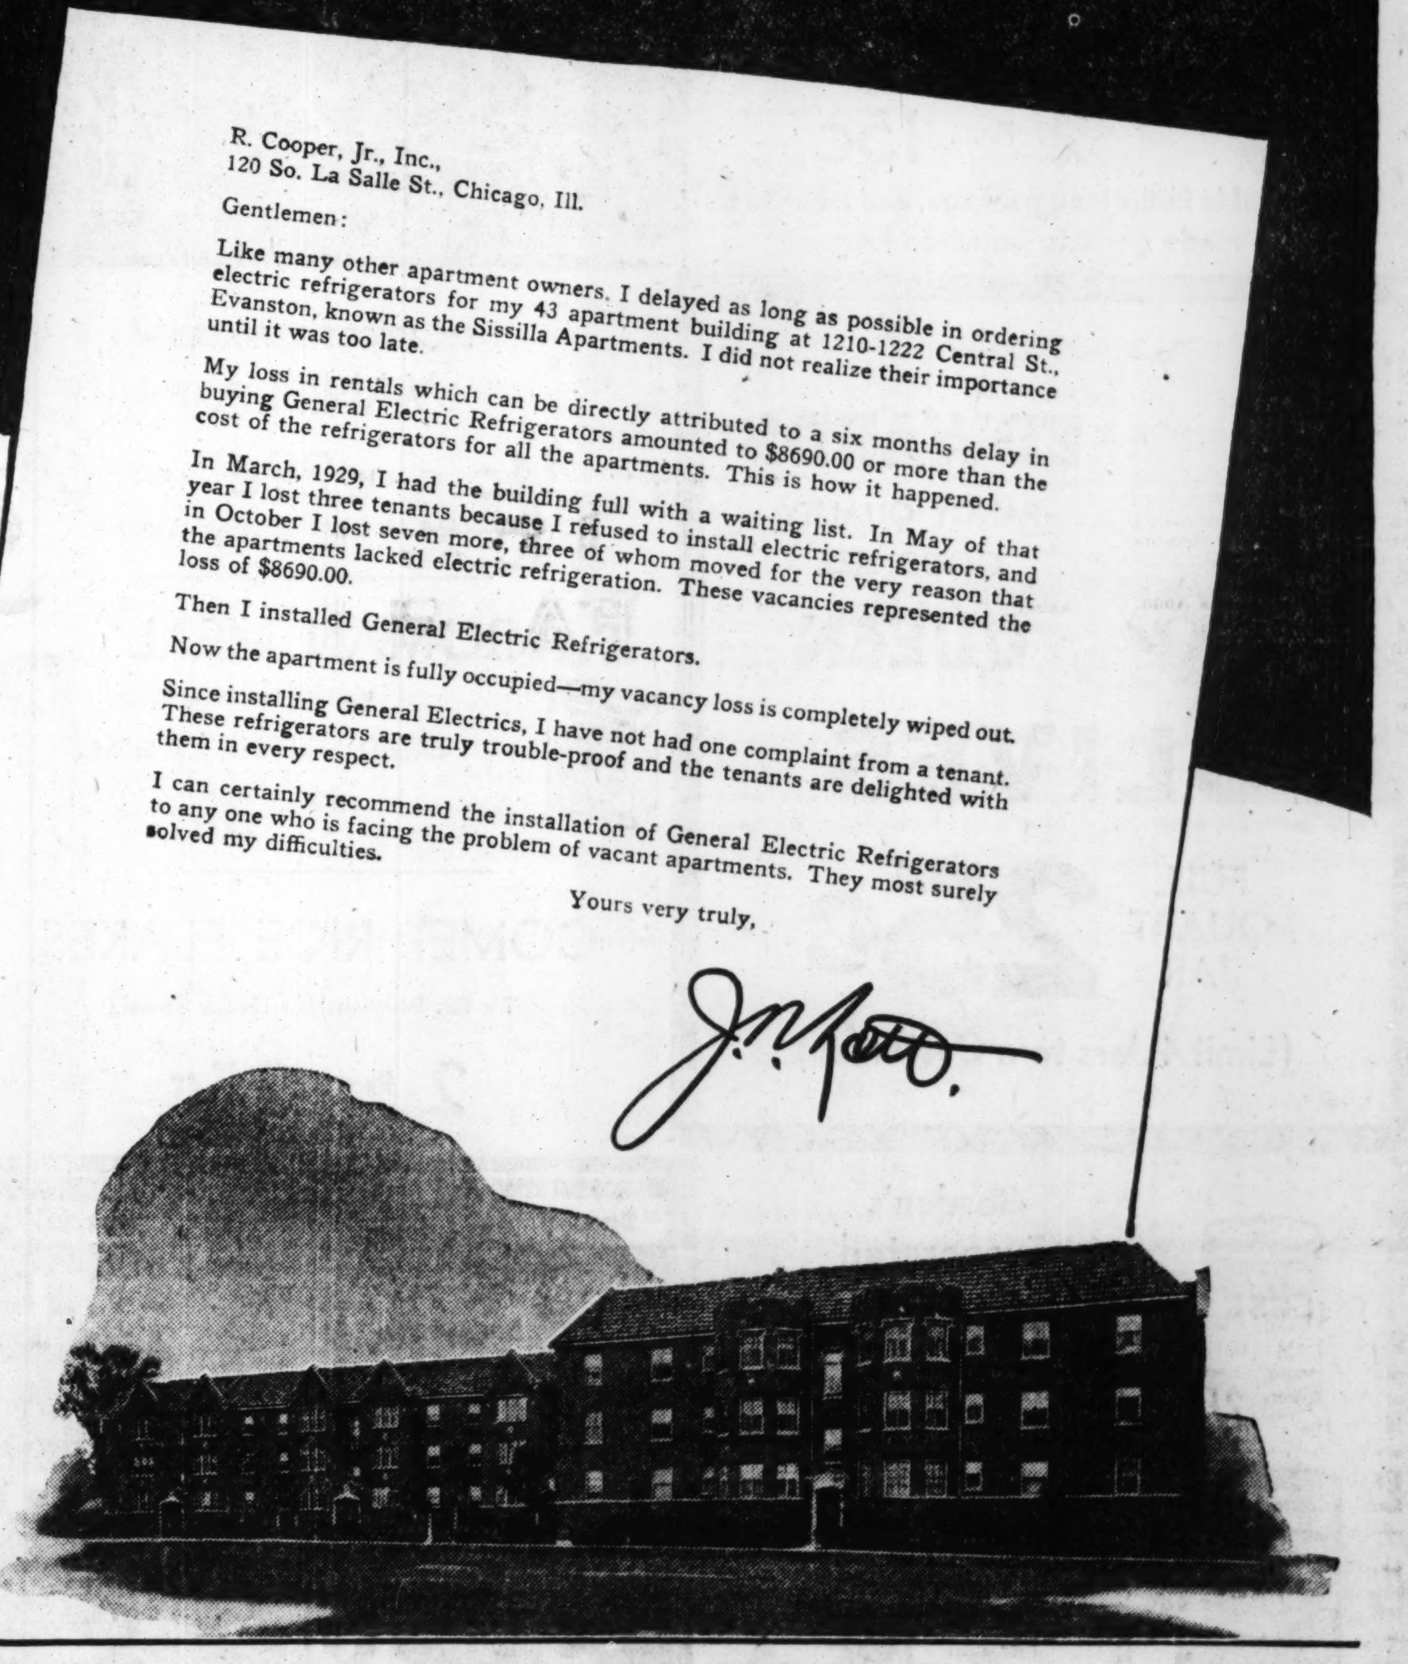
Six months delay.. cost Me $8690.00



Too late, I found General Electric Refrigerators DO rent apartments



R. Cooper, Jr., Inc.,
120 So. La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:

Like many other apartment owners. I delayed as long as possible in ordering electric refrigerators for my 43 apartment building at 1210-1222 Central St., Evanston, known as the Sissilla Apartments. I did not realize their importance until it was too late.

My loss in rentals which can be directly attributed to a six months delay in buying General Electric Refrigerators amounted to $8690.00 or more than the cost of the refrigerators for all the apartments. This is how it happened.

In March, 1929, I had the building full with a waiting list. In May of that year I lost three tenants because I refused to install electric refrigerators, and in October I lost seven more, three of whom moved for the very reason that the apartments lacked electric refrigeration. These vacancies represented the loss of $8690.00.

Then I installed General Electric Refrigerators.

Now the apartment is fully occupied—my vacancy loss is completely wiped out.

Since installing General Electrics, I have not had one complaint from a tenant. These refrigerators are truly trouble-proof and the tenants are delighted with them in every respect.

I can certainly recommend the installation of General Electric Refrigerators to any one who is facing the problem of vacant apartments. They most surely solved my difficulties.

Yours very truly,

J. N. Lott.

HERE is actual evidence of the false economy of delaying the installation of General Electric Refrigerators. It cost Mr. Lott, an apartment owner, in lost rent, more than he paid for the General Electric Refrigerators which he finally installed. With the General Electrics in the building, occupancy rose from 75% to 100%.

This case is not unique. Apartment owners everywhere are finding out that the installation of General Electric Refrigerators is an important factor in renting apartments. Modern tenants are demanding modern refrigeration – General Electric – the type they would install in their own homes. They are proving our statement that when the sign reading, "This Apartment Equipped with General Electric Refrigerators" goes up, the "For Rent" sign comes down.

General Electric Refrigerators are the incredibly quiet kind that run for years without a thought or worry on your part. The kind that is controlled and defrosted independently of all the other refrigerators in the building – the kind that can be regulated to the temperature the individual tenant happens to want–any time, day or night.

General Electric Refrigerators are the refrigerators with the sanitary porcelain chilling chambers –absolutely protected against rust, dirt or impurities resulting from use by previous tenants. General Electric Refrigerators with their entire mechanism permanently oiled and hermetically sealed–are so dependable and trouble-free that, of the hundreds of thousands of owners, not one has ever paid one cent for service.

Apartment seekers know of the comfort and convenience in having such a refrigerator in the apartment in which they are going to live. When they find an apartment equipped with General Electric Refrigerators they sign the lease with the utmost confidence, for they know that here is an apartment owned by a man who has his tenants' comfort, convenience and happiness at heart!

Visit one of our conveniently located showrooms and let us tell you how other owners of apartments establish high occupancy percentages.

THE INSTRUCTIVE GAME OF STALLED AUTOMOBILE.

The automobile manufacturers and the builders of accessories have provided the things that a motorist wants on most occasions, but they have neglected one item. They have provided nothing for him to do when stalled on narrow roads. This omission is a serious one, particularly to Chicagoans. On a Saturday or Sunday—today, for instance—the Chicago motorist must expect to spend hours getting in and out of town. He must count upon long waits devoted to enjoying the fumes from a hundred idling motors like his own. For lack of anything else to do, most of the unfortunates spend the time in cussing, a practice which is sinful in itself and unproductive of anything except higher body temperatures. We propose a substitute, a game which may be played by any number of players. Let the victim spend his time in a game of mental arithmetic. Let him calculate, with the aid of the wife and children who will benefit from the exercise, what he has paid to the state of Illinois for the construction of roads. There is his state automobile license; there is also his annual contribution in gasoline taxes at 3 cents the gallon. He may knock off one cent, which is supposed to go back to the county where it was collected, leaving a net of 2 cents a gallon.

Then let him count the cars which, like his, are stalled for lack of adequate roads and grade separations. Let him estimate the number similarly stalled on all the radial roads leading from Chicago. At this point a glance at a road map of Illinois will add zest to the game. The players may estimate the mileage of all the roads in the state and compare it with the mileage in the vicinity of Chicago. This should permit a fairly accurate guess as to the fairness of the distribution of the road funds. [We have looked up the answer in the back of the book. Players who calculate that Cook county has contributed less than 40 per cent of the money had better check their figures again; likewise players who find that Cook county has received more than 5 per cent of the roads to date have made mistakes.]

This pastime will occupy the first half hour. The second may be devoted to equally stimulating calculations regarding the income tax which the downstate legislators want to impose upon citizens of Illinois. What proportion of the income tax will come out of Cook county? What portion will be spent for the benefit of Cook county? How much of Cook county's contribution will go downstate for local improvements?

These games should carry the player past the first obstruction, outbound. At the second the motorist and his family may divert themselves with estimating the number of legislators to which Cook county is entitled under the new census and comparing that figure with the 37 per cent which Cook county has been allotted since 1901.

On the way home the appropriate inferences may be drawn. There will be plenty of time to draw them.

CHEAPER BOOKS.

A reader for each of the 200,000,000 volumes and more published in the United States each year would imply a per capita consumption of new books of about two per person, and at $2 per volume, a cost to each person of $4, or $400,000,000 altogether each year. The average consumption as a fact, either in reading or buying books, is probably far less. A book with 5,000 sales is more than a success, and the successes among 8,342 books published last year or any year are very few. With fiction holding 16 per cent, juvenile 14 per cent, textbooks 35 per cent, religion and philosophy 10 per cent, poetry and drama 3 per cent, history and biography 2 per cent of the number of volumes published, it is clear that a relatively few novels and textbooks probably absorb most of the business. In the book business it is difficult to anticipate the public demand. Many titles and few successes is the consequence.

For the good of literature and perhaps even of the book business this broad spread between the number of titles and the number of successes is welcome. It prevents overstandardization of books and allows the public a wide and individual choice. But it imposes severe problems on the publisher and distributor. The increasing high price of books has been one consequence. Now the publishers in the face of a tacit buyers' strike find that high prices will not work. By forcing books into the luxury class they have reduced their buying public to a point below the gain from higher price.

Cheaper books are on the way, and three publishers have announced already that fall fiction, at least in part, will be priced around one dollar. Fall fiction it will be. That dollar books can pay and at the same time retain a large number of titles in publication may at least be hoped for. The selection of books for publication will remain a hard problem as before, and it is probable that a few more eggs not all in one basket will be deemed worth while.

Behind the sorrows of the publishers are great events in the modern industrial and social world. The decline of the family and of the large, permanent residence without doubt affects the sale of books, and if publishers, furniture makers, baby carriage makers, lawn mower makers and others who purvey the utensils needed and kept in the old fashioned home for repeated use would make a successful drive towards an "own your own home" style of living they might well have larger sales. But the gods perhaps are against them. Socialized instruments, the libraries, the hotels, the movies, the radio replace more and more the old styles of individual use and consumption. And the publisher who knows today just where he will get off is wise indeed.

CUTTING OFF THE TAIL GRADUALLY.

On America's stand for 25 eight inch gun cruisers of 10,000 tons and the right to use eight inch guns on smaller ships the Geneva conference of 1927 broke down. The British counter proposal for two types of cruisers, the 10,000 ton 8 inch gun and the 6,000 ton 6 inch gun cruisers, was not acceptable to American naval policy. To the London conference of 1930 American representatives came with the demand on the part of the American navy for a minimum of 21 eight inch gun cruisers, though the real minimum necessity was, in the opinions of the navy experts, closer to 23 such cruisers. Out of the London conference America came apparently with 18 eight inch gun cruisers but really with fifteen. More than 15 cannot be built before the expiration of the treaty. The three additional paper ships establish a bargaining position of some value perhaps in a later conference, but they can't fire a gun. From London comes America with the English demands at Geneva more than satisfied. From 25 to 23 to 21 to 18 to 15 the 8 inch gun cruisers were cut down.

The tail was cut off gradually, but not painlessly so far as the U. S. navy is concerned. With no naval bases to speak of in comparison with Britain's far flung harbors and with no new territories acquired by the war to realign the defensive program in key with modern needs, America without question would require a larger number of large cruisers with long cruising radius to maintain parity with Britain and a 10-6 ratio with Japan. But parity has been abandoned in great measure in the 1930 treaty as an accurately measured status and Japan has moved from a 6-10 ratio to a 7-10 ratio in naval strength.

Combat parity America may have, provided the battle could be arranged at a convenient time and place and not too far from New York City. But combat in general depends on the facilities for supply and preparation, and in these America is far behind. With 27 naval bases and 227 merchantmen convertible into 6 inch gun cruisers, as compared with America's seven naval bases and 70 convertible merchantmen, it is clear that by these superiorities alone England can well claim to be the mistress of the seas. In sea power there is not parity under the 1930 treaty.

HOW TO BUY THE GALAPAGOS.

Southwestward from Panama, 600 miles off the coast of Ecuador, the Galapagos islands lie scattered across the equator in great drifts of rock and sand. Few men live there, but the wild life of the islands is unique and unequaled in all the world. Fish as no Izaak Walton ever dreamed of, dwarf penguins, known nowhere else; flightless cormorants, ducks, gulls, albatross and singing birds, the marine iguana in countless thousands, all of them unique to these sun isles; flamingoes, land iguanas, giant turtles of land and sea, goats and wild asses live there in their Eden. The tropic birds will alight upon the traveler's shoulder. The sea lion will eat out of his hand.

To preserve this place for future generations several wealthy sportsmen have considered buying the archipelago. Yachtsmen anchor there in winter, but without protection the wild but friendly life there soon will be gone. Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania suggests the Galapagos for a wild life refuge. THE TRIBUNE has urged their purchase by the United States government for a wild life preserve, a meteorological and scientific station, and a casual refuge for ships of war and peace. Following this a suggestion comes from C. F. Kettering, head of research for the General Motors, and E. F. McDonald Jr., president of Zenith Radio, that a group of wealthy men might well consider buying the Galapagos from Ecuador and giving them to the nation. It would be a gesture of magnificence and meaning to the United States. A group, say, of four hundred wealthy sportsmen could buy the islands probably without great difficulty or sacrifice. Should the problem be too great for private means, congress could well afford to duplicate private subscriptions for the purchase.

Cession of these islands to America must, of course, be made through treaty with Ecuador, but the terms and provisions of the treaty and the purchase could be adjusted to the special situation. With Ecuador unquestionably the gainer by having the Galapagos in our hands, a low price and an easy treaty should not be hard to arrange. The port of Guayaquil in Ecuador could expect increasing trade and the whole western coast of South America would be opened more to American travel and investment. The four hundred men who may buy these islands will find the venture nationally worth while.

Editorial of the Day

SHE MANAGED.

[Rock Island, Ill., Argus.]

The other day in Richland, Mich., a "real" Daughter of the American Revolution, Mrs. Helen M. Barrett, aged 99, whose father served under Gates at Saratoga in the revolutionary war, passed away. There are eight surviving women whose fathers served in the revolution.

Mrs. Barrett was born in upstate New York and was next to the youngest of 27 children. Her father was 78 years of age when she was born, and when she was seven years old she was taken to Michigan by boat and horse. She was a wife at 14 years.

After her death, one of her sons said:

"Her early married life would seem impossible now. Her daily work included cooking over a hearth fire, spinning her own yarn, weaving, making stockings and all the clothing for 10 children, doing all the cooking and baking for a large family, part of the time milking four or five cows, even making her own soap and candles.

"But she always seemed to manage. She kept us clean and we always had plenty to eat and wear."

AMERICAN HEROES

FRANCIS MARION

A Brief Review of His Contribution to Our Country.

(The articles of which the following is the third are intended as five minute sketches of early Americans of particular achievement and distinction, each flashed briefly against the background of the times and conditions in which the subject made his contribution to the nation. Their names may be well or may be little known now to the generation which has inherited the benefits of wise, laborious, and, in many instances, heroic work.)

(Picture in Rotogravure Section.)

FRANCIS MARION was a fabulous soldier of the revolution as it was fought in the south. Legend and reality are so mixed up in him that one may pass for the other and without apology. His early biographer was Parson Mason Locke Weems, the creator of the fabled Washington. Marion was an almost perfect subject for the itinerant fiddling, book selling, book writing preacher of odd jobs and evangelist of sorts, who could play for a hoedown or pray for church meeting.

The Marion of Weems was frail in appearance but steel in action, frugal to asceticism when campaigning (he served a few ash baked potatoes to a British officer as an unusual feast and the latter resigned his commission, being persuaded of the hopelessness of conquest), tender hearted and merciful to everything, even to his most brutal foes (he saved their lives at the risk of his own), intrepid in the face of any danger, elusive as a will o' the wisp, the idol of his rough riflemen, and the despair of his enemies. The terrific Tarleton could not catch him or outwit him, could only curse him and call him the Swamp Fox. What more could Parson Weems want for material? Here in the South Carolina river bottoms and swamps was another Bayard. And much of it was true.

Marion was the grandson of a Huguenot family which had been driven from France by persecution after the revocation of the edict of Nantes in 1685. He had frontier fighting experience against the Cherokees, and was a well-to-do farmer with a plantation at Pond Bluff, in St. John's parish, in 1775, when he was commissioned captain to recruit a company of state troops. He was in the taking of Fort Johnston in Charleston harbor, and later had part in beating off with long cannon the attempt of Sir Peter Parker's fleet to recapture Charleston in 1776. His fame, however, is that of a commander of irregular partisan troops. For this he had a genius.

The south escaped the first years of the war and then had concentrated upon it the most brutal and furious of its action. By that time it had ceased to be an affair conducted by good natured, polite, rather lazy and pleasure addicted British generals. Great Britain by then was fighting France and Spain, with the control of the sea lost at times and uncertain all the time. The stubborn colonies had brought the world down on the mother country and the English could see what might prove to be their last ditch. Peace offers had been rejected by the American patriots, and when the war went south it went with desperate bitterness.

Savannah had been captured the last days of 1778, and the American effort to retake it in cooperation with the French fleet had failed, Pulaski being killed. Charleston, which had been so well defended by South Carolina artillery against Parker's fleet, fell to Clinton in the spring of 1780, in magnolia time. Worse than the loss of the city, Lincoln's army was taken. Gates, sent from the north to retrieve the situation, was completely licked at Camden, De Kalb being killed. The Virginia coast and tidewater had been ravaged by Arnold, the south was prostrated, the French alliance seemed an exploded hope, American money was a government perfidy, Washington was almost in despair, and the war was hopeless to the stoutest hearted.

(There was a party in congress willing to abandon the country south of Virginia to the British and exclude it from the union of states, a program which was not offensive to Vergennes, the French foreign minister, whose policy for his American allies contemplated an arrangement of three weak republics pressed between the British in Canada and the Spanish in Florida. Then nature could take its course.)

Cornwallis was marching at will throughout the south, from seaboard into the interior and back to the coast, with the incensed Tories arising against their patriot neighbors. Tarleton's and Rawdon's troopers and the loyalists were riding the country down with a reality of firebrand and sword. Tory and Whig carried the torch to each other's property and used the rope in retaliation. "Tarleton quarter" was a rallying cry for revenge.

Washington was implored to send help, but he had little he could spare after Lincoln had been captured and Gates had been cut to pieces. He was being worn out by his own protests against the conditions imposed on him by the failure of supplies and recruits, by the increasing indifference of the states to their obligations and by his own inability to attempt anything against the British in New York. It was his great ambition to retake that city, but it remained beyond his resources.

He sent La Fayette into Virginia in the hope that Arnold could be captured. La Fayette, with the usual insufficiency of every necessity, had difficulty in keeping himself free, but he did, and in the end was snapping at the heels of Cornwallis to good effect, but before that could happen all organized resistance to the destroying enemy seemed fated to disaster.

The melancholy interim was lightened only by the daring exploits of a few brave and experienced partisan chiefs who kept hope alive until Gen. Greene could make American defeats too costly to the victors.

Marion was one of the several accomplished patriot leaders, Sumter another, who proved equal to the needs of a staggered and shattered cause. His bands many times were small, quickly assembled and quickly dispersed. One hour they might be in their fields and the next in the saddle. Their equipment was crude. Mill saws were converted into sabers. The firearms were what the partisans happened to have, rifles, muskets, or fowling pieces. They struck at British communications, stalked detached units, fell upon Tory bands, sparred with the ferocious Tarleton and escaped his pursuit, kept camps nervous at night, and made marching columns apprehensive. Their movements were swift, elusive, and inspired by a leader of extraordinary ability in the field of irregular warfare.

Gen. Greene wrote to him: "History affords no instance wherein an officer has kept possession of a country under so many disadvantages as you have. Surrounded on every side with a superior force, hunted from every quarter with veteran troops, you have found means to elude their attempts and to keep alive the expiring hopes of an oppressed military when all succor seemed to be cut off."

Gen. Greene knew. He had inherited the task which Gates found to be his master at Camden. Marion did not have the luck to be with Morgan when his old foe Tarleton was cut to pieces at Cowpens, but he was at Eutaw Springs with his "oppressed militia" when it superbly helped Greene and the great Maryland Continentals under Howard and Hardman to show again that the Maryland regulars had something on any British infantry which undertook to face them in an even break.

Marion died in the peace of a rich and happy marriage and was buried on his Pond Bluff plantation, decorated by his state and esteemed by his enemies for his moderation and generosity.

How to Keep Well By Dr W A Evans

BARONS AND THEIR DIET.

IN HIS "Life in a Medieval Barony," Dr. W. S. Davis tells us about the diet of the upper classes in the thirteenth century. A state dinner consisted of three courses. In the first there were seven kinds of meat. The only reference to breads or vegetables was "pastry tarts." The second course or, better called, division, began with a soup and then included four kinds of meats, mostly game birds, and ended with "pasties of small birds." Next followed the third course or division, which included five meats, but in the sauces there is more reference to vegetables than in the earlier courses. For instance, rabbits were served "in gravy heavily spiced with onion and saffron." In addition to the meats noted as such, there were patties filled with yolk of egg and cheese, and pork pies.

This food was gormandized—eaten in excessive quantities and washed down with beers, wines and other liquors. Dr. Davis tells us they ate no salads, no ices and no confectionery. On fast days they ate almost as great a variety of meats, though they were in the form of fish and sometimes fowl.

The menus of those days included rich soups, roast apples, stewed and ripe fruits, almonds, ginger, and saffron. But the core of the meals was fish, of which there were thirteen kinds from which to choose. Dr. Davis says, "To the minds of men of a later age, this fast day dinner might seem only a little less gorging than the orthodox feasting upon meats."

This fashion for enormous gorges on a heavy diet persisted for centuries after the year 1400. Before me there lies a menu of a banquet given to Prof. S. S. Sherman by the citizens of Marion, Ala., a few years after the civil war. Prof. Sherman had been an early president of a girl's college founded in that town almost one hundred years ago. When he went back after a long absence his old friends were glad to see him and they expressed their feelings by a banquet which could have been given in the days of the barons.

The questions that interest us is—How did the people of that baron class in that day? How did they stand such heavy diets? How much Bright's disease did they have? We will never know. It is true they died at an early average age. They were old and worn out at forty as a rule. But how much of this can be charged to gorging and to badly balance diets? Life was hard and subject to many hazards; the records are incomplete and unscientific. All in all, we can do nothing more than allow each man his guess as to how much harm such eating and drinking did.

LET HIS PHYSICIAN DECIDE.

Mrs. J. C. C. writes:

1. A man has a trace of albumen and was disqualified for life insurance. Does he need a special diet?

2. My son, aged 13 months, has been living mostly on a vegetable diet, accompanied by soups, eggs, and lots of fruit. Is there any other food that I should include in his diet?

3. He is fond of cake, cookies, and sweets. Is a little of each harmful? He is one pound over weight and strong and healthy.

REPLY.

1. Probably not, but let his physician decide.

2. He needs milk, cereals, bread and meat, in addition to his present diet.

3. No.

DRINKING COFFEE CLEAR.

M. P. writes: There seems to be a theory afloat that coffee clear is more healthful and digestible than coffee with cream and sugar. I am trying to cut down on my coffee, taking only one cup in the morning and an after dinner cup at night. I prefer coffee with cream and sugar in the morning, but could cultivate a taste for clear coffee, quite easily, if it is better for one.

REPLY.

I think the theory has considerable foundation.

WRITE AGAIN!

Chicago, May 25.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Will you please tell me what states there are which forbid by law asking for rides by hikers?

F. M. W.

To answer your question it would be necessary for us to investigate the statutes of each of the states in the Union, involving in many cases the examination of several volumes. It seems probable that the greater part of this labor would be of no service to you. Hence we suggest that you write us another letter stating the facts on which we can limit our search.

HEALTH DEPARTMENT WILL INVESTIGATE.

Chicago, May 31.—[Friend of the People.]—I live in a large apartment building that is one year old. All the flats are infested with a tiny flying insect which gets into our food. We have had them all winter, but they are worse now. The owner has had the exterminator several times, but the condition gets worse instead of improving. As there are several small infants in this building, perhaps the health department can do something for us.

You are advised that an inspector has been assigned to make a thorough investigation, and if any violation is observed over which we have jurisdiction, proper action will be taken to effect an abatement.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

65 YEARS AGO TODAY

JUNE 8, 1865.

HALIFAX.—The steamer Africa, from Liverpool, has arrived with late news from England. In the house of commons Sir G. Walsh asked Lord Palmerston whether the government had received from the United States any formal official demand for compensation to American subjects for losses sustained by the Alabama and other confederate cruisers alleged to have been equipped in British ports. Lord Palmerston said that correspondence had been going on between the two governments for some time.

NEW YORK.—The Herald's Fort Monroe special says Jeff Davis' health is much improved. The medical attendant waits on him daily? The greatest vigilance is observed regarding visitors inside the fort.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The trial of the Lincoln assassins was devoid of any special interest. No development of new or startling facts will be likely to take place in the examination of witnesses, since the testimony yet to be introduced will be in rebuttal. The case will probably be closed entirely by this day week.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Representative Ashley of Ohio left Kansas for the country beyond Colorado with a view to the organization, next winter, of new territories. The President has ordered a suspension of sales advertised of rebel real estate in Tennessee for nonpayment of taxes.

SPRINGFIELD.—Gov. Oglesby has received a formal invitation to attend a grand reunion of the officers and ex-officers of the Army of the Tennessee at the Union hotel, Saratoga Springs, on the 4th of July to celebrate the fall of Vicksburg, the opening of the Mississippi river and the termination of that campaign.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A formal demand has been made on the Spanish government for the immediate surrender of the rebel ram Stonewall. No answer has been received yet, as the demand was served on the home government at Madrid.

30 YEARS AGO TODAY

JUNE 8, 1900.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—After Uncle Joe Cannon had skillfully marched his forces up the hill they marched right down again and the first session of the 56th congress came to an end after administering a disastrous blow to Uncle Joe's reputation as a leader. The exhibition Mr. Cannon gave last night of his ability to hypnotize the house was succeeded today by a reversal of form. The house surrendered not only all that Uncle Joe had been fighting for, but much more.

LONDON.—The Daily Mail inclines to the belief that the solution of the Chinese trouble rests with the Washington government. Under the caption, "McKinley's Opportunity," an editorial says: "The situation in China is fast going from bad to worse, and that once great empire is exhibiting symptoms of senile decay."

CHICAGO.—A dozen persons riding on top of a coach were knocked off when the coach passed under the Illinois Central viaduct at 51st street, the space between the top of the coach and the viaduct not being great enough for safe passage. Five persons were seriously hurt.

ST. LOUIS.—Mob rule, with its quota of shootings, assaults and riots, was the order of the day in the street car employés' strike. Posses and police availed little to prevent the outbreaks, which reached their climax in the shooting of a citizen and a policeman.

CHICAGO.—A committee appointed by the property owners of Sheridan Park and vicinity complained to the Town Hall police of the invasion of their lawns by picnickers who patronize the new Northwestern "L" road and enjoy outings in the north shore woods.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

JUNE 8, 1920.

CHICAGO.—The seventeenth G. O. P. national convention opens today with only one real sure thing—the keynote speech of Senator Lodge. The latest tendencies seem to be that Lowden is leading the "Big Three" and that Sproul is leading the "minor" entries. Mayor Thompson and his city hall organization sustained a severe defeat when the mayor was refused reëlection to the national committee.

BOWING TO THE QUEEN.

Racine, Wis., May 23.—A few words, with your permission, to the individual signing himself [or herself] "M. B." in THE TRIBUNE of May 22, under the heading: "Rendering Homage."

Every year at the time of the English courts there appears in THE TRIBUNE a crop of letters, containing the same silly rot about American women "bowing" before their majesties the king and queen of England, written, presumably, firstly by persons jealous because they themselves are not in a position to attain to that distinction—jealousy, as the literature of ages teaches us, being almost invariably the cause of such narrowmindedness, and secondly, by persons avidly anxious to make for themselves any trivial opportunity to sling dirt at Great Britain—possibly because she is such a distinterested and stolid target!

"We bow before God," unctuously writes this correspondent. Certainly. We also bow to one another on being introduced, if we have any manners and belong to that stratum of society which still retains a certain amount of reserve and does not fling itself on the breast of a stranger at first sight. There are variations of the word "bow" as numerous as the variations on the strings of a violin!

As regards the "divine right of kings," no one in the world, unless he be the ex-kaiser, whose belief has surely been much shaken, believes in such a thing now, least of all the king and queen of England. That belief rolled away with the head of Charles I. The upkeep of the "parasite" on the British throne costs the downtrodden subject approximately one farthing (½ of 1 cent) per head per week. A worthless parasite indeed to bleed his subjects so! No! It is not for the upkeep of king and throne that the Briton is so heavily taxed!

"Traditional"—yes, with all that the word implies. "Meaningless"—no. There is nothing meaningless about the throne "adorned" (to use your correspondent's own words) by the English king, but its meaning is spiritual rather than material and as such past understanding by the purely materialistic mind. This throne "adorned" by a "parasite" is not made of money; indeed, its occupant is comparatively one of the poorest men in the British commonwealth. To the Briton it is the sublimation of empire; the incarnation of the British isles; a band of steel binding the units of the commonwealth where a president of the republic would bind with thread—or not at all. Something which parties and politics cannot touch. Which remains serene, unchanging and infinitely dignified above all the bribery and corruption, scrambling, and quarreling, dissension and assentation, scandal, bitterness, and jealousy which seeths around the election by vote of the head of any institution.

But, has it struck the correspondent that no homage is desired from the American or any other nation? They are permitted to share the tradition if they wish, a gracious permission which is year by year repaid by "traditional" and "meaningless" attacks on the Briton's sturdy loyalty to his monarchy and the pomp surrounding it. Surely, sometimes, it must enter even his slow brain that the time has come for the permission to be withdrawn and Americans debarred from "bowing" before the king and queen which a large section of their number think it fine to sneer at so continuously?

But even so, I suppose, the same section would find another reason for their cheap sarcasm—maybe the seating at the dinner table of a representative of theirs or a like momentous question of truly international importance.

THE DEATH PENALTY.

Chicago, May 29.—I gather from your report of Judge Kavanagh's observations before the special parliamentary committee of the house of commons investigating capital punishment that he is highly in favor of enforcing the death penalty for murder, but balks at sentencing women to death. In the same breath, if your report is correct, he denounces opponents of the death penalty as sentimentalists. It seems to me the learned judge is altogether inconsistent and is himself a sentimentalist par excellence; otherwise, how explain his aversion to the death penalty for women?

The fact is that the enforcement or non-enforcement of the death penalty, as every intelligent student of crime appreciates, has no more to do with the murder rate than have the rise and fall of the tides. Every person of common observation knows that prohibition, war, and general industrial depression have increased crime, and that punishment or lack of it has no appreciable effect on the crime rate.

When all is said and done, we are all sentimentalists and we are for or against the death penalty according to our emotional makeup. Some people are naturally bloodthirsty and mask their real feelings by a show of righteous indignation. Such people are hounds for punishment, and usually clamor for the death penalty.

REUBEN FREEDMAN.

DESIRABLE IMMIGRATION.

Chicago, May 28.—I wish to answer Mr. S. C. Armstrong's statement that during the world war the draft board tests showed that British had the largest percentage of higher intelligence of any of our immigrants. That's natural. The tests were made in their language. If the tests had been made in German the Germans would have had the highest marks; if in French, the Frenchmen would, and so on.

Do the British assimilate so easily? Maybe they do in U. S., as the country's language is English, but how about in India, Egypt, and South Africa, do they there? Canada prefers now (after their sad experience) others than British who prefer to be unemployed at home to being farmers in Canada, although the Canadians offered them the best inducements.

J. V.

COLD AND DIRTY.

Chicago, May 29.—Why, O, why can't we have some express trains on the Douglas Park line during rush hours at least, and why doesn't the rapid transit line put some of the poor unemployed men to work washing windows on this slow, dirty line? I have the pleasure of riding from Cicero to Evanston several days a week and can't help but notice the difference in service and cleanliness. Also on cold, rainy days the Evanston express is heated, and the old Douglas line is as cold as a clam, and smelly. Same fare, same class of people ride these lines, so why the difference in service?

AURELIA WALTON.

POPPY SALES.

Chicago, May 29.—Do the Legion posts receive any part of the funds derived from the sale of poppies, and, if so, how much and for what reason?

BOHEMIA BOWS AT RITES FOR ITS AMERICAN CALIPH

Self-Slain Genius Said to Be of Blood Royal.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, June 7.—From garrets and from sumptuous studios, in high hats and flowing ties, the modern élite of Montparnasse turned out this morning to attend the funeral of Jules Pascin, whose genius for 20 years inspired their art and whose generosity paid for their drinks.

Pascin, who was a naturalized American, committed suicide last Monday. As an artist he had, perhaps, the most wanton and most zestfully voluptuous style of any modern painter. His lifelike canvases were subtle orgies of rich color.

Craved Blazing End.

In his Arabian Nights apartment in Montmartre he reigned like a fabulous caliph over the Bohemians of Paris. It is said that he killed himself because he thought that at the age of 45 he had tasted all the joys of life and wanted to go out in a blaze of glory. Like some old Roman esthete he opened the veins in his arms and caught the spurting blood in a scented bowl. Then he hanged himself, and two days ago the police broke in to find his corpse.

His funeral was worthy of his life and death. The long cortége which wound through the dusty streets to the grimy proletarian cemetery of St. Ouen included every nationality and every walk of life. Side by side with tearful little models there were long haired expatriates from Greenwich Village and wealthy Americans who patronize the arts.

Famed Artists Attend.

The most famous artists in Paris were present—Foujita, noted Japanese, Chagal, Kisling, Bracque, and Marcoussis. There was also Aicha, exotic mulatress model whom Pascin discovered one night walking on the boulevards and made famous, and Kiki, the most famous of the Montparnasse models and wife of the American photographer, Man Ray.

At the cemetery there were simple services according to the Jewish Orthodox rites. The painter's American wife, Herminie David, collapsed beside the grave and had to be carried off.

Pascin was born a Bulgarian Jew. According to the legend popular in Montparnasse, he was the natural son of the late Emperor Franz Joseph of the Austrian-Hungarian empire. He went to America while a youth and there married Herminie David. Pascin was a precocious genius and achieved success almost from the start. He was one of the few great modernists to realize a fortune from his paintings.

Lived in Lavish Style.

Twenty years ago he moved to Paris and started to live in fantastic oriental opulence. The parties at his Montmartre studio were famous and he staged barbaric banquets reminiscent of those described of olden times by Petronius.

Pascin was a restless soul, always thirsting for new adventures and new delights. He worked prodigiously and dissipated prodigiously. He spent thousands on sybaritical orgies and gave thousands to charity. It is said that he never passed a beggar without giving him at least a 100 franc bill ($4).

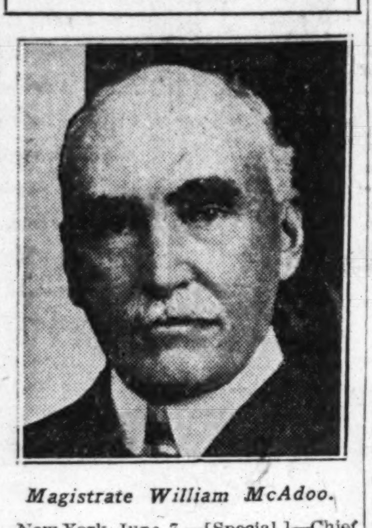
DIES IN NEW YORK



Magistrate William McAdoo.

New York, June 7.—[Special.]—Chief Magistrate William McAdoo, for forty years in politics and public life, died today at his home on Park avenue after several days' illness. He would have been 77 in October.

McAdoo first became prominent as a member of congress and as one of the important members of the committee on naval affairs. When Grover Cleveland took office he was appointed assistant secretary of the navy. When McKinley was elected he traded jobs with Theodore Roosevelt. Mr. Roosevelt became assistant secretary of the navy and he became police commissioner of New York.

It was in 1910 that the present magistrates' courts system was inaugurated here. McAdoo at once became the chief magistrate and he retained that position for twenty years.

FRANCE CUTS TAX IN INDO-CHINA TO STILL REVOLT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, June 8.—Following criticism of the government's policy in Indo-China in the chamber of deputies yesterday, Premier Tardieu, alarmed at the further outbreaks with loss of life and demonstrations reported in Indo-China every day, today called a conference with Minister of War Maginot, Minister of Colonies Pietri, and Gen. Claudel, commander-in-chief of colonial troops, to take immediate measures to stamp out Red propaganda and restore order.

Simultaneously with the government's action here, following declarations in the chamber that the heavy taxes, borne by the natives, is the cause of discontent and that the government is acting with undue severity, the governor of Cochin-China today issued a manifesto to the native population announcing a reduction in taxation and that agitators will be severely punished.

After the riots, communist troublemakers, attempting to foment a general revolt, have now changed their plan of action and have adopted Mahatma Gandhi's passive resistance campaign.

BLAME HIP SING DESERTIONS IN NEW TONG WAR

Wealthy Chinese Laundry Owner Slain.

Wholesale desertions of Chinese merchants from the ranks of the Hip Sing tong and the defection of these deserters to the rival and more powerful group, the On Leongs, was blamed by police last night for a countrywide revival of oriental warfare. Seven men have been killed in the United States in the last few days, climaxed here yesterday by the murder of Chang Gong Gang, wealthy laundry owner.

Reports from New York early in the afternoon told of a truce between the tongs reached after a conference between leaders and Police Commissioner Mulrooney. This was dispelled less than six hours later, however, when the wires carried news of another murder, that of Charles Wong, upper west side laundryman.

Leaves Gun Near Body.

Chang was slain early in the day as he left his home at 5726 West Madison street to visit his places of business. A slim, dark assassin clad in blue overalls was seen running from the scene after he had tossed his weapon, a .38 caliber revolver, near the body in true tong war custom. The dead man had left the Hip Sings two weeks ago and joined the On Leongs, the police were told.

This led to an inquiry into the membership status of the two groups and it was learned that within the last fifteen days more than 100 members have deserted the smaller tong, which is now reduced to less than 125 men. Always the larger, the On Leongs now have about 2,250 in their ranks and have recently built a luxurious temple at Wentworth avenue and 22d street.

Seek to Trace Gun.

Frank Moy, unofficial mayor of Chinatown, heads the On Leong organization, while Lester S. Lee is president of the Hip Sings. Lee maintains headquarters at 2302 South State street with Albert Young, secretary, and Lee Long, assistant secretary.

The police found the revolver lying near Chang's body still warm. Five of its six chambers had been discharged, two of the slugs having pierced the back of the Chinese. Efforts were being made to trace the purchaser of the weapon through its number, 148,909. The laundryman had received threats since he left the Hip Sings, the police learned.

Autoist Gives Description.

F. J. Black, 5720 West Madison street, was driving past the scene where Chang was murdered and was able to give a partial description of the man in overalls he saw running toward Mason avenue. He was described as about 30 years old, 5 feet 4 inches tall and as weighing about 140 pounds.

Wynekoop of 5059 Sheridan road, arrested Thursday on complaint of two young women who had answered his advertisement for a secretary that he had kissed them, was taken to the detective bureau last night on a capias issued by Municipal Judge Joseph Schulman. He failed to appear in South State street court for trial Friday, telephoning the judge he was "too busy operating" to get there.

ASSASSIN KILLS GERMAN BARON; ENVOY TO LISBON

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LISBON, June 7.—Baron Albert von Baligand, German minister to Portugal, died here today as the result of being hit by two bullets fired at him by an assassin as he was returning from a visit to the Koenigsberg, flagship of the visiting German fleet in Lisbon harbor. The baron only died two hours after being taken to hospital, though one bullet had pierced his brain and the other his cheekbone. A third bullet went wild.

The baron's murderer, a man named Franz Piechowsky, was seized by the police and severely grilled but denied that he was a communist though cables were found in his pocket addressed to the foreign office at Moscow and another to the league of nations at Geneva.

Piechowsky, who claims he once took out first naturalization papers in New York, arrived here a month ago from Spain without the knowledge of the authorities. He declared that his act was inspired by personal vengeance and was premeditated against either a German, American or British diplomat as these countries were responsible for his "persecution." He is believed to be insane.

BOY, 11, IS ACCIDENTALLY SHOT.

Mr. Cook, a member for 34 years of the law firm of Huff & Cook at 29 South La Salle street, collapsed Friday night and died without regaining consciousness yesterday morning.

Besides his wife and daughter, Mr. Cook is survived by his mother, Mrs. Mary Cook of Miles, Ia.; three brothers, Dr. William H. Cook of Beloit, Kas.; Clair Cook of Sioux City, Ia.; Arthur Cook of Kansas City, Mo., and a sister, Mrs. Ella Fussell of Fayette, Ia. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Mrs. Cook said she would not notify Marion of his death until her arrival in New York. It is the second time she has been called from Europe, the first time being last October, when she remained until her father apparently was on his way to recovery.

CUPID IS BUSY AMONG SENIOR CLASS AT N. U.

Five Co-eds Are to Wed; Others Engaged.

Heedless of statisticians who report declining marriages and mounting divorces," Cupid has been active this spring among the graduating class of Northwestern university at Evanston. He has fluttered into sorority and fraternity houses, dormitories, into humdrum classrooms, along shady drives and walks, and has winked at young couples over soda glasses and coffee cups in confectionery and sandwich shops.

A survey of senior co-eds reveals that wedding bells soon will ring for some and that several others have made public announcement of engagements. Members of the vocational committee of the women's self governing association at the university revealed yesterday that during a survey last March 23 senior girls admitted matrimony as a preferred vocation.

Five Tell Wedding Plans.

The first of five known senior brides will be Miss Elizabeth Gould, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Gould, 919 Judson avenue, Evanston. She will be wed on June 17, the day after graduation, to James F. Abbott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Abbott of Evanston, at the Second Presbyterian church in Evanston. Miss Gould is a member of Alpha Phi sorority. Mr. Abbott was graduated from Northwestern university in 1928. They will live in Akron, O.

On June 24 the pair chosen by popular vote of the senor class recently as "the most loving couple," will be wed. They are Miss Alvera C. Bleil, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Bleil, Lakewood, O., and Russell Walter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Walter, Kokomo, Ind. The bride-to-be is a member of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority. Mr. Walter, a Northwestern graduate this year, was captain of the track and basketball teams.

Other Marriages in Prospect.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Merrill, daughter of Dr. Nelson Merrill, Marshalltown, Ia., has chosen July 5 as the date of her marriage to Richard G. MacDermott, Northwestern graduate last year and the son of L. A. MacDermott of Evanston. Miss Merrill is also a member of Kappa Alpha Theta.

The next wedding is set for Oct. 18 when Miss Betty Boyd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Duncan W. Boyd, 1419 Jarvis avenue, will become the bride of James D. West, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. West of Toledo. Miss Boyd is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority.

Although the date has not been definitely set, the marriage of Miss Olive V. Roper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Roper, Menominee, Mich., and Robert L. Taylor, son of Robert E. Taylor, Kewanee, Ill., will take place in the fall. Miss Roper is a member of Kappa Alpha Theta. Mr. Taylor will be graduated from Northwestern university law school this month.

4,000 ATTEND

Between 4,000 and 5,000 graduates of the University of Chicago assembled yesterday for the annual Alumni day. Arthur C. Cody of 6729 Merrill avenue of the class of 1924 was in charge.

The oustanding feature of the program was the interfraternity sing, in which 28 fraternities participated. Each filed in as a group to Hutchinson court in competition for the first prize silver cup. It was won by Alpha Delta Phi. F. Edwin Earle directed the sing. "C" blankets were awarded to 31 men.

2,000 WILL GET U. OF I. DEGREES IN URBANA TODAY

Plans were being completed yesterday for the fifty-ninth annual commencement exercises to be held on Wednesday at the University of Illinois at Urbana in which 2,000 young men and women will receive degrees. Dr. David Kinley, to retire as president of the university in July, will deliver the address and present the degrees. The baccalaureate sermon will be preached today by the Rev. John Sheridan Zelie of Lake Forest.

Dr. David Spence Hill, research associate of the national advisory council on education, of Washington, yesterday delivered the commencement address before the graduating class of 375 of the Illinois College of Medicine, and the Schools of Pharmacy and of Dentistry, at the Ashland auditorium, Ashland boulevard and Van Buren street. Dr. Kinley presented the diplomas.

Lake Forest College Graduates Class of 52

A class of 52 students was graduated yesterday at the 52d commencement exercises at Lake Forest college. Four honorary degrees were conferred by President Herbert M. Moore, the recipients being Dr. William Duncan McMillan of the University of Chicago; the Rev. John Edward Carver of Ogden, Utah, an alumnus of 1879; the Rev. John Sheridan Veilie of Lake Forest, and the Rev. Herbert W. Price of Lake Forest. A picture was presented to the college library of Prof. W. R. Bridgman, 79 years old, who retired as teacher of Latin and Greek, after serving on the faculty since 1891.

U. S. SAVES 4,000 TONS ON EIGHT TREATY CRUISERS

Sacrifice Weight for Guns and Speedier Ships.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 7.—[Special.]—A weight savings of between 4,000 and 5,000 tons has been effected in the construction of the first block of eight Washington treaty cruisers built by the United States, it was disclosed today for the first time. The savings in weight on the Salt Lake City, the first 8 inch gun treaty cruiser completed was 630 tons, according to an article written by Lieutenant Commander J. K. Esler for the current issue of the Journal of the American Society of Naval Engineers.

Inquiry today revealed that the individual weight savings on the first eight ships runs about the same and that a final check-up will disclose that each ship is at least 500 tons under the displacement of 10,000 tons permitted by the Washington treaty.

Welding Cuts Weight.

The saving effected by the ship building companies as well as other weight reductions obtained by the substitution of welding for riveting on a wider scale than ever before, the use of aluminum paint and furniture, and the development of shorter and more compact propelling machinery will be utilized, naval officers said today, in building better cruisers in the future. It is estimated that on the basis of lessons learned through the manufacture of the first eight ships it will be possible to add 600, or 700 tons more armor plate on each of the last eight or ten 8 inch gun cruisers to be built by the United States under the London treaty than was placed on the first eight constructed.

The armor protection on the latest designed cruisers will run from three to six inches in thickness. Very little armor protection was placed on the first treaty cruisers, because naval officers demanded a speed of at least 32.5 knots, nine or ten 8 inch guns and other fighting characteristics considered more necessary than protection.

According to Lieutenant Commander Esler, a sliding scale bonus of $50,000 was offered the builders of the Salt Lake City for saving effected in weight. The constructors were paid for all reductions below 7,926 tons. The completed ship, without stores, personnel, or ammunition, weighed 7,295.7 tons, just 630.3 tons below the maximum allowance. Lieutenant Commander Esler revealed that the vessel developed 110,254 horsepower and made a speed of 32.77 knots, slightly higher than the designed speed.

As a result of the weight savings effected, the United States will not have a full 180,000 tons of 8 inch gun treaty cruisers if the Washington treaty is ratified. The tonnage will be nearer 175,000 tons unless the navy department decides to make improvements on the eight underweight cruisers to give them greater displacement. Three of these vessels are commissioned, the last five will be commissioned during the year.

May Have Plane Landing Deck.

Lessons learned in the construction of the 8 inch gun cruisers are to be embodied in new 6 inch gun cruisers if the navy finally decides to build any of these vessels. By employing welding in place of rivets many tons will be saved, officers of the construction corps said today. The design of a new 6 inch gun vessel has been worked out by Capt. A. H. Van Keuren, chief naval constructor and one of the advisers at the London conference. This vessel calls for thicker armor plate and higher gun elevation than is built into existing American 6 inch gun ships.

This will enable these vessels to increase the range of their main batteries above 24,000 yards. It is possible airplane landing decks would be designed for some of the 6 inch gun ships.

PINCHOT'S CANDIDATE FOR STATE CHAIRMAN OF G. O. P. IS DEFEATED

Philadelphia, Pa., June 7.—(AP)—The power of the Republican organization of Pennsylvania asserted itself today, crushed Gifford Pinchot's candidate for state chairman, and reëlected Brig. Gen. Edward Martin head of the state committee.

Martin won by a vote of 77 to 37 over S. Van Brown, chairman of the Lycoming county committee, who had the full support of Pinchot and the aid of Senator Joseph R. Grundy.

When it was all over Pinchot took the platform, thanked the Republicans of the state for nominating him, congratulated Gen. Martin on his reëlection, demanded that the public utilities of the state give the people a square deal, and demanded the help of the party in putting an "end to vote stealing in the Keystone state."

JOHNSON FLAYS WITHHOLDING OF NAVY PACT DATA

Holds Committee Should See All Documents.

cess must often depend on secrecy; and even when brought to a conclusion a full disclosure of all the measures, demands, or eventual concessions which may have been proposed or contemplated would be extremely impolitic; for this might have a pernicious influence on future negotiations or produce immediate inconveniences, perhaps danger and mischief, in relation to other powers.'

"This message was to the house of representatives, not to the senate. The point then at issue has been misunderstood by the secretary of state, and his quotation, by a singular oversight, stops short of what makes plain Washington's meaning."

Rest of Message Quoted.

Senator Johnson then proceeded to quote the Washington message further as follows:

"To admit, then, a right in the house of representatives to demand and to have as a matter of course all the papers respecting a negotiation with a foreign power would be to establish a dangerous precedent. . . . I repeat that I have no disposition to withhold any information which the duty of my station will permit or the public good shall require to be disclosed; and in fact, all the papers affecting the negotiation with Great Britain were laid before the senate when the treaty itself was communicated for their consideration and advice."

"Thus," remarks Senator Johnson, "it will be observed that the denial of the papers by President Washington was to the house of representatives which was not a part of the treaty making power, but that all the papers and documents were laid before the senate, which was a part of the treaty making power."

Ready to Guard Data.

After suggesting that the state department representatives study the controversy between the house and President in 1796 Senator Johnson stated that the senate foreign relations committee always has zealously guarded such confidential information as has been transmitted in the past. He added that any information turned over to it in the present instance would be kept confidential. The California senator concluded his statement by asserting that the present case involving the London treaty is a different proposition than that presented by the Washington controversy.

EDGE ESCAPES FRENCH TARIFF 'GUNS' AT CALAIS

CALAIS, France, June 7.—(AP)—Ambassador Edge emerged today from what he described last night as a "double barreled barrage" of American tariff criticisms at Roubaix and Tourcoing and came to Calais into an atmosphere of peace because congress has dropped proposed increased duties on lace.

Instead of a list of troubles, the ambassador was given thanks because Calais feels that the "menace of ruin" has been lifted.

"We know," said Leon de Croix, president of the chamber of commerce, at a luncheon, "that you were favorable to our cause in this difficult question, and I beg you to accept an expression of all our gratitude."

NEW TARIFF WILL BOOM BUSINESS, WATSON WRITES

Calls Free Trade Idea Pacifist Folly.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 7.—[Special.]—James E. Watson, Republican leader in the United States senate and senior senator from Indiana, has sent a remarkable letter to Nelson Gladding, Indianapolis manufacturer, in which he states that the new tariff schedules will vindicate themselves in six months.

"We have a pretty good tariff bill," he says, "and we are going to pass it unless we get lost in parliamentary technicalities between now and the first of July.

"There is no doubt about a resuscitation of business after passage of this bill. Business is uneasy now because nobody knows what the tariff bill will be.

Uncertainty Worst Evil.

"Any certainty is better than an uncertainty, because however severe financial conditions may be, large numbers of people can adjust themselves to the situation and go on with business, while an uncertainty simply paralyzes all effort.

"This tariff will vindicate itself within six months after its passage and its enactment will be the beginning of a forward movement in business that will result beneficially to the whole American people."

Watson reviewed the causes of the present tariff difficulties as follows:

"The internationalists and pacifists and bolshevists are all working together to overthrow American supremacy of every kind everywhere.

"We have millions of people in the United States who think that we should divide our natural resources with Europe in order to enable them to rehabilitate themselves; or, failing in that, that we should have universal free trade with the world in order to permit those people to sell to us so as to build themselves up, never thinking what it would do to us.

"Always it has been so until a panic came because of free trade, and then the people hurried to cover by electing a protective tariff congress and President. In my judgment, it will be so again, and because of that fact I am depressed by reason of our present industrial stagnation in America.

"The people will not listen to the causes of it, one among which is excessive foreign imports.

Attacks Coalitionist.

"You are right in saying that the effort of the coalitionists in the senate was only a drive at success. The only questions asked were: 'Isn't this institution making money?' If the answer was yes, their invariable reply was: 'Well, then, pull down the tariff, because they don't need it any longer,' or, 'Isn't this a big institution? Well, then, lower the tariff and give them some foreign competition to keep them from becoming any bigger.'

"The primary system is directly responsible for the election of men to the senate who play this sort of game, and until we get back to a system where the thinking leaders of society name candidates and adopt platforms it will continue to be so.

Publicity Big Factor.

"The opposition to the present tariff set up a publicity campaign immediately and has conducted it skillfully since. They have led people to believe all sorts of things about this tariff except the truth. I have seen it before time and again, but this is the worst, simply because our people have altogether neglected publicity.

"I have tried for six solid months to work that out, but I finally gave up in a sort of nervous despair. I am sick at heart over it, but I simply can't help it."

EX-GOV. ROBERTSON OF OKLAHOMA, LONG DRY, NOW OUT FOR REPEAL

Oklahoma City, Okla., June 7.—(AP)—Advocating repeal of the 18th amendment and the Volstead act and substitution of governmental regulation of liquor sales similar to the Swedish or Canadian systems, J. B. A. Robertson, former governor, today announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for United States senator.

He advocated the change "in the interest of true temperance" and asked the support of persons opposed "to a system that furnished a bootlegger in every block and a brewery in nearly every home."

Robertson said he had voted for prohibition and had been "a consistent prohibitionist since long before statehood."

"The present situation in the United States regarding prohibition is intolerable," he declared. "The eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act have proved to be complete failures, as every fair minded citizen must admit."

30 GOVERNORS MEET JUNE 30 IN SALT LAKE CITY

National Topics to Be Discussed.

Salt Lake City, Utah, June 7.—Governors from more than 30 states, representing 68,266,000 of the nation's population, will convene here June 30 for the twenty-second annual national conference of governors.

Topics of far reaching importance are scheduled for discussion during the three days of the conference here. Gov. William G. Conley of West Virginia will discuss "Sales Tax"; Gov. Clyde M. Reed of Kansas, "Taxation of National Banks"; Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, "Old Age Pensions"; and Gov. Frank C. Emerson of Wyoming, "Public Lands." The subject of unemployment also is to be covered.

The conference sessions will be held in the house of representatives at the Utah State capitol in this city. George H. Dern will formally welcome his fellow governors and Gov. Doyle E. Carlton of Florida will respond.

On the evening of June 30 the visiting governors and other dignitaries will be the guests of the Utah Society of Sons of the American Revolution at a banquet.

Following a program of entertainment on the last day of the conference in Salt Lake City the entire delegation will leave on a tour of the national parks of southern Utah and northern Arizona. The governors will leave the special train at Cedar City, Utah, 275 miles south of this city, on the morning of July 3 and proceed by motor bus on the park tour, visiting in turn Zion National park, Grand Canyon National park, Bryce Canyon National park, and Cedar Breaks. The party will leave Cedar City on the special train on the evening of July 6.

The governors will attend the dedication of the Zion-Mount Carmel highway, scheduled for the morning of July 4. This highway was built by the United States bureau of public roads in conjunction with the national park service and the Utah state road commission at a cost of approximately $2,000,000 for the 24 mile stretch. A part of the construction includes two tunnels, one of them 5,215 feet long, which pierce the perpendicular walls of Zion canyon.

Elks' Exalted Ruler Accepts Painting of J. T. Fanning

Walter Andrews, grand exalted ruler of the Elks lodge, formally accepted yesterday at the Elks Memorial building, Diversey parkway and Sheridan road, an oil painting of Joseph T. Fanning painted recently by A. Salzbrenner of Winston-Salem, N. C. Mr. Fanning, now editor of the Elks magazine, is a past exalted ruler of the organization. The picture was the gift of Mr. Fanning's wife.

BORAH WILL NOT JOIN EFFORTS TO CHASTEN CANNON

Impressed by Argument of Bishop.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 7.—[Special.] — Possibility of proceedings against Bishop James Cannon Jr. for contempt of the senate lobby committee appeared more remote today when Senator W. E. Borah [Rep., Idaho] indicated that when the committee meets again next Wednesday he will oppose any move to punish the southern Methodist dry leader.

Heretofore it has been assumed that Borah, holding the deciding vote between Senators T. J. Walsh [Dem., Mont.] and J. J. Blaine [Rep., Wis.], anxious to punish the bishop for what they consider an open affront to the senate itself, and Senators T. H. Caraway [Dem., Ark.] and A. R. Robinson [Rep., Ind.], equally anxious to shield the bishop, would line up with Walsh and Blaine.

Influenced by Cannon's Argument.

While he refused to be publicly committed today, the Idaho senator plainly indicated in discussing the case privately that he is impressed with Cannon's assertion last night that he had no intention of being discourteous to the committee or the senate when he bolted a hearing Thursday after defying the committee and refusing for two days to answer any questions bearing on his activities in the 1928 presidential campaign.

Borah also intimated that he regards Cannon's contention that because a quorum of the committee was not present he cannot be held in contempt as sound and, in addition, that he holds prosecution would be difficult, if not impossible, because, he argued, it would be necessary to prove the bishop's intent to be contemptuous.

Walsh May Go to Senate.

Senators Walsh and Blaine, however, refused to accept what others interpreted as an apology on the part of the bishop, and Walsh indicated that unless the committee votes to issue a subpoena to bring the bishop before the committee again or formally reports the bishop's defiance to the senate the issue may be taken to the senate floor in the shape of an amendment broadening the scope of the resolution under which the committee has been operating.

"Bishop Cannon is exactly in the same position as a witness before any court who has been sworn and then leaves the stand without permission," said Walsh, discussing Bishop Cannon's statement last night. "I do not intend to enter into any newspaper controversy with Bishop Cannon, but I consider that, quorum or no quorum, he is in contempt.

"It would be eminently unfair not to question Cannon, as every one knows the procedure that we have followed with other witnesses, and not to continue this procedure with Bishop Cannon would be unfair to the others."

CATHEDRAL CEREMONY MARKS 800 YEARS OF CANTERBURY WORSHIP

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, June 7.—Canterbury week, a long festival in commemoration of the dedication of the first Norman cathedral built in England 800 years ago, opened this afternoon at Canterbury cathedral—which occupies the same site as the original chapel—with an imposing thanksgiving service.

Practically all of the notabilities of the English church were present in the ancient cathedral town today to partake in the ceremony. Their robes, mingling with the picturesque uniforms of the military and naval personages present, formed a colorful picture as they marched down the central aisle of the famous cathedral.

The service was opened with a fanfare of trumpets. Then a seemingly endless procession started with nobles wearing costumes similar to those of their predecessors throughout the centuries. A notable feature of the service was the singing of the choir which was augmented by several choirs from other churches. The week's ceremonies include musical programs, Shakespeare plays and an exhibition of the cathedral's treasures.

Rattler Bites a Deaf Mute; No One Knows Till He Dies

Bismarck, N. D., June 7.—(AP)—Poisoning from a rattlesnake's fangs caused the death of Mike Azure, 24, a deaf-mute, while he made fruitless efforts to reveal his plight by gestures. He died in 24 hours.

MEMBERSHIP OF CHURCHES IN U. S. IS 44,380,000

3 Out of Every 10 Adults Are Roman Catholics.

New York, June 7.—[Special.]—The growth of church membership in the United States, except in the large metropolitan centers, has kept pace since 1906 with the increase in the country's adult population, while the alue of church property has increased enormously, according to data compiled for the Institute of Social and Religious Research by Dr. C. Luther Fry and made public today. The institute is financed by John D. Rockefeller Jr.

Dr. Fry shows that out of every 100 persons over 13 years of age there are today in this country 55 church members, just as there were 10 and 20 years ago; only 52 per cent of the rural inhabitants belong to church, as compared with 58 per cent of the people living in towns and cities; and nearly half the Protestant ministers are not graduates of either college or seminary.

212 Separate Denominations.

According to the latest returns there are 212 separate denominations having 232,000 churches and 44,380,000 members. Denominational Sunday schools have an enrollment of more than 21,000,000 pupils, excluding the pupils in undenominational Sunday schools and in parochial schools. The value of church edifices alone, not including such items as pastors' residences, investment property, school buildings, hospitals, etc., is given as three billion eight hundred million dollars, while for 1926 the total expenditure of local churches was eight hundred and seventeen million dollars.

"The 232,000 churches compare with 256,000 public school buildings," Dr. Fry says. "The total number of 21,000,000 Sunday school scholars is less by only 3,700,000 than the pupils in all the public elementary and secondary schools. The annual church expenditures of eight hundred and seventeen million dollars are 40 per cent as large as the expenditures of public schools. Clearly organized religion is an enormous social enterprise."

Jewish Membership Is 2,930,000.

The largest single denomination is the Roman Catholic church, with 15,000,000 members 13 years of age and over. This means that 3 out of every 10 adult church members in the United States are Roman Catholics.

The second largest denomination in the United States is the Methodist Episcopal church, with 3,700,000 adult members, or 8.4 per cent of the national total. It is followed by the Southern Baptist convention with almost 3,300,000 adult members, or 7.4 per cent of the entire total.

The membership of Jewish congregations is estimated at 2,930,000. The two other denominations with more than 2,000,000 adult members each are the Negro Baptists and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, while the Presbyterian church in the United States, the Protestant Episcopal church, the Disciples of Christ, and the Northern Baptist convention have 2,000,000 or more.

NEW PANA BANK OPENS JULY 1; BUY DEFUNCT FIRM'S EQUIPMENT

Pana, Ill., June 7. — [Special.] — Stockholders of the New First National Bank of Pana today purchased, subject to approval of the controller of the currency and the federal court, the modern bank building, vaults, safe, and entire equipment of the defunct Pana National bank. The new bank will open July. 1.

E. T. Martin, receiver of the Pana National bank, which closed its doors following a heavy run March 28, has approved and negotiated the sale.

Pana has been without a bank since that time. The consideration was not disclosed. The First National bank stockholders will elect a directorate and officers June 16. It will have $100,000 capital and $25,000 surplus, paid up.

CHILD PACKS 9 DAYS AHEAD OF TRIP TO CAMP

Donors Make Algonquin Vacations Possible.

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.

The Oskowsky's family calendar, hanging in their tiny kitchen down on Maxwell street, looks as if the baby had used it for a writing pad. But on closer inspection you'll find the baby's elder sister has been doing a job of careful bookkeeping. Ask Mrs. Oskowsky and she will tell you:

"My girl, Rosie, she keeps track how long until we'll take a trip to Camp Algonquin. See?" she points at the unpenciled numbers. "Just nine more days!"

Clothes Are Packed.

That really isn't all Rosie has been doing evenings after school. In her tiny bedroom is a straw suitcase. Carefully folded and spotlessly clean are Rosie's clothing which will serve as camp togs. There's a place to wash clothes at Algonquin, and two changes are aplenty. Besides Rosie cannot take too many of her own things, because she'll have to save room for the baby's.

In close to a hundred homes this week, the hardships of the last winter will be forgotten. If another torrid wave comes along, the families who are preparing for vacations at Camp Algonquin June 17 will scarcely mind that. For the Oskowskys, the O'Briens, the Cohens, and the Smiths and lots others are going to take vacations just like other people this year. Out at a camp on a cool river, living in cottages just like other folks, being outdoors in the sunlight which is so much friendlier out there.

Respond to Gift Call.

Vacations the first two weeks at Algonquin, THE TRIBUNE's camp for tenement mothers and children, will cost in the neighborhood of $10 for each of the 180 visitors. Already readers are responding to the call for $10 gifts, $10 being the cost of a two weeks' vacation for a mother or a child. Since previous acknowledgment the following gifts have been received for the Camp Algonquin fund:

Elizabeth Porter	$ 25.00
C. M. Elliot	10.00
F. H. B.	10.00
Mrs. E. N. Hully	10.00
In memory of a little child	10.00
Mrs. Julia Zuckerman	10.00
F. G. Brown	10.00
Total	$ 85.00
Previous acknowledged	$567.50
Grand total	$652.50

One $10 gift came from a Los Angeles woman spending the summer in Chicago, who wrote: "I must give it for some one who needs the ejoyment as well as I do." Others sent similar messages of gratitude over being able to help.

LUTHERANS ACCEPT BISHOP'S GOLD CROSS WITH RESERVATIONS

Rock Island, Ill., June 7.—(P)—The Lutheran Augustana synod at the opening sessions of its seventy-first annual convention today disposed of a principal issue by accepting with reservations the gold bishop's cross of the Church of Sweden given to Dr. G. A. Brandelle, president of the synod, and his successors.

A resolution accepting the cross explained that although the synod did not adopt any episcopal symbol to be worn by the incumbent of the president's office, the gift would be cherished as a symbol of unity between two independent Lutheran churches.

In his annual report Dr. Brandelle pleaded for a continuance of prohibition laws, declaring that "a great reform like this requires a long time to grow into the consciousness of the people."

Shoots at Self in Target Range, but Misses Thrice

Atlantic City, N. J., June 7.—[U. P.]—Samuel Asch, 19, of New York, walked into a shooting gallery here, picked up a rifle and fired three shots at himself instead of at the clay targets. He missed each time.

BRITAIN BLAMES BOOST IN CRIME ON "MOTOR AGE"

Analysis Shows Youth Is Greatest Offender.

BY JOHN STEELE.

LONDON, June 6.—The necessity for new methods to deal with the present generation of "motor age" criminals is one of the chief conclusions of an analysis of English crime issued by the home office tonight in the form of a blue book.

The "motor age" has undoubtedly resulted in increased crime, according to statistics contained in the analysis. In metropolitan police districts, crime has risen 106 per cent since 1911, but in the country districts it has been boosted 437 per cent.

"It cannot be doubted," the home office report says, "that the increase of crime is due to the coming of the motor age."

Easier for Criminals.

It is pointed out that with an automobile, a criminal can travel faster and farther afield with less chance of interference or arrest. The automobile also enables more people to live either permanently or spend week ends in the country, where housebreaking is obviously easier, while town houses are often left empty while their occupants motor in the rural areas. New dwelling places in the country tempt the criminal and strain the resources of the police, the report says.

"The temptation to be criminally disposed in town areas is two-fold—first to 'borrow' a car, second to 'do a job' with it," continues the report. "The chances of doing a job successfully and of getting away is so much greater in the country that only the most daring prefer the more dramatic smash and grab raid in the middle of towns."

The report also asserts that some of the bold type of crimes are dying out altogether, but the society of today is menaced by a new type—the motor age crime.

Blames Crime on Young Men.

Young men constitute today's criminals and in this connection the policy of leniency is blamed, says the report. It is suggested that longer prison sentences may be necessary as a remedy in order to provide greater periods for training and reformation. In an analysis of court convictions, the report says, those too young to have served in the war have come out the worst in comparison.

On the question of education and crime, the conclusion reached is that "figures do not suport, but refute the suggestion that education causes more crime, and in particular more crimes of dishonesty."

Murders in England and Wales remain constantly between the figures of 100 and 200 yearly; men are more prone to commit murder when over 30 years of age and women under 30. In 1928 there were 129 murders.

The increase in sex crime is thought to be accounted for largely by the moral outlook of men and women and the greater interest taken by women in matters concerning sex, which, is leading to more reporting in the newspapers of sex offenses.

The report refutes the theory that the modern criminal possesses more brains than brawn, and in spite of the vast increase in women's activities an analysis shows that there has been no increase in women's crimes.

SALOONS FLOURISH IN FRANCE; ONE BAR FOR EVERY 53 INHABITANTS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, June 7.—There is one saloon for every 53 inhabitants in France, including women and children—not to mention thousands of "speakeasies" selling liquors without the government's license, where connoisseurs can still quench their thirst with real pre-war absinthe, which was prohibited in 1915.

According to the latest estimates issued by the ministry of finance, there are exactly 470,672 "bistros"—as the French call their drinking establishments—for a total population of 39,209,760 inhabitants.

The saloon industry, which is more and more prosperous, constitutes the best organized private administration in France. It flourishes under the official protection of governments and ambitious politicians who recruit in the saloons their best electoral supporters. The influence of saloonkeepers is said to be so strong that no government could resist an eventual coalition of the members of this honorable corporation.

EDISON TO TALK TO POWER MEN IN WORLD HOOKUP

Broadcast Feature of Big Berlin Show.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, June 7.—Leaders of the world's power industry will gather in Berlin, London, San Francisco, and in Thomas A. Edison's laboratory at Orange, N. J., on June 18. Although thousands of miles apart they will talk together and five continents will be able to listen in. The last details for preparing this feat of modern radio electricity was perfected today as the outstanding event of the world power conference, which will open in Berlin June 17.

As mapped out by one of America's chief delegates to the conference the "international hookup" will start in San Francisco, when Phillip Carlin, the announcer, will call the roll of American stations on the hookup and Berlin, London and Orange, N. J., will answer.

Sloan First to Speak.

M. S. Sloan, president of the National Electric Association of New York, will then speak for a few minutes and Berlin will respond through Dr. Karl Koettgen, chief of the Siemen-Schuckert works. Lord Derby will then reply from Sunningham near London. Dr. Oscar von Miller is scheduled as the next speaker from Berlin. He developed the country's electrical power and created the "Deutsche Museum," the first great technical museum in the world. Senator Marconi of Italy, father of wireless, will speak from London, while Owen D. Young will answer them all from San Francisco.

300 Delegates from U. S.

Thomas A. Edison has promised to speak from his laboratory in Orange, N. J. Short and long waves will broadcast the speeches to all ends of the world.

The 3,000 delegates from 50 nations have commenced to assemble in Berlin. There will be 300 from America. Experts from all branches will read hundreds of technical papers, of which the American delegates will contribute 60.

The delegates can listen to addresses in French, English or German, as desired. When an address is delivered in one language it will simultaneously be redelivered by interpreters in two others. Delegates, donning head pieces, can test their knowledge of languages by switching from one radio device to the other.

U. S. ENVOY SAILS TO ICELAND FOR 1,000 YEAR FETE

Illinois Man Will Present Statue of Leif Ericson.

BY STANLEY JACKSON.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, Que., June 7.—With hundreds of Icelanders on board the Cunard liner Antonia, Capt. G. W. Melsom sailed from Montreal yesterday. The Antonia is Canada's first passenger liner to visit Iceland and one of the few ships to ply between that country and North America since the famous voyage a thousand years ago by Leif Ericson and many prominent historians, scientist, lecturers, and writers are on board.

Dr. B. J. Brandson, representing the dominion, heads the Canadian delegation at the celebration. The United States is represented by Prof. Sveinbjorn Johnson of the University of Illinois, who has been delegated by President Hoover to formally extend America's good wishes to Iceland.

Will Collect Dry Data.

Prof. Johnson will present a statue of Leif Ericson costing $75,000 to the Icelandic government as an expression of good will from American citizens. While in Iceland he will gather data respecting present conditions from the introduction of prohibition there nine years ago. He stated that plans were on foot to have Iceland represented at the forthcoming World's Fair in Chicago in 1933 in celebration of the 100th anniversary of the founding of the Windy City.

Other passengers include Violet Code, musical opera star of New York, the only Icelandic woman playing on Broadway. Miss Cole will take part in the festivities at Reykjavik and introduce some musical numbers composed by her especially for the occasion.

Among the prominent scientists and historians on board the Antonia are Prof. F. Magoun and Prof. Cawley of Harvard; Prof. Johnson, of South Dakota; Dr. Richard Black, of the University of North Dakota; Dr. A. B. Benson, professor of Germanic languages at Yale university; H. A. Bergman, president of the Manitoba Bar association; Prof. E. J. Walters of New York, representing the American Federation of Arts; Dr. H. Hermannsen of Cornell university, one of the outstanding authorities on Norse literature; and Prof. E. Johnson, of the University of North Dakota.

The Antonia will reach Reykjavik 12 days before the opening of the oldest parliament in the world, the ceremonies of which will be inaugurated by the king of Denmark, who is also king of Iceland.

Sir William C. Craigie well known historian, writer and lecturer on Iceland, is among the notables travelling on the ship. He gave some interesting facts in an interview en route to Quebec relating to the discovery of America going back to the 10th century and dwelling on the first contact made by man with America.

Picked Grapes in Vinland.

"A good many people think Columbus discovered America in 1492," stated Sir William, "but facts gathered during many years of historical research contradict this. Near the end of the 10th century Leif Ericson embarked on a voyage to Greenland but navigated too far south and landed on the coast of Labrador. While ashore he gathered some grapes and berries and hence called the newly discovered land Vinland. He then sailed back to Iceland.

"Evidence has been produced that Columbus had actually been over to America a few years before his famous voyage in 1492 because he laid certain facts before King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella of Spain to persuade them to finance his expedition which proves my contention."

TWO GAS STATIONS ROBBED.

Raymond McGuire, attendant at a gas station at North Kilpatrick avenue and West Washington boulevard, was robbed of $75, and Glenn W. Patterson, attendant of another at 3234 Maypole avenue, of $25 by two robbers in an automobile yeseterday morning.

DR. DICK VICTOR IN COURT BATTLE OVER HIS SERUM

A decision sustaining Dr. George F. Dick and his wife, Chicago scientists of the McCormick Institute for Infectious Diseases, as makers of scarlet fever preventives and cures under a federal patent, was handed down by Federal Judge Coffey in New York yesterday. The Dicks discovered an anti-toxin in 1924 which is believed to be a preventive and cure for scarlet fever.

In order to protect the public from the flood of poor imitations immediately following their discovery, the Dicks had their serum patented. It was made clear at the time, through a discussion brought by the British and American Medical association, that the patent was not sought for personal profit. All surplus earnings were turned back to the institute for research purposes.

The New York suit was brought against the Lederly Anti-Toxin laboratories, which, it was charged, had been making an inferior quality of serum and selling it bona-fide fever preventive. Dr. Dick and officials of the institute said the suit was brought for the protection of the public.

Girl Bookkeeper Accused of $7,500 Embezzlement

Miss Catherine McCambridge, 22 years old, 7809 South Hermitage avenue, a bookkeeper, surrendered at the detective bureau yesterday following issuance of a warrant charging her with embezzlement of $7,500 from the Elbert E. Elmore company, real estate dealers at 7841 South Ashland avenue. She was released on bonds.

NO. SHORE PLANS UNIFIED ACTION TO CURB BANDITS

The ease with which two bandits on Friday walked into the State Bank of Niles and rifled it of $4,000 and escaped has aroused authorities of north shore villages to protective measures. Friday's raid was the third bank robbery along the north shore within the last few months, the others occurring at the Highwood State bank, in which $3,000 was taken, and at the Hubbard Woods State bank.

Chief of Police William E. Freeman of Evanston, president of the Cook County Police Chiefs association, and Chief Charles Holmes of Niles conferred yesterday with a view of inaugurating an extensive anti-bandit campaign. A conference of the association members will be called.

Three measures are under discussion: Guards for the larger banks, an efficient alarm system for all banks, and a low wave radio station to broadcast alarms to police stations and to squad cars.

Two Army Flyers Killed in Canal Target Practice

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

FRANCE FIELD, Panama, June 7.—Lieut. William Lepzig Jr. of Little Rock, Ark., and Staff Sergeant Lloyd Hall, Springfield, Ill., were instantly killed today when the plane in which they were towing an aerial target went into a spin near Fort Randolph, just to the left of the Atlantic entrance to the canal. The lines attaching the target to their plane became entangled in the controls, causing the spin.

CHEVROLET'S
New Service Policy
wins nationwide approval

On January 1st of this year, the Chevrolet Motor Company announced a new owner's service policy—the most liberal ever offered in connection with a low-priced automobile.

Immediately it was greeted with enthusiasm by Chevrolet buyers all over the country—because its many unusual features reduced the cost of ownership and assured even greater satisfaction over a long period of time.

The new service policy is a printed document which we will hand to you when you take delivery on your new Chevrolet Six. In plain, understandable language it states the following provisions:

1—Your automobile is delivered in perfect condition—thoroughly lubricated, properly adjusted, ready to operate efficiently from the very first mile of ownership.

2—You are entitled to free inspection and adjustment of your car at the end of the first 500 miles.

3—You are entitled to a free inspection of your car at the 1,000 mile mark, and periodically thereafter, so long as the car is in operation.

4—You are entitled to replacements covered by Chevrolet's standard warranty without paying a penny's cost for either the parts or the labor involved.

5—Provision No. 4 will be carried out by any Chevrolet dealer in the United States. As a result, you may change your residence or travel to any part of the country with full assurance that the guarantee on materials and workmanship will give you complete protection.

Backing this policy is one of the largest service organizations in the automotive industry—consisting of over 10,000 authorized Chevrolet dealer service stations in the United States alone.

And because we believe that nothing does more to assure lasting owner satisfaction than high grade service, we have built up our service facilities to a point where they are unsurpassed from the standpoint of efficiency and economy.

Our mechanics have been thoroughly trained at factory service schools. Our shop equipment includes specially designed tools and machinery developed exclusively for Chevrolet service work. We always carry an adequate stock of genuine Chevrolet parts. And our standard flat-rate charges on many service and repair operations are the lowest in the entire industry!

Come in! Let us show you that it's wise to choose a Chevrolet Six—not only for smoother performance, greater comfort and smarter beauty, but also for truly economical transportation.

ANOTHER BUREAU SOON STARTS TO REGULATE DRUGS

Congress Agrees on New Federal Board.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 7.—[Special.]—Barring a veto by President Hoover, which is considered improbable, Washington soon will have another addition to its bureaucracy system in the form of a new bureau of narcotics in the treasury department.

The two houses of congress yesterday agreed upon amendments to a bill sponsored by Representative Stephen G. Porter [Rep., Pa.] creating the bureau out of the present bureau of prohibition. If signed by the President it will become effective in thirty days.

Three Bureaus from One.

With the act transferring the bureau of prohibition to the department of justice on July 1, the Porter bill would have the effect of providing three governmental bureaus where one exists now. The transfer act leaves a bureau of industrial alcohol in the treasury. Narcotics, industrial alcohol, and prohibition, now combined in the prohibition bureau, will each be in a separate bureau if the Porter bill becomes law.

The proposed narcotics bureau, with a $9,000 a year commissioner to be named by the President, would take over the duties of the present federal narcotics board as well as of those of narcotics division in the office of the surgeon general of the public health service, thus concentrating all the federal authority in connection with narcotics under the new commissioner.

The narcotics act from the standpoint of convictions and imprisonments, ranks next to the prohibition laws, as the federal government's most important criminal statute. On April 1 there were 2,737 drug law prisoners in the United States prisons or more than 22 per cent of the entire number confined.

Opposed by Medical Men.

Although the Porter bureau bill does not change the present criminal drug act, a second bill by Mr. Porter would give the proposed commissioner sweeping powers over the prescribing of drugs by physicians, making him a virtual czar over the legitimate handling of drugs.

Both of the Porter bills have been attacked by medical authorities, the first on the ground that it is another instance of a growing tendency toward bureaucracy at Washington representing an unwarranted and useless governmental extravagance, and the second on the theory that it would make more difficult the relief of sufferers from pain.

MEXICAN FLYER LOSES WAY NEAR NEW YORK CITY

New York, June 7.—(AP)—Col. Roberto Fierro, Mexican aviator, made a forced landing on Barren island, in Jamaica bay, late today in his flight from Montgomery, Ala., to Roosevelt field. He said he temporarily lost his bearings.

He glided to a perfect landing on the emergency field of the New York City police air force. There was nothing wrong with the plane and he expected to take off soon for Roosevelt field, where he was to be greeted.

A police plane, piloted by Capt Wallander left the central police field at Astoria, L. I., to escort the Mexican flier to Roosevelt field.

Col. Fierro plans a nonstop flight to Mexico City from New York some time next week. He left San Antonio, Tex., yesterday for Montgomery.

Palmer Mansion Carnival Will Continue Today

When the last guests left the Potter Palmer mansion on Lake Shore drive last night, the barkers' stands and the other paraphanelia used in the benefits carnival for the Red, White and Blue club settlement house, were not dismantled as had been planned. The carnival, the committee announced, will be continued today. This will give opportunity, they said, for visitors who could not attend Friday and yesterday to see the old "castle." After the close of the benefit the home will be wrecked to make way for an apartment.

Letter received by Mrs. T. J. Ryan, 5521 South Seeley avenue, Chicago.

Mrs. Ryan relates:

"This letter was written in Ratnapura, Ceylon, by Sister Magdalen of the Order of the Child Jesus. Mail from that part of the world takes about twenty-eight days to reach the United States.

"The writer has spent two years on the island, where the climate is so extremely hot that going abroad without a sunshade is highly hazardous except in the early morning or late afternoon. Sister Magdalen is engaged in the religious and secular education of the natives, who speak no English and are primitive in their customs and beliefs."

Ceylon is an island in the Indian ocean, forming a crown colony of Great Britain. The area, including some small coast islands, is 25,333 square miles.

The surface is generally mountainous in the southern part, but towards the north it expands into a great, wide plain, much of which is an almost impenetrable jungle. In parts the vegetation has a luxuriance defying description, with the result that Ceylon has been called "the pearl garden of the earth." The principal products are tea, coffee, cocoanuts, cinnamon, and cinchona.

The dominant race of people, comprising about two-thirds of the population, are Singhalese, who speak a modern Indian dialect, an Aryan tongue, with a large admixture of Dravidic elements. They are Buddhists.

PACKER HELD AS SLAYER ADMITS ROW OVER GIRL

But Denies He Killed His Business Partner.

Topeka, Kas., June 7.—[Special.]—Louis H. Kimmel who resigned yesterday as president of the Kaw Packing company, after his arrest on charges of murder in connection with the death of his business associate, Roy Kramer, today admitted differences with Kramer over the employment of a young woman, Miss Catherine Vick, a former nurse. Miss Vick was given a position with the Kaw Packing company by Kimmel in the fall of 1928. She was discharged as cashier at the plant today by the new officers elected following Kimmel's resignation.

Kimmel admitted he had given her presents.

Friends of Miss Vick refused to disclose her hiding place today. She never had listed her place of residence at the plant. It was learned she had moved frequently in recent months.

Kimmel denied he had anything to do with the slaying of Kramer and said he could not explain the confession of Virgil Pointer, who has admitted that he is the actual slayer of Kramer, but who says Kimmel paid him to do the killing.

Harvester Co. Wins Fight for Pay Holdup Insurance

A decision of Federal Judge Wilkerson that the International Harvester company could not collect insurance on the $80,000 pay roll lost in a holdup on March 5, 1926, was reversed by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals yesterday. The National Surety company of New York refused payment on the insurance policy on the ground that the pay roll had been delivered to the paymaster and was not in transit when lost. Judge Wilkerson, in the opinion which was overruled yesterday, upheld this contention.

Others who will speak are Rabbi E. Epstein, Rabbi S. Felix Mendelsohn, and Judge Harry M. Fisher. Max Shulman, president of the Chicago Zionist organization, will preside.

DRYS WIN TILT AT CONVENTION OF CLUB WOMEN

Denver, Colo., June 7.—[U. P.]—Ultra drys emerged overwhelmingly victorious today from a clash on the floor of the twentieth biennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. An amendment to the resolutions committee's prohibition resolution which would remove the appellation of "sinister" with reference to opponents of prohibition, was voted down decisively.

Spirited debate preceded the vote on the amendment, which was introduced by Florence Diebert of Pennsylvania. She declared she felt some people "are honest in their convictions that prohibition is wrong, and sinister is a very strong word."

She was answered by Mrs. J. C. Pearson, Marshall, Okla., and Mrs. Edward Franklin White of Indianapolis, Ind., who contended the deletion would lessen the strength of the resolution as presented. A Texas amendment against the resolution, which had been forecast, failed to materialize and in the vote less than a score supported the amendment.

10 Companies Pump Water on Ruins of Loop Building

Ten fire companies were detailed yesterday to pump water on the smouldering interior of the old seven story American Express company building at 23 West Monroe street, which was swept by fire early in the morning. Three firemen and a policeman were injured when the spectacular fire threatened to spread to adjacent buildings and caused a damage estimated at $50,000.

Two Company Officials Robbed of $1,063 Pay Roll

Intercepting a car occupied by Anson Hunt and Henry Schneider, officials of the Wittenmeyer Machinery company, 850 North Spaulding avenue, three robbers yesterday took $1,063, the weekly pay roll. The two had just withdrawn the money from the Madison-Kedzie State bank. The holdup occurred near 725 North Spaulding avenue.

WORK ON NEW I. C. TERMINAL AGAIN DELAYED

Suit Ties Up Project for Another Month.

Hopes for an early start on the Randolph street viaduct over the Illinois Central tracks, and on the new suburban station of the Illinois Central, were dimmed yesterday when it was learned that due to a technicality, a month's work has been lost.

The delay is the result of the necessity for filing a suit in the Circuit court to obtain a settlement of riparian rights and the fixing of new boundaries between the Illinois Central property and that of the south park board.

George E. Gorman, attorney for the park board, filed the suit last May 17 before Judge William V. Brothers, expecting that it would come up at the June term of court. The law requires that the terms of the settlement be published for thirty days in a legal daily, and that this period shall precede the opening of a new court term. It was discovered that Mr. Gorman had delayed one day in presenting the petition, and that consequently it would be necessary to await the July term of court. Meanwhile the project, which is to cost $3,000,000 and employ some 100 workmen, is held up.

The suit was withdrawn, and will be presented again on June 16, which Mr. Gorman says will be in time for the July term. F. L. Thompson, vice president of the Illinois Central in charge of the project, said that as soon as the order is signed by the court the railroad will commence construction.

Judge Brothers, interviewed yesterday, said that if the petition is again assigned to his call, he will give it precedence, hearing it on the first day possible under the publication statute. Attorneys on both sides said there was no contest in the matter, and that the order might be signed by the court after a brief hearing.

If the petition is presented on June 16, the time required for publication will expire on July 21. The matter may be heard on the second day following, July 23, Judge Brothers said.

"This is a project of great public importance," the judge observed, "and it should be given speedy consideration by the courts."

PROFESSOR, WIFE HELD AS REDS, WILL BE FREED

Memphis, Tenn., June 7.—(AP)—Police Commissioner Clifford Davis announced today that he had decided to release Prof. Horace B. Davis, his wife, and Tom Johnson, alleged communists, who have been held in prison since yesterday on charges of threatening the peace of the city.

He said Johnson, whose home is at Cleveland O., would be liberated today on condition that he leave Memphis. The release of Prof. Davis, teacher of economics at Southwestern college, and his wife will take place later, the commission said.

"Horace and Marion Davis seem to have been dupes of this man Johnson, who is a paid spellbinder for the communist party," Commissioner Davis said.

Joe Norvell, a grocer, was arrested today because he was suspected of possessing "dangerous literature." Commissioner Davis said he was an alien and had been refused citizenship papers.

ARRAIGN 123 AFTER RAID.

One hundred and twenty-three men, arrested in a raid by the state's attorney's police on the Biltmore Social club, 2021 West Division street, were arraigned yesterday before Municipal Judge Joseph W. Schulman, who set the case for hearing June 12.

4 KILLED, 3 HURT IN COLORADO MINE DISASTER

Leadville, Colo., June 7.—(AP)—The loosening of a huge boulder by vibrations from an electric drill today precipitated a cave-in in the extreme lower tunnel of the Climax Molybdenum mine, 13 miles northeast of here, killing four miners and injuring three others.

The dead: Louis Barton, 35, Butte, Mont.; Sherman Frazier, 27, Leadville; Ralph Port, 32, Denver; Frederick McMahon, 28, Leadville.

Nick Baron, Archie Wilson, and E. C. Parker of Leadville were seriously injured.

The miners were trapped about 2,000 feet from the mine entrance. Wilson, Parker, and Baron managed to extricate themselves from the debris and struggled down the tunnel for help. Wilson suffered fractures of several ribs and finally collapsed.

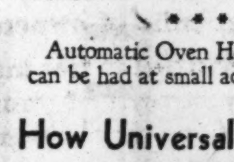
How Universal Oven is Insulated



The sides, back, top and door of oven are heavily insulated with highest grade Filtered Rock Wool. Super-metal containers eliminate any possibility of the Rock Wool shifting.

New Universal Oven Insulation reduces outside oven heat 80 degrees

Stooping and bending over a sizzling hot range on a boiling summer day is no fun. You women who have prepared meals on August afternoons know what torture it is. Your back aches—your heart pounds like a trip hammer—you perspire terrifically!

But—do you know why? The answer is simply this: Your old-fashioned uninsulated oven is fully as hot as the water in your radiator on bleakest sub-zero days. Tests show these temperatures to be 185 degrees hot!

No wonder it is agony to cook in such a kitchen! But now, thanks to Universal's new Insulated Oven, the temperature around your oven can be a full 80 degrees cooler!

It keeps the heat inside where it belongs—to speed up cooking and keep you cool!

Laboratory tests made with an average inside oven temperature of 350 degrees prove the average outside temperature of a Universal Insulated Oven to be only 101.25 degrees. Compare this with the average outside temperature of 185 degrees for your old-fashioned uninsulated oven!

The Filtered Rock Wool insulation used in the Universal saves gas, too. Not only does it maintain uniform temperature in all parts of the oven—it retains oven heat two and a half times longer.

Trade your old gas range for one of these new Universal Ranges and a cooler kitchen this summer. Remember the gas saved will soon pay for it!

Universal In-a-Drawer Broiler makes healthful broiling amazingly easy—Pulls in and out like a drawer

Another wonderful improvement of the Universal Insulated Gas Range is its patented In-a-Drawer Broiler.

This new feature makes the preparation of savory, nourishing broiled foods easier and safer than frying.

The In-a-Drawer Broiler pulls in and out like a drawer. It moves on roller bearings. At a touch of the finger, the entire broiler rolls into view. There is no bending or stooping.

Liberal terms

Any Universal dealer will sell you this famous gas range on easy terms. A small payment puts it and its health-building features and conveniences in your home. Comes in two-tone all-porcelain enamel finish. Its many unusual features are listed in the right-hand column. Read them. Then inspect the range at your local Universal dealer's store.

With a thermometer, a watch and a "show me" air, I started out to shop

"My husband and I agreed that it was high time we got an electric refrigerator. But when it came to selecting the kind we were to get—that's when the fun began.

"You know how husbands are. The more my husband talked about electric refrigerators, the less I found out about them. He insisted on talking about mechanical principles. And what I wanted to know was which one would freeze ice the fastest and keep food the longest.

"I told him that. And he said, 'Oh, of course they're all pretty much alike as far as refrigeration is concerned.'

"Well I didn't believe that—in view of the experience of some of my friends. So I started out one day with a good thermometer and a stern determination to find out what was the best mechanical refrigerator made.

Finally I found what I wanted

"I shan't tell you all the disappointing experiences I had that day. I certainly dug out a lot of information—most of which was not what I wanted to know. But I finally selected my refrigerator. And it was a Frigidaire.

"Why Frigidaire? Well in the first place, the Frigidaire salesman seemed actually pleased to find that I wanted to test Frigidaire with my own thermometer. That was a good sign.

"I took that Frigidaire's temperature in every corner of the cabinet. I took the temperature in each ice tray—found them all well below freezing. Then, by using the 'Cold Control' I reduced the freezing temperature to zero. I decided there would be no question about freezing desserts and ice cubes.

Some surprising facts about operating cost

"I asked where the mechanism was. The salesman smiled as he showed me. It was concealed in the bottom of the cabinet. It had been running almost under my nose but I hadn't heard it. I liked that. Knowing that some of my friends had complained that their electric refrigerators ran too much, I timed this Frigidaire. It ran only a few minutes out of the hour—in a room temperature of 70°. Certainly I couldn't complain of that.

"I didn't say much about the cabinet. As soon as I saw it I knew it would improve the looks of my kitchen a hundred per cent. I saw that the top was smooth and flat and would serve as a convenient shelf when storing or removing food. And the salesman explained about the semi-flexible Porcelain-on-steel finish—showed how the surface couldn't be injured with a lighted match or scratched with a rough-edged coin. But I haven't kept house for twelve years without knowing the advantages of an all-porcelain refrigerator.

The Hydrator . . . an extra service

"Then the salesman demonstrated the Frigidaire Hydrator. He showed me some wilted lettuce and celery that he'd stored in the Hydrator the day before. Wilted? They may have been wilted when he put them in, but what he showed me looked, felt and tasted as though they'd just come from the garden. Knowing, as I did, how my friends had to wrap vegetables in damp cloths and waxed paper to keep them from wilting, I was astonished at what this Hydrator would do.

"By this time I was convinced that what I wanted was a Frigidaire. It had everything I was looking for. I figured that, unless it cost twice as much as any other make, I'd get it. Timidly I inquired the price.

The price was so low I could hardly believe it

"When the salesman told me, I thought he'd made a mistake—was talking about some smaller model. But no. He named the price of the model I wanted and it was lower than the price of any other electric refrigerator I'd seen. He explained why this was possible—that there were three times as many Frigidaires in use as any other make of electric refrigerator—naturally this meant big savings in manufacturing cost. And when he went on to explain that I could buy on practically any terms I wished—well, I just put my thermometer away in my bag and called it a day.

"I had bought a Frigidaire. And with it I received a guarantee of absolute satisfaction backed by General Motors Corporation."

Perhaps you are thinking of buying an electric refrigerator. Perhaps you, too, are somewhat confused about which of the various makes you want. If you are, there may be a suggestion in the foregoing for you.

Of course we invite you to compare Frigidaire with any other make of mechanical refrigerator. And the more exacting your comparison, the more certain you are to select Frigidaire.

Come in and let us demonstrate.

Frank Wykoff, twenty year old phomore from the University of uthern California, broke the world's ecord for the 100 yard dash yester- ay, in the ninth annual national col- iate track and field meet at Stagg eld. The blonde sprinter, whose 148 ounds classifies him as the feather- eight of American dash men, ran e century in 9 4-10 seconds.

Wykoff defeated the greatest field ought together this season. George mpson, who has not lost a race dur- the spring campaign and who also s run the hundred in 9 4-10 seconds ith the aid of starting blocks, was cond. Eddie Tolan, Michigan's Ne- o star who holds the world mark cepted by the International Feder- ion of 9 5-10 seconds, could do no tter than fourth. Ed Toppino, a wcomer from Loyola university of ew Orleans, beat Tolan by inches for ird position.

Wykoff Wins by 2 Feet.

Then came the pair of southern acers, Claude Bracey of Rice insti- te and Cy Leland, Texas Christian iversity.

Wykoff and Simpson did not use arting blocks. Simpson got away orly, but with 30 yards to go pulled on even terms. In the final steps, ykoff strode ahead and his margin victory was two feet.

t was the second time Wykoff, who a member of America's Olympic m in 1928 when a high school boy, run the hundred in record time. had this mark in a meet on the st in May.

Herbert Meier of Iowa State, cred- d with 9 4-10 seconds when he won Big Six championship two weeks o, did not place in yesterday's als. Hutson of Denison was the hth runner.

Anderson Beats Sentman.

Steve Anderson, Washington hur- r, shared honors with Wykoff. He d the ten year old world record the 120 yard high hurdles held Earl Thomson of Dartmouth, de- ting Lee Sentman in 14 4-10 sec- ds. The Illini star, winner of both rdle races in the conference, had lost a race this year until yes- ay.

Six meet records were broken as accompaniment to the achieve- nts of Wykoff and Anderson and other was tied.

Southern California's well balanced m scored in nine of the 15 events win the national title. The Trojans ed up 57 and 27-70 points. Wash- ton finished second, with 40 points, ile Iowa and Ohio led the Big Ten ools in the tabulations. The Hawk- s had 30 and 1-7 points and Ohio, and 1-10. Stanford secured fifth ce, with 28, just nosing out Illi- s. Michigan was seventh.

Sentman and Anderson raced stride stride over the high barriers, but Washington athlete had the bet- of the sprint to the tape.

The defeat brought Sentman back the low hurdle race determined to ak into the list of champions. He the best race of his two years' mpetition for Illinois and broke the e a foot ahead of Rockaway of o State. The time was 23 2-10 sec- equaling the meet record, set by k Cuhel of Iowa in 1928.

Robin Hurler's Homer Beats Cubs, 12 to 9

Brooklyn, N. Y., June 7.—The Cubs' winning streak now is just a memory. It crumpled at nine games when the Robins, unannoyed by the ease with which the champions scored runs, came tearing along in the closing innings to attain a rainy, muddy 12 to 9 verdict in the second of the series. A triumph would have lifted the Chicagoans into a tie for first honors. Teachout will oppose Luque tomorrow.

The pitching arms of Guy Bush, Malcolm Moss, Lynn Nelson and Sheriff Blake went wrong today. McCarthy could not find an effective hurler. He started with Bush, but the Mississippian couldn't hold a five run advantage. He began to wilt in the third and wilted some more in the fourth, when the services of two others were required to end the inning. Five Robins scored in this inning to give Uncle Robby's crowd an 8 to 7 lead. Even this didn't discourage the boys from the west. With a couple of homers in the sixth they moved out in front again and then came some happenings which made a story in themselves.

Nelson Makes Mistake.

When Nelson stepped into the party that had been framed on Bush and Moss in the fourth he put the Robins out of business in a hurry, not only in that round but also in the two succeeding innings. Then, with a one run lead, he committed a grievous error in the seventh, when two men were on the sacks as the result of a single and a hit batter. Bill Clark, who was pitching for Brooklyn at the time, was next, and Nelson took him too lightly. The rookie grooved a ball and Clark swung blindly. The ball cleared the right field wall and the game was gone.

The way in which the Cubs clouted the ball accounted for the fact that four Brooklyn hurlers took part in the dizzy show. One of them didn't last an inning. By the time the fourth ended two others had been disposed of. Among the things done to the trio were homer No. 18 by Hack Wilson and a similar smash by English.

Cubs Score Three on One Hit.

In the first round the Cubs had the unique experience of knocking out a pitcher and scoring three runs, all on one hit. This large dividend on a minimum of hitting was due to lack of control on the part of Phelps. After one was out English, Cuyler, and Wilson walked in succession, filling the bases. Phelps displayed the same generosity toward Stephenson, thus forcing English across the plate. Morrison then took over the assignment and nailed Grimm on a pop foul, but with Hartnett it was different. Gabby drove a single past third base, scoring Cuyler and Wilson and planting Stephenson on third.

A bit of good fortune attended Wilson's home run effort, which netted the Cubs two runs in the third. The inning started with a pass to Cuyler. Hack came slipping up through the mud to lift a foul close to the Robin dugout. Both Lopez and Bissonette wanted it, and in the mixup neither got it. Hack was back on the bench by this time, but didn't object to going out into the rain again. He swung at Morrison's first pitch and it went into the seats in left center.

A three run uprising against Bush in the third was unexpected, in view of the fact that in the first two innings the Cub star hadn't allowed a hit. The first blow off him was Lopez's single. Hendrick batted for Morrison and popped to Hartnett in front of the plate. Gilbert cracked a single to left. The two runners advanced to third and second, respectively, on a wild pitch. Lopez scored while Grimm was retiring Frederick. Then the free hitting Herman whistled a double to right, Gilbert scoring.

Woody Hits Homer.

English's homer with a mate waiting restored the Cubs to an apparently comfortable lead in the fourth. Ray Moss opened the round by passing Beck, who moved up a peg on Bush's sacrifice bunt. Blair's effort was only a pop foul to Gilbert. English followed with his round trip drive which bounced over the low fence in front of the bleacher in left.

The decline of Bush in the fourth started when Finn led off with a single. Slade and Lopez did the same, filling the bases. Bressler batted for Ray Moss and walked, Finn scoring. Gilbert also walked and Slade scored. Bush was considered as unfit for further service, so Malcolm Moss supplanted him, but Frederick welcomed the newcomer with a single, driving Lopez and Bressler home. A pass to Herman filled the bags again. Gilbert ran in while Bissonette was forcing Herman.

Beck's homer in the sixth whittled down the one run lead the Robins had enjoyed for a couple of innings. Beck just bounced the thing over the fence in left center the same as English and Wilson had done earlier. Clark straightened out long enough to suppress Nelson and Blair, but he wasn't that lucky with English. Woody selected a cripple and shot it into the left field seats on a line for his second round trip of the performance. This put the score at Cubs, 9; Robins, 8, but that homer by Clark in the seventh changed everything.

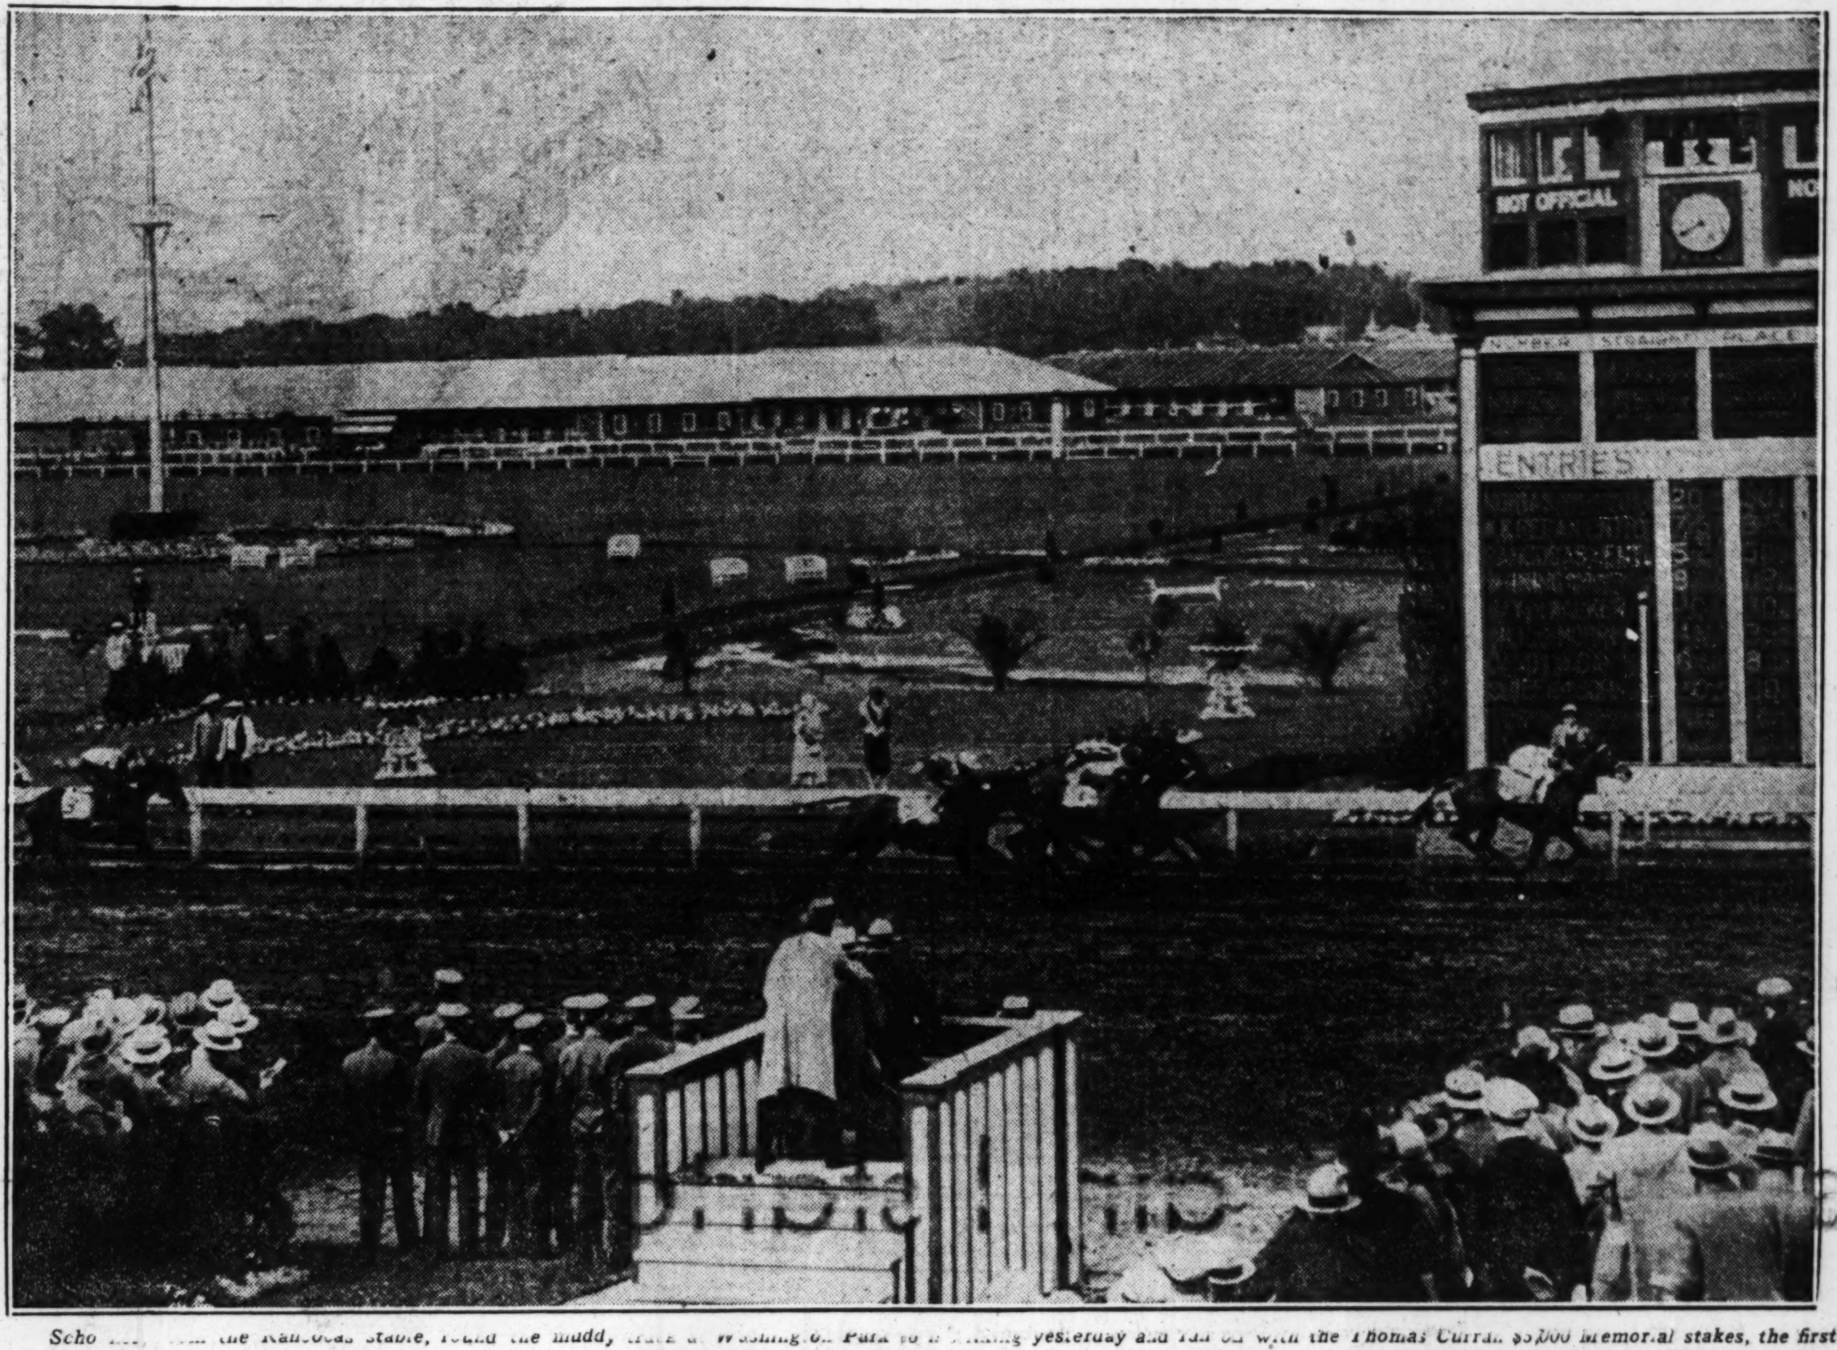
SCHOONER SAILS TO VICTORY IN WASHINGTON PARK MUD



Schooner, from the Rancocas stable, found the muddy track at Washington Park to its liking yesterday and ran off with the Thomas Curran $5,000 Memorial stakes, the first big test for western 2 year olds. Jockey R. Ayraud's mount took the lead at the head of the stretch and went on to win by two and one-half lengths from Norias, a long shot. Foreign Exchange saved third money.

CRITICS FAVOR SHARKEY, BUT THERE'S AN IF

W-G-N, The Tribune's station on the Drake hotel, will broadcast the Sharkey Schmeling fight on Thursday evening. Set your dials for this event from 8:30 to 10 o'clock.

New York, June 7.—Jack Sharkey, American born of Lithuanian parentage, is bigger, stronger, more experienced, and a better boxer than Max Schmeling, the German schlager, who will oppose him for the world heavyweight pugilistic championship at Yankee stadium next Thursday night.

Gauged by the usual ring standards, Sharkey has the qualities which ought to return him winner. That is why he is a 2 to 1 favorite in the early betting and why so many experts are picking him as the next title holder. Most of these experts, however, qualify their selections by an "if," leaving a way out.

Prudence suggests that "if" because these qualities mentioned favoring Sharkey are below the shoulders. Not included are ring generalship, mental condition, actual love of combat itself, and self control while within the padded ring. Those salient factors are above the shoulders.

Has Failed Above Shoulders.

It was above the shoulders where Sharkey failed to reach heights he otherwise might have attained in the three battles which this writer has seen him wage. It is why I have thought the first really good man who came along would defeat the former gob. Whether Schmeling is that man, I do not know, but Schmeling, if defeated, must be defeated above the shoulders as well as below.

Let us look then at Sharkey's favorable points first. He is bigger, as the table of measurements shows. He will enter the ring about ten pounds, possibly twelve pounds, heavier. Therefore he should be stronger. In ring experience, considering the caliber of opponents each has met, the advantage is all with the Bostonian.

Johnny Risko, whom he stopped in nine rounds, and Paulino Uzcudun, over whom he obtained a fifteen round decision, are the only boxers with pretensions to class whom Schmeling has met in this country. He has not fought for nearly a year. As a clever exponent of boxing, boxing as the

Lefty Grove Routed as Sox Whip Champion A's, 6-5

BY EDWARD BURNS.

World champions in 1929 and doped to repeat in 1930, but they were just a bunch of selling platers yesterday against our slugging White Sox. We mean the Philadelphia Athletics, of course—the fellows who took it on the chin in a batting festival at Comiskey park in the opener of the Mack-Bush series. The score was Chicago, 6; Philadelphia, 5.

Mr. Lefty Grove, Connie Mack's prima donna, started the game, but lasted only one and one-third innings. Terrified by the probability that Lefty would be killed or maimed by flying baseballs, the ever humane Connie allowed Robert Mose to flee the premises after he had been attacked for seven hits, thus saving Robert's life and also sparing his clean slate. Lefty's record still stands at seven won and none lost, a fluctuating score ratio having hung yesterday's loss on Rommel, although Eddie was a much more artistic performer than Lefty.

Jolley's Bat Chases Grove.

Reynolds, Jolley, and the amazing Schnozzola Kerr took care of the heavy batting, but they were ably abetted by D. Harris, Shires, Cissell, and Autry, who made only one hit each but did it in vital spots. Reynolds got a double that drove in a run in the first inning and he lined the ball into the upper deck of the left field stand in the fifth for his ninth homer of the year. Jolley drove in a run with a single in the first and later scored, and his second hit which scored Kerr in the second inning was the blow that disposed of Grove. He also singled in the sixth. Kerr made a double and two singles and scored two runs.

The game produced some ordinary pitching by Thomas and McKain and some mighty good work by Dutch Henry. Ted Lyons went in with a runner on third and two out in the ninth and disposed of Pinch Batter Al Simmons.

The champions, their great pride most grievously wounded, will be out today in a most unfriendly mood. But they'll have to beat Lyons with George Earnshaw.

Thomas Quits Early.

Thomas tried out his crazy bone again yesterday, and after Jimmy Foxx had driven in two runs in the first inning he decided the thing was still acting up and left the game.

The Sox were undaunted by Tommy's departure and they went right out and tied the score in their end of the first inning on Kerr's double, Jolley's single, and Reynolds' double.

McKain pitched the second inning and escaped with a one run setback despite the fact the first four batsmen to face him singled and another walked.

In their half of the second the Sox tore into Grove again. A single by

RANCOCAS ENTRY DEFEATS NORIAS BY TWO LENGTHS

BY FRENCH LANE.

Schooner doesn't appear to be a very dignified name for a turf blueblood, yet a colt answering to that name carried the Rancocas stable silks to victory at Washington Park yesterday in the $5,000 added Curran Memorial handicap. It was the first great test of the year for the western juveniles and the youngsters fighting for the crown were forced to race over a very muddy and heavy track.

It was just to Schooner's liking and after overcoming some difficulty in the early stages, the son of Bud Lerner-Pinta, ridden by Jockey Ayraud, moved up with a rush at the head of the stretch and went on to victory by a margin of two lengths and a half. The long shot Norias was second and Foreign Exchange, coupled in the betting with the favorite Insco and Harry Frank, closed an enormous gap and despite a rough journey was third.

May Be Another Lemon.

If Insco continues to run as he did in the Curran it won't be long until the railbirds begin calling him the $25,000 lemon. He was bought at the yearling sales last August at around that mark, being a son of Sir Gallahad III and out of the mare Star Flight.

The purchaser was Griffin Watkins, the Illinois shoe man, who doesn't seem to care what he pays for a horse just as long as he is a horse with four legs and of royal blood lines. Some day he may buy a great one but it is very doubtful if Insco will turn out that way. Insco never figured in the running of the 2 year battle. Perhaps he didn't like the muddy going for he was far back all the way.

Insco's failure shouldn't take any of the credit away from Schooner. He also had some difficulties to overcome but once he was running in full stride at the head of the stretch there was no stopping him. He ran past Norias as if she was standing still and was going away from all the others at the end.

Schooner Pays $11.64.

Schooner's price in the mutuels was $11.64 and he covered the 5½ furlongs in 1:12 1-5, which was slow time. There was a jam coming out of the turn, in which Bill Morris and his pilot, Jockey C. Corbett, were the offenders. Harry Frank and Foreign Exchange both suffered. Jockey Corbett was suspended for five days for causing the trouble.

While Schooner was the real hero

TAKES LEAD AT START, BREAKS TRACK RECORD

Wins by 3 Lengths to Earn $66,040.

BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.

New York, June 7.—Gallant Fox and Jockey Earl Sande today defeated Whichone, champion two year old of 1929 and 3 to 5 choice in the speculation, just as convincingly and just as easily as he outfooted his field in the Kentucky Derby. His margin at the end of the one and one-half mile route of the sixty-second Belmont stakes was three lengths over the Whitney color bearer. Questionnaire was another three lengths back and Swinfield a distant fourth.

Thus Gallant Fox becomes unquestioned three year old champion. In the Preakness and Kentucky Derby he had eliminated all other candidates for the honor which were in training. Whichone was not ready for those events, so only Whitney's son of Chicle stood between the Fox and his title.

So impressive was the victory that no question was left in the minds of the brilliant assemblage of 40,000 persons as to the relative merits of Gallant Fox and Whichone.

Sets Record for Stakes.

Before describing the race in limited detail, for the winner led from barrier rise to finish, let us recount just what Gallant Fox accomplished today and previously. First he set a new record for the stake of 2:31 4-5. He rewarded us westerners who saw him win at Louisville and who had courage to buck expert eastern opinion with $8 for each $5 we invested. In racing parlance, he was 8 to 5, second choice.

That is only the start of the story. Gallant Fox in today's event earned $66,040 net for Owner William Woodward, vice chairman of the Jockey club and president of a New York bank. From the gross of $81,340, second, third, and fourth horses received, respectively, $7,500, $3,000, and $1,000, and nominators of the first three horses $2,000, $1,000, and $500 each.

This Belmont winning of $66,040 brings Gallant Fox's total earnings for this season to $183,840 and with his two year old purses to a grand total of $203,730.

May Become Greatest Money Winner.

With the Arlington Classic, American Derby, and Lawrence Realization in the future, it is possible for Gallant Fox, if he does not train off, to become the greatest money winning thoroughbred of all time.

If all these honors are not enough, Gallant Fox also equaled Sir Barton's 1919 record in winning the Preakness, Kentucky Derby, and Belmont stakes. As in the Kentucky Derby, Earl Sande, who was cheered by every one as his mount cantered back before the long grandstand and clubhouse, was not called upon for any great display of riding skill. As turfmen say, he had only to "ride as fast as his horse ran." It was Gallant Fox, which won, on his own speed and stamina.

After the race Sande said: "We got off well and Gallant Fox was so full of run I let him stay in front. There never was a time I was worried. As the furlongs reeled off with us still in front, I kept expecting a challenge. But Gallant Fox had so much left that I suppose it did not look like there was a challenge. Gallant Fox is a great horse."

Have a Louisville Rain.

Detracting from the society feature of the occasion and preventing the parade of fashionables on the Turf and Field club lawn, was a drizzling rain for several hours, not unlike that at Louisville. At first Gallant Fox admirers feared this rain might enhance Whichone's chances, for the Whitney colt has been tried over heavy tracks. The rainfall, however, did not soak into the hard baked track.

As the four starters paraded before the stands, Gallant Fox, as usual, wore his scarlet hood. None was fractious, although Gallant Fox took one canter through the barrier before the limited field was sent away to a good start with Gallant Fox showing in front, Questionnaire second, Swinfield third, and Whichone last. That was the order swinging around the first turn, with the favorite four lengths behind the leader. To the quarter they went in :25 1-5, the half in :50.

Wichone Moves Up at Mile.

Gallant Fox was running in a free stride and Sande was exercising a restraining hold visible to those with field glasses. Sonny Workman, astride Whichone, seemed content with his position until about half the journey around the oval, which is 1½ miles around with both start and finish directly in front of the stand. After six furlongs had been reeled off in 1:15 4-5, Workman took Whichone past Swinfield, which found himself in too fast company. For just a few seconds, Questionnaire closed part of the prevailing length and a half between himself and Gallant Fox, but the Fox quickly bounded back to his old lead.

At the mile Questionnaire still was second, but Whichone was moving up and soon was in second place. Whichone closed to within two lengths of the leader, but Gallant Fox was just going along in a business like way and had plenty in reserve, so Whichone just trailed down the track after gaining second position.

For a duel so keenly anticipated it is not detracting anything from Gallant Fox's victory to say that the Sir Galahad colt won a hollow victory.

8,500 Fans Are Playing a New Game

More than 8,500 Chicagoans are playing Spot the Ball. It's sport's newest game. Why not try it?

Russell Henderson, 2045 N. Sawyer avenue, submitted such an example of detective work last week that he and three of his pals will be the guests of THE TRIBUNE at the White Sox-Athletics game today.

Some one else will win four box seats to next Sunday's game between the Sox and Boston. All you have to do is mark a cross [x] on the spot where you think the ball should be in the above picture. It was plainly visible in the original photo, but has been retouched out by a TRIBUNE artist.

This interesting game is open to every one except employés of THE TRIBUNE. All you have to remember is that entries close at midnight Wednesday. Nothing hard about that, is there?

Today's Spot and Ball play occurred in yesterday's game at Comiskey park. Jolley of the Sox is safe at home in the first inning. Dave Harris is the south side player coming up to bat. Umpire McGowan is at the plate. Mickey Cochrane, Philadelphia catcher, is the man who apparently is walking away from the play.

Where is the ball? That is for you to figure out. There are no rules. Just study the picture, mark an [x] where you think the hidden ball should be and mail it to the Spot the Ball Editor of THE TRIBUNE.

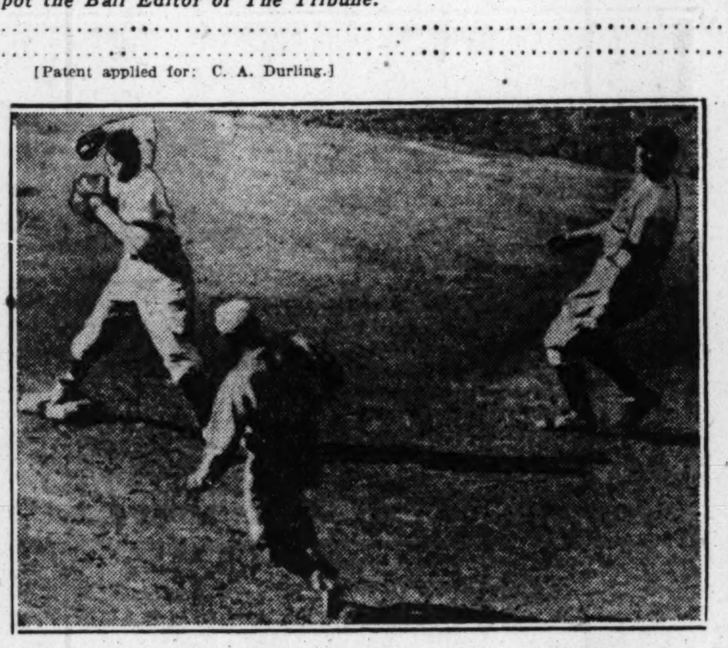
DIRECTS ATHLETICS.

Shelbyville, Ill., June 7.—[Special.]—William Bishop, assistant coach, will be in charge of all sports at Shelbyville High school next year. Palmer Ewing, head coach, has been promoted to principal.



This is a reprint of last week's Spot the Ball play, showing the ball as it appeared in the original picture. Russell Henderson was first to detect the hidden ball in the hands of the player standing on the bag. Easy, wasn't it? Then try to find it in the picture at the top of this page.

RACING WORLD TURNS EYES TO AMERICAN DERBY

$50,000 Stake 22d Renewal of Historic Race.

The American Derby, first run in 1884 at old Washington Park, will be renewed for the twenty-second time at new Washington Park, near Homewood, next Saturday afternoon. The race, a gallop of a mile and a quarter for 3 year olds, carries an added money prize of $50,000.

American Derby away back 35 and 40 years ago was the signal for almost a solid week's celebration in Chicago. Conditions have changed since those days. The new Derby throng is a generation accustomed to big sporting events and each season offers many rich races.

Yet the American Derby is still the American Derby. There is a history back of the old race almost as colorful as the history of the Kentucky Derby, the Belmont stakes, and other great events for 3 year olds staged on the American turf each year.

Expect Crowd of 50,000.

Although the running of Belmont in New York yesterday went a long way toward determining the year's 3 year old championship, the American Derby will be a great attraction. Col. Matt J. Winn, president of the American Turf association, which is staging the Derby, believes the attendance will be upwards of 50,000, and he expects the field to be larger than the one which faced the barrier in the Kentucky Derby last May 17.

The American Derby this year attracted about 30 more nominations than the Kentucky Derby, and some of those drawn into the Chicago race which passed up the Kentucky Derby are among the stars in the division Whichone and Gallant Fox are eligible, and officials of the Washington Park Jockey club expect definite announcement today if one or both of them will be here to seek the American Derby prize.

But if both should invade Chicago they will not scare many of the others out of the race. For the trainers of Gallant Knight, Broadway Limited, Tannery, Alcibiades, Dixie Lad, Bezonian, Revellie Boy, Flyer, Ned O., Dedicate, Plucky Play, Sydney, and others are not willing to concede the 3 year old honors to the winner of the Belmont Stakes.

Snowflake Likely Starter.

Another filly aside from Alcibiades looms dangerously, and she is also an Oaks winner. Snowflake, from the W. J. Salmon stable, won the American Coaching Club Oaks at Belmont Park last week and word came from the east yesterday that it is the plan to start her in the American Derby.

There are about 30 lesser lights among the Derby eligibles at Washington Park. Some of them no doubt will go to the post, and the outlook a week in advance of the race was for a field of 15 starters and perhaps more if Whichone and Gallant Fox both should decline the issue.

From Belmont Park tomorrow will come quite a delegation of Derby visitors from the east. The westerners already were beginning to arrive yesterday and by midweek it is expected most of the leading race followers in the country will be here awaiting the Derby.

Arlington Park Sets Dates for Two Big Races

The dates for the running of the rich array of stake events during the summer turf season at Arlington Park were made public yesterday by Otto W. Lehmann, president of the Arlington Jockey club.

The Arlington Classic for 3 year olds, carrying $70,000 in added money, is to be renewed on Saturday, July 12, and July 19 was the day selected for the first running of the Arlington Cup. Mr. Lehmann believes championships will be decided in both events.

These races will be features of a meeting of thirty days, which will begin June 30 and continue through Aug. 2. The purse distribution will be $650,000. Since originally announced, the program has been revised upward several times.

The Classic should gross nearly $90,000 and, with a field of normal strength competing, pay its winner close to $80,000. The cup should gross $30,000 or more with $25,000 or better for the winner.

The officers of the Arlington Jockey club are: Otto W. Lehmann, president; Laurence H. Armour, Weymouth Kirkland, John R. Thompson Jr., and Roy D. Keehn, vice presidents; Roy Carruthers, secretary and managing director; Leonard S. Florsheim, treasurer; Charles A. McCulloch, chairman of the board of directors, and John Hertz, chairman of the executive committee. The Arlington program in full follows:

Monday, June 30—Inaugural handicap, $7,500 added; 3 year olds and up; 7 furlongs.

Friday, July 4.—Stars and Stripes handicap, $20,000 added, 3 year olds and up, mile and a furlong.

Saturday, July 5—Arlington Oaks, $15,000 added, 3 year old fillies, mile and a furlong, and Hyde Park stakes, $5,000 added, 2 year old colts and geldings, five furlongs and a half.

Saturday, July 12—Classic, $70,000 added, 3 year olds, mile and a quarter, and Lassie stakes, $5,000 added, 2 year old fillies, five furlongs and a half.

Saturday, July 19—Arlington cup, $25,000 added, 3 year olds and up, mile and a quarter, and Cherry Circle claiming stakes, $5,000 added, 3 year olds and up, one mile.

Saturday, July 26—Arlington handicap, $35,000 added, 3 year olds and up, mile and a quarter; also a steeplechase feature, the conditions of which will be announced later.

Saturday, Aug. 2—Post and Paddock stakes, $15,000 added, 2 year olds, six furlongs, and Matron handicap, $7,500 added, mares 3 years old and up, one mile.

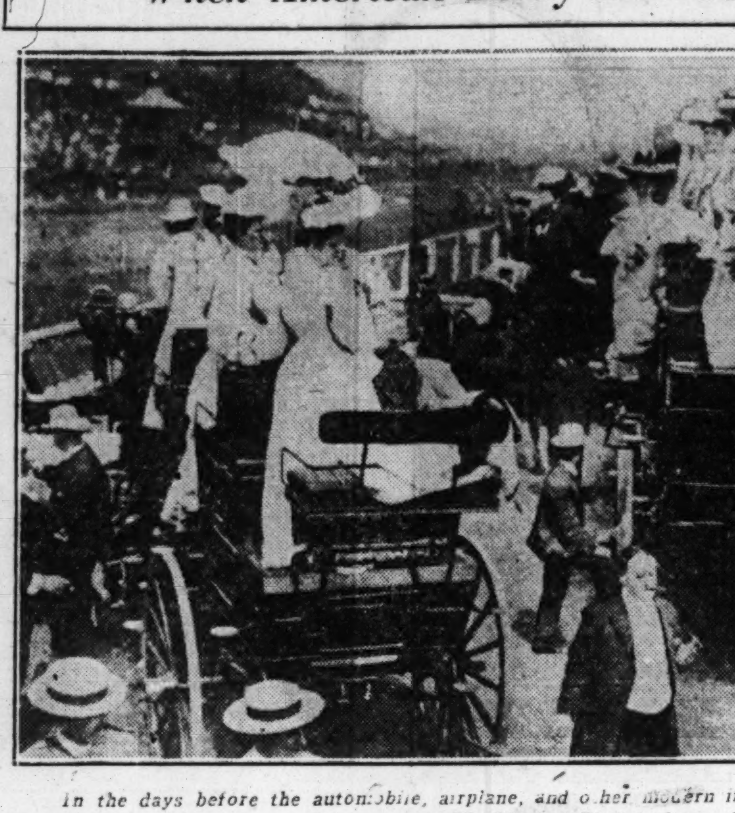
When American Derby Was Gala Holiday



In the days before the automobile, airplane, and other modern inventions for travel, women racing patrons went to the American Derby at old Washington Park in horse drawn vehicles—carryalls, carriages, and tallyhos. White was the predominating color, and flowing skirts and parasols were the fad.

Schooner Is Victorious in $5,000 Race

of the day, Jockey Paul Neal sort of divided honors with him. The Illinois boy kicked three winners home, starting his string with Nisa, a 10 to 1 shot, in the second race, and winding it up on Black on White in the closing number. In the meantime he had climbed into the saddle on Cayuga in the Riverdale handicap and had booted that fast mud runner home by a wide margin over Tippy Toe and Clubhouse.

It was the first good race Cayuga had run since early May at Churchill Downs, but it was also the first time he found the kind of a track he likes best. Neal beat the barrier with him and had him in front from three to five lengths all the way around the six furlong journey.

The attendance was around 15,000 and the crowd was as interested in the outcome of the Belmont stakes as in the result of the Curran handicap. When it was announced that Sande had ridden Gallant Fox to victory there was a mighty cheer.

Walter Zale and Glen Price of Chicago will pilot the Rajos while Pip Hansen will drive the Fronty. Glen Fites, veteran Hammond race driver, has entered a Whippet special which has won money at Crown Point and Indianapolis dirt tracks this season.

2THOROUGHBREDS DIE IN FIRE AT PEABODYSTABLES

Bossie Hattie Perishes; Building Loss $50,000.

Two thoroughbreds perished early yesterday when fire destroyed the sumptuous stables of Stuyvesant Peabody, millionaire Chicago coal dealer and turfman, on his Arrowbrook farm, west of Lemont, in Will county. The loss of the stables was estimated at $50,000 and that of the race horses at almost this amount.

Nine other horses had been removed from the stables two days before and taken to Washington Park by Robert McGarvey, trainer. The telephone connections at the farm were broken by the fire and Mrs. McGarvey was unable to reach the Lemont firemen in time to save any of the stables. Crossed wires were believed to have caused the fire.

Bossie Hattie Is Destroyed.

Bossie Hattie, a two year old filly imported from England, was one of the thoroughbreds burned to death. Daughter of Lady Hatten and Golden Boss, famous English thoroughbreds, she had given promise in tryouts of achieving fame of her own, according to Mr. Peabody. She had run the eighth mile course around the stables in eleven seconds.

The other horse was an unchristened yearling, sired by Omar Khayam. Mr. Peabody declined to estimate the value of the horses, but asserted that Bossie Hattie was "priceless."

Mr. Peabody was notified of the fire at his home, 1525 North State park way, by a telephone call from Mrs. McGarvey. He particularly lamented the loss of the filly.

Shown Good Prospects.

"We have been holding her back to start her as a three year old," he said, "and she had wonderful prospects."

Mr. Peabody is a partner with Col. Matt Winn in the Washington Park, Lincoln Fields and other racing enterprises. He is president of the Peabody Coal company and of the Consumer's company.

The stables, opened Christmas day, 1927, contained twenty box stalls, and the circular 220 yard track was glass inclosed. The garage nearby, containing one automobile, as well as a water tower, also were destroyed, and the farm house was slightly damaged.

The former California net star also played in the women's doubles finals, teaming with Miss E. R. Clarke of England in a losing effort against Miss Edith Cross of California and Miss Sarah Palfrey of Boston, the "all-American" team winning, 6-4, 4-6, 6-2.

DAD SURRENDERS CLAIM TO SHARE OF DERBY POOL

QUEBEC, June 7.—[U. P.]—The Daughertys of Brooklyn, upon whom a $149,000 Derby sweepstakes ticket fell like an apple of discord, turning father against sons, composed their quarrel today by compromise, in light of a new danger.

The compromise was that the two sons, Edward Patrick Daugherty and Daniel Daugherty Jr., will share fifty-fifty in the $149,262, with Daniel Daugherty, still querulously complaining, left out.

The squabble was settled, however, because of the impending descent upon the elder Daugherty of a missing wife—hitherto not reckoned with in the division of the spoils—who threatened to sue the elder Daugherty for his share.

The threatened suit brought the three male Daughertys into one solid front against Mrs. Daugherty, and the result was a signed agreement by which the father relinquishes all claim.

WOMEN GOLFERS SCORE WELL IN TRIBUNE TRIALS

Mrs. Johnson Shoots 86 at Jackson Park.

BY HOWARD BARRY.

Chicago golfers yesterday completed the first week of competition for places in THE TRIBUNE'S public links golf tournament. There were some low scores, but as this meet is designed to give the thrill of big time competition to the average player, it is not expected that there will be many par shattering cards. The last day to get them in is June 16.

Women are making bids for places with the same determination as men. Mrs. Thomas Ricketts, president of the Woman's Jackson Park Golf club, shot a first round of 87. Another member of her foursome, Mrs. Ester Johnson, did even better, reporting an 86 against a woman's par of 73.

If you haven't entered this qualifying competition there is still time. Go to your favorite public links today and shoot 18 holes. Then mail your card to THE TRIBUNE Golf Editor. It must be signed by a member of your foursome and carry your own address and telephone number.

June 16 Is Deadline.

Play a second round of 18 holes as soon as you can and get your card in promptly. If you can play both rounds today so much the better. Remember the deadline is June 16. If your total for the 36 holes is among the 32 lowest you will qualify for the match play which will be held June 19, 20 and 21. Silver cups will go to the man and woman who come out on top.

This is your chance to find out how Bobby Jones and Glenna Collett feel when they step up to the tee at the start of a big tournament. It's true that golf is a lot of fun when you play an informal round with a few of your friends, but the real kick comes when you go cut to battle an opponent with a trophy at stake.

It's one thing to sink a long putt or lay a mashie shot dead to the pin when nothing particular is hanging in the balance, but it's a far different thing to do it with a championship at stake. Maybe your nerves will prove to be steadiest under stress, as are those of so many great "money" players. You can't tell until you've put them to the test.

A Test for Nerves.

Did you ever see Walter Hagen begin one of his famous rallies and beat par all the way home with a title at stake? Do you remember when Grover Cleveland Alexander was sent in to fan Tony Lazzeri with two out in the last of the ninth and the baseball championship of the world depending on the cleverness of his curves? Do you recall how Bill Tilden in his prime could spot an opponent two sets, then wear his nerves ragged and take three in a row to run out the match?

Maybe you have that coolness under pressure which makes a champion in every sport. You'll never know until you've tested yourself in match play for a trophy. THE TRIBUNE tournament offers that chance to every man and woman who plays upon the public links. Shoot a round today and put your card in the mail box tonight.

As there are 1,178 entries, 1,140 will play in the qualifying rounds for the 122 available places.

The exempt players include the members of the Walker cup team, Bobby Jones, Jimmy Johnston, Francis Ouimet, George Von Elm, George Voigt, O. F. Willing, Don Moe and Roland Mackenzie.

BOY SCOUTS, HOW WOULD YOU LIKE THIS RIVER TRIP?

Date Set for Annual Tribune Canoe Cruise.

BY BOB BECKER.

All aboard for the Tippecanoe river and the famous Indian battleground near that stream!

This is a call to Chicago Boy Scouts, 15 and 16 years old, for the third annual canoe and camping cruise sponsored by THE TRIBUNE and conducted in coöperation with the Boy Scout organization of this city. The expedition will leave next month for Indiana's historic Tippecanoe river, where years ago Indians fought to swipe out a contingent of Uncle Sam's soldiers.

First Cruise on Rock River.

In 1928 THE TRIBUNE cruise took a large party of youngsters down the Rock river from Rockford to the Mississippi. Last year another party, chosen because the boys were expert swimmers, knew how to handle a canoe and had won merit badges in campcraft, went to the upper Muskegon river, launched their canoes in the swift water and paddled and camped for 100 miles before taking out at the city of Muskegon.

This year the lucky youngsters picked to go on THE TRIBUNE cruise will have a chance to see an equally interesting and scenic part of Chicagoland. The Tippecanoe flows through beautiful hilly country and offers opportunities for all kinds of outdoor sports, including fishing.

Ahy 15 or 16 year old Scout who is an accomplished swimmer (merit badge required), knows his canoeing well enough to pass a special test which will be given by Chicago members of the American Canoeing association, and has had experience in camping, is eligible for this sporty cruise.

Here Are the Details.

Here is information on the trip, as well as details on how to put in an application to join the expedition:

The canoeing party will leave Chicago Saturday, July 5. Winamac, Ind., will be the starting point. This town is about a two hour train ride from Chicago. The cruise will cover the Tippecanoe from Winamac to the famous Tippecanoe battlefield, go into the Wabash river and probably continue down the latter to the city of Lafayette. From Lafayette the party will return to Chicago by train.

The party will purchase food supplies along the way and camp out each night. Pup tents will be furnished by the Chicago Scout organization. THE TRIBUNE will award a gold medal to each boy who completes the cruise and acquits himself like a real Scout. Contests will be held in swimming, woodcraft, campcraft, bird study, etc., while the expedition travels down stream, and prizes will be awarded to the winners in each contest.

Blanks at Scout Office.

Write Roy Alm, at Chicago Boy Scout headquarters, 39 South Wabash avenue, at once. He will send you an application blank to be filled out. Every boy making application must have his parents' consent in writing. The expense of the cruise to each boy will be slight, because THE TRIBUNE furnishes canoes, etc., and bears practically all of the costs. The Scout organization supplies pup tents, etc., for the party. Experienced Scout leaders will accompany the boys and supervise activities.

The Tippecanoe river will give the canoe paddlers opportunity to display their skill, because it is a stream of many different kinds of water. We checked it a few weeks ago and found it a combination of lakes and a typical prairie stream.

Two power dams have formed long lakes in the channel and portages to test the muscle of the youthful paddlers will have to be made around these dams. In other parts of the river the water runs swiftly enough to keep a paddler busy watching for the channel, so as to avoid rocks. Camp sites are numerous along the route so that the expedition will be able to pick high and dry locations for their tenting grounds.

science of self defense, there are few, if any, superior to Sharkey among the big fellows, when Jack remembers to use his boxing skill.

Drawn into Knockout.

Now let us look above the shoulders. Ring generalship has been Sharkey's weakness in several more important bouts. He no doubt knows what to do, but appears to forget to do it. He is more likely, if hit hard, to lose his bearings and fight as the other fellow wants him to fight instead of as he has planned to battle. That was self evident in his bout with Dempsey to determine an opponent for Gene Tunney. For three rounds one felt sorry for Dempsey in his attempted comeback. Then Sharkey was drawn into slugging with a slugger and was knocked out while lowering his guard to make a claim of foul.

Schmeling, if we mistake not, will have a decided advantage in mental condition. Never have we seen a boxer in training less concerned, and that does not mean careless or indifferent, even his preparation is unorthodox. After a year's layoff caused by legal bickering over his services and making of a talkie film in Germany, he will have boxed only twenty times during his training period. He has played golf more often than that.

When "kidded" about his boxing, Max in the broken English we cannot reproduce said: "If I cannot defeat Jack after twenty boxing sessions, I cannot defeat him after forty."

Max Has Spirit of Combat.

Schmeling does not punch the light or heavy bags. He does "fight" his sparring partners when he boxes, and he had seventeen served against him to teach him different tactics. Again Schmeling is only 24 years old. He philosophically remarks, "I expect to win. If I do not, I will the next time, for I surely will have another chance." This German boy seems absolutely nerveless.

Schmeling likes to fight. He has the spirit of combat. In his training bouts, he emerges from the hottest exchanges in which he often receives a good sock with a grin. The hotter the exchange, the broader his grin. Sharkey, I am told, regards training as a drudgery necessary for the purpose he has in mind. Dempsey, to whom Schmeling is so generally likened, was a natural fighter, who always forced the issue, even when pelted with a shower of gloves, as in his two fights with Tunney.

I do not expect to see Schmeling lose self control or hit low under stress of excitement. It is a ring axiom of which he was reminded by Benny Leonard, former lightweight champion, that Sharkey will be going along as he should until he receives a "stinger," then he flies in a rage and casts aside science. Leonard went through a pantomine of Sharkey in the ring which caused even Jack to laugh as he responded "I'm all over that."

What Are Max's Plans?

It may be asked what will be the German schlager's tactics against an opponent with so many advantages below the shoulders. My opinion is that he will crowd the issue, keep on top of his man, and exchange punches if his opponent will fight that way. How Sharkey will answer I do not know, for I have yet to visit his camp.

Apparently Schmeling's best blow is a short, straight right. His sparring partners say it carries terrific power. We saw it pop their heads back. He also has a useful left hook. His blows remind of Jack Dempsey, for they usually are thrown from short distances.

Schmeling's weaknesses to my mind are that he is rather open. All fighters trying for a knockout punch, however, must leave themselves more or less open. Sharkey's really clever left is likely to worry the German more than once. Again, it does not seem to me that Max protects himself quite enough when breaking from a clinch. Sharkey knows how to strike coming out from a clinch. If the bout goes a distance I think it will be to Schmeling's advantage.

There seems no question of either boxer's condition. Those who have seen him say Sharkey never looked better, never has trained more faithfully. Thus it will not be condition which determines the next heavyweight champion.

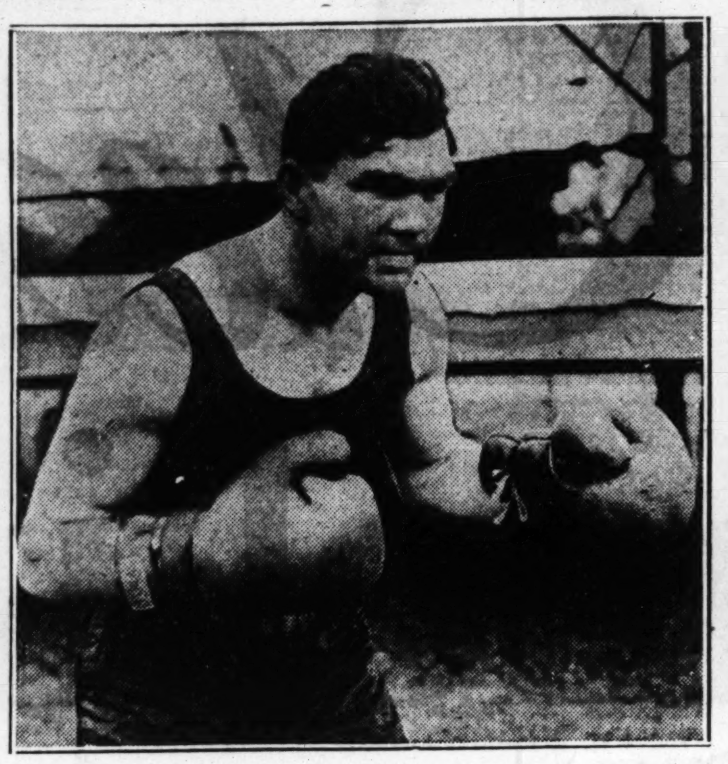
The issue between these men will be fifteen rounds to a decision. The bout is to be held as a benefit for the Milk Fund. Sharkey and Schmeling each will receive 25 per cent of the net proceeds after expenses are taken out. The rest goes to the Milk Fund, less the Madison Square Garden honorarium for promotion and its lease on all available fighting areas in this district.

MASTRO FIGHTS SPARKS TUESDAY IN TUNE UP BOUT

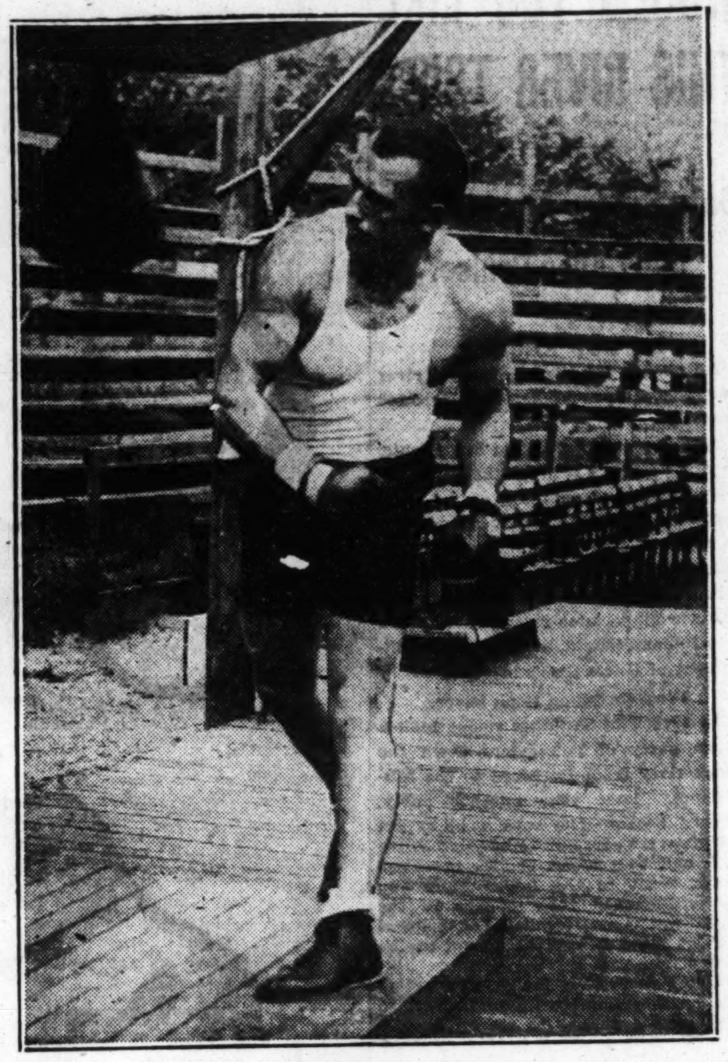
Earl Mastro, who fights Bud Taylor for the third time at Detroit soon, will appear in the Congress Stadium Tuesday in an attempt to equal or better the showing made there by his rival last week. Mastro will battle Ward Sparks of Detroit.

Frank Spengler, Congress promoter, has matched Solly Schumann, a local favorite, with Kid Jap for the eight round semi-windup. Billy Meers of Defiance, Gus Steve Hess, and Sam Adducci will be on Tuesday's card.

WHICH WILL BE THE HAPPY FAMILY?



A foreign fighter never has been a serious contender for the world heavyweight championship in recent years, but Germany now has produced one, Herr Max Schmeling, who carries a wallop in his right. This punch, Max hopes, will lull Sharkey to sleep Thursday evening in the New York Yankee stadium.



Boxing experts and those who like to wager are making Jack Sharkey of Boston, the erstwhile sailor, a 2 to 1 favorite. A better ring record and a weight advantage are reasons, but those who supply an "if" in prognostications point out that Jack becomes befuddled when stung, a deficiency that cost him his bout with Jack Dempsey.

Mrs. Schmeling disapproves of fighting as a career, but she will be the happiest woman in the world if she gets a message in Berlin informing her that her son Max is heavyweight champion of the world. At Mrs. Schmeling's right is another son, Paul, a mechanic. The others are friends who will join in the rejoicing Thursday night if——.

"Daddy will win," declare this trio of young Sharkeys, who, with their mother, are sunning themselves on the beach while father gets in condition to battle for the world championship. Left to right are: Jack Jr., Mrs. Sharkey, Dorothy, and Marylin.

SCHMELING AT CLOSE RANGE.

NEW YORK, June 7.—Previous chapters of this serial of Max Schmeling, the German schlager, ended with our return from his public workout for a visit and rest at his farmhouse training quarters. While waiting in the comfortable but not elaborate living room for Max to doff his ring togs, we turned on the victrola to hear the boxer's own voice singing "Boxer Liebe," which was interpreted for us to mean "Lover of Boxing." The voice unquestionably was that of Schmeling. It was clear, understandable if you knew German, and would pass in a glee club but hardly cause grand opera impresarios to seek a new star.

This record, sold in Germany, was taken from a talkie film of which Max was the hero, entitled "Liebe und Ring." The theme is that love affairs and boxing do not mix well, that boxing demands all attention, that wild women have no place in an athlete's life, and of course has its concluding sentiment for box office purposes. The Schmeling party thinks American rights will be worth a large sum if Max upsets the Sharkey championship claims next Thursday night.

While the record still was playing, Schmeling rejoined the small group and we engaged in conversation. Max rapidly is learning English, but occasionally must appeal for aid at some unknown word or expression.

Glancing at the mantel, we saw a rack of poker chips.

"Has Max already learned our great indoor sport?" we asked banteringly.

"Indeed he has," replied Manager Jacobs, "and he's learned it even faster than boxing."

"And what game do you play?" we continued.

Again Manager Jacobs answered, "Jackpots, deuces wild, with threes, fours, and fives out. It makes a good game."

"Please don't put that in the newspaper," appealed Max. "It will give your American people a wrong idea of me. Just say I like golf and movies and the theater."

That request is typical of Schmeling as we saw him. He realizes he has to win to his side a people who might be averse because he is foreign born. Recognizing this fact or fancied fact, he still is not depressed or sullen about it. So we chatted for more than an hour until time for Schmeling to take his afternoon rest from 4 to 5:45 o'clock, at which time dinner is served.

We chatted of his education acquired in Germany, about equivalent to a high school course here, of his younger brother who is an automobile mechanic, of his father who died many years ago, of his mother who is immensely proud of him, but tolerates his present profession only because of its earning power, of his own experience when employed by an advertising agency in Hamburg.

We found him in intelligence, language, and viewpoints different from the average run of pugilists, but not of the Tunney type. In short, he is a sane, healthy young fellow enjoying life and with one fixed purpose, and that purpose to win a world's title Thursday night. Following dinner, Schmeling visited press hotel headquarters and attended the movies.

We venture that if Schmeling does become world champion, he will be a popular champion as soon as he is known to the public at large. He will be the most approachable since Jim Corbett, whose intelligence told him the value of publicity. Bob Fitzsimmons, who followed, was willing to be affable but hardly knew how.

Jim Jeffries seldom was in good humor when being interviewed. Tommy Burns was an accident and we never knew him. Jack Johnson was good copy as well as "cagey" with a view to publicity, a chap one liked personally but for whom one could have little respect because of his escapades outside the ring.

Jess Willard was a "made" champion because of his size and never really liked the game. He was almost bovine in his understanding of material for "human interest" yarns. Jack Dempsey was thoroughly likable, and if he knew you well he would talk freely until you ended with a readable feature. If he did not know you, he was not discourteous but inclined to monosyllabic answers to questions propounded.

Jack Sharkey at the time he met Dempsey to determine which one should battle Tunney, was a sneering, supercilious braggart who made few friends outside his own circle. At Miami last winter, he had changed materially in his manner, apparently wishing to remove earlier impressions, but clumsy in his knowledge of how to do so. Those who have visited his camp say he takes most seriously the favor with which many now regard him as an American born fighter opposing one foreign born. He has discovered one man cannot fight the whole boxing loving public.

Because Schmeling has natural affability, tact, good nature, and more than average intelligence is why the Wake thinks he will be a popular champion if he becomes champion.

Princess Wins Jackson Park Q Yacht Race

Boats of the Jackson Park Yacht club made their annual dash around the Calumet gas buoy yesterday, with the Princess, a "Q" boat, Edith, a 30 footer, Quest, a yawl, and Fame, a schooner, winning in their respective classes.

The racers had ideal sailing conditions, with a light wind and a swell bouncing. The boats had their sheets trimmed at the buoy but half way home the wind quieted and the Princess dashed on to leave the O'Rourke's Intruder and the Chaperon, owned by Commodore King, in its wake. The Princess made the run in 2:59:30. The Intruder finished in 3:05:22, and the Chaperon, sailed by Stewart Bradley, in 3:24:13.

The Edith and the Columbia, two 30 footers, had another one of their famous battles, both coursing all over the lake, the lead alternating frequently. The Edith had a time of 3:41:04 against the Columbia's 3:54:46.

The yawl Quest won in 4:01:45 and was the only boat of its class to finish. Dunlap and Weston's schooner Fame sailed home in 4:03:30, with Blue Moon, owned by Simmons, cruising in in 4:07.

Races for R boats, eagles and pups were held at Chicago Yacht club yesterday. Vail and Sheridan's Ariel won the R class, finishing the 14 mile course in 3:48:49, just ahead of the Nancy, which crossed the line in 3:50:46. Others finished as follows: Calypso, 3:55:43; Fantome, 3:58:30, and Jonnie, 3:58:57. Varya did not finish.

Four eagle boats crossed the line within eleven minutes of each other. George Getz Jr. shot his Aquilla across first in 4:42:34. Others finished as follows: Orn, 4:44:12; Voltear, 4:52:19, and Falcon, 4:53:01.

Alert, a classy pup boat, swung over the seven mile course in 3:23:04. Spray finished in 3:28:16, and Ri Ri in 3:42:10.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Question.

Do you consider Sharkey or Schmeling worthy of the heavyweight championship of the world?

The Answers.

Daniel McDonald, 441 East Ohio street, mechanic—Sharkey looks like a champion. Schmeling is a good opponent, but has not had enough ring experience to be worthy of the heavyweight title. Past performances prove Sharkey is the better man, and there is no doubt in my mind that Sharkey will win Thursday's fight. The heavyweight championship of the world belongs here in the U. S.

Florence Bubenicek, 3637 North Kedvale avenue, comptometer operator—Sharkey is the most logical heavyweight championship contender. Neither fighter compares with the two former champions, Tunney, the scientific boxer, and Dempsey, the slugger. Sharkey and Schmeling are about evenly matched, and it should be a good fight. But why let the title cross the ocean? Sharkey will be the next heavyweight champion of the world.

F. J. Carr, 6001 Newberry avenue, oil salesman—I consider Sharkey more worthy of the championship than Schmeling. Sharkey always has been a fighter, and I think he is a second Dempsey. I hope he beats Schmeling.

John L. Murray, 5705 Huron street, clerk—Neither is worthy of the championship. However, they seem to be the heavyweight fighters available. Sharkey is the better fighter, and with an advantage in ring experience, should win the decision. I don't believe there will be a knockout.

C. N. Rank, 4227 North Lawndale avenue, clerk—Sharkey is the better man. He has had more fights and met better men. It is up to Sharkey to keep the heavyweight championship in this country, and I believe he will. Neither fighter compares with the two former titleholders.

MOTOR INDUSTRY GOING INTO THE JUNK BUSINESS

Scrapping Old Cars to Get Them Off Streets.

BY HAL FOUST.

The automobile industry, which has contributed materially to the prosperity of the junk business for the last decade, is now going into the scrapping and salvaging field itself because the junk men have been returning many rattle traps to the streets and highways again.

"The practice for the last few years," related A. C. Faeh, general manager of the Chicago Automobile Trade association, "has been for an automobile dealer to turn an unsalable 'trade in' over to a junk man for about $25. The junk man, after applying a few patches, would put the wreck on the used car market.

"Some gullible buyer would get the car from the junker for from $35 to $75, discover his mistake in a few weeks and use the wreck as a 'trade-in' for another machine from a reputable dealer who would allow from $125 to $175 on the purchase of a new car. The dealer would get $25 again in turning the junk back to the scavenger.

Dealers, Buyers Victimized.

"With each cycle, the authorized agents of the automobile industry would lose between $100 and $150. And the public would still be exposed to a dangerous vehicle on the streets.

"To protect the industry against this drain, dealers of Milwaukee, Kansas City, Omaha, and Pueblo have organized coöperative salvage yards. The Chicago Automobile Trade association has just completed a survey, preliminary to prosposing some such arrangement in Chicago."

The Yellow Cab company and the Chevrolet dealers of Cook county already have their automobile exterminator, a plant at 2435 South Loomis street, operated by Arthur L. Jeffery. Cars that have outlived their usefulness are driven or towed to this graveyard, 8,000 making the trip in the last two years.

Made Into R. R. Equipment.

Glass, tires and batteries are removed, to be sold to dealers in these articles. The radiator is taken off and smashed, to be "sweated" for its various metals. The cars thus stripped are thrown onto a pile by a crane, sprayed with gasoline and the match applied. The fire removes all wood and upholstering from the machines.

When the metal has cooled an acetylene torch cuts the bodies into small strips, a convenient size for shipment by rail to Mayfair, where a foundry makes railroad tie plates.

The steel is sent to Gary where the mills purify it, apply new alloys and roll out structural beams. The cast iron, such as the flywheels and engine blocks, is sold to automobile factories to be melted and returned to usefulness again.

"We get about $10 to $12 worth of metal from a car," said Mr. Jeffery. "The tires, battery, and glass add only a few dollars to the salvage.

Eliminate Public Menace.

"With these figures, you can see that we can't compete with the junkers who resell the cars or peddle worn parts. The usefulness of this institution lies in its elimination of machines that are public menaces and a bane to the automobile industry. We need the financial assistance that is given by Yellow Cab and Chevrolet."

On Federal street, between 16th and 24th streets, are some of the junkers whose operations are frowned upon by Mr. Faeh of the automobile trade association. The street is littered with refuse from cars torn apart, ripped tops, broken truck bodies and the like.

"The junk men hurt the trade, not only with their resales," said Mr. Faeh, "but also with their sales of used parts."

The junk men strip every removable part from the vehicle in the disassembling operation and have second hand shops on South Michigan avenue that will sell anything from an old spark plug to an obsolete rear axle.

Ford Buys Junked Cars.

Henry Ford is one of the leaders in this movement of the industry to take over the scrapping and salvaging of old cars. His operations are confined for the present to Detroit. He pays $20 for every junk car delivered to his Baton Rouge plant, providing a new car is purchased at the same time.

Flivvers with flapping tops and dangling fenders are stripped. The tires go to a plant for salvaging the rubber. Electrical parts are disassembled for their copper. The motors go to a foundry where they are melted and cast into engine blocks.

After this operation, a ladle, loaded with scrap iron, drops on the automobile skeletons, smashing them into a mass. An electric magnet on a crane carries the mass to a 1,000 ton hydraulic shear that clips off strips.

Profit from Sash Weights.

Another crane moves these strips into an open hearth furnace, built by Ford to salvage 199 shipping board vessels. The furnace eliminates all inflammable material, such as the wood and upholstery, and reduces the steel parts to molten metal, material for new cars.

The salvage plant of the Milwaukee Automobile Dealers' association has a feature worthy of note in that a profit is being made in the manufacture of sash weights from automobile metal.

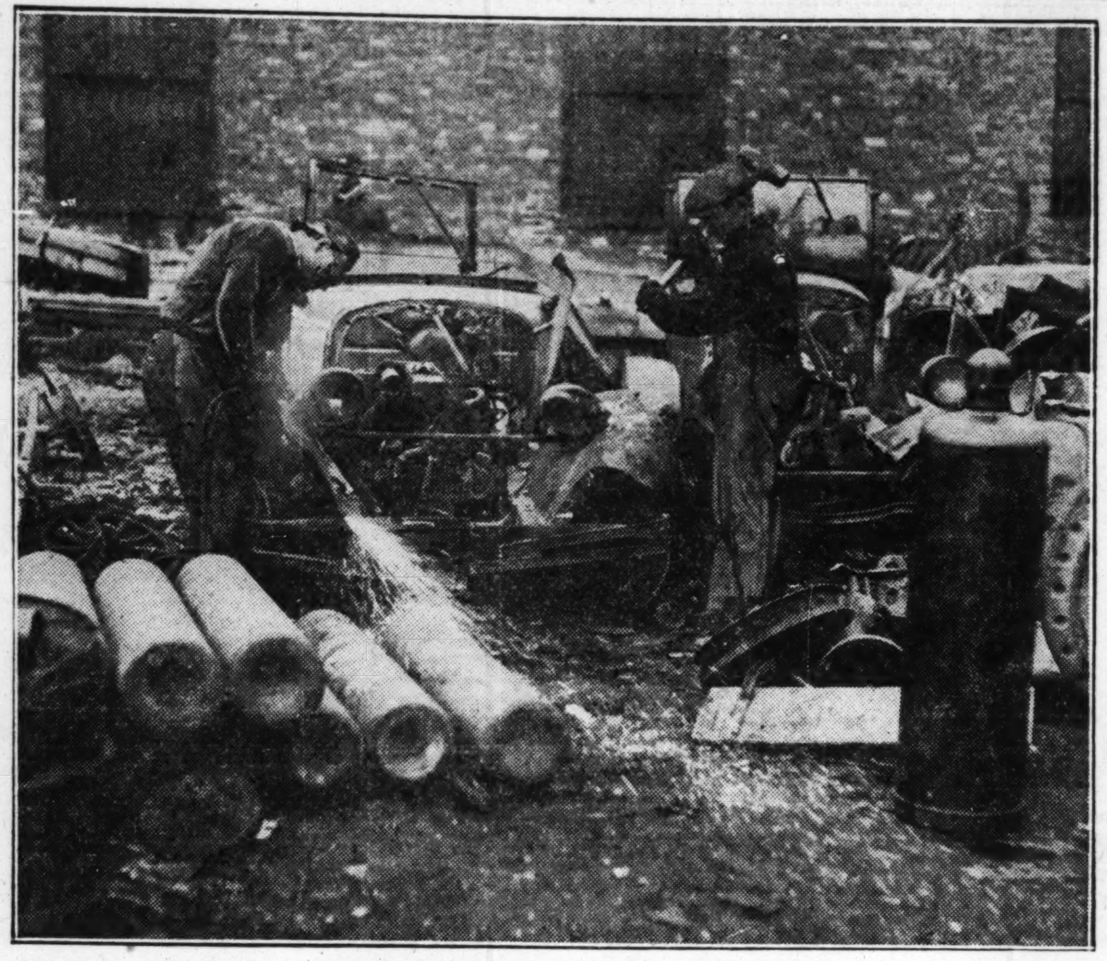
Six New Roads to Open Colorado to Sportsmen

Six new United States forest service roads, either completed or now under construction in Colorado, will open to sportsmen many streams and lakes for trout fishing in various parts of the state.

CARS SOLD ON TIME.

Fifty-eight per cent of all new cars are sold on time, although credit sales are decreasing.

JUNKING WORN OUT AUTOS



Workmen in an auto scrapping yard at 2435 South Loomis street, where old cars are demolished so that they cannot be operated again or the wornout parts used on other cars. Motor dealers in many cities are operating such plants and it is possible Chicago may have more of them.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

WOULD WIDEN NORTH AVE.

Chicago, June 4.—There is great need for a good east and west road along about North avenue. Madison street is too close to Jackson and Washington boulevard, both of which have been recently widened, and the tremendous expense required to tear down valuable business property for widening Madison is unwarranted. A street further north is necessary, and North avenue is the logical location for a number of reasons.

First, it is about half way between Washington and Diversey, the two closest east and west boulevards. Second, it will connect up with a wide, heavily traveled highway that will soon run clear through Cook and Du Page counties. Third, and most important of all, it will require the least expense for widening, because it is already a 100 foot street west of Western avenue all the way to Harlem avenue where it connects up with the state road. This portion merely needs resurfacing or paving.

The section east of Western avenue is improved mostly with very old buildings, and the widening of this short stretch will be small compared to other widening projects. The widening of this stretch will enable all loop bound traffic to use this street as an outlet to and from widened Western and Ashland avenues and Humboldt boulevard, thereby relieving the extreme congestion on Sheridan road.

This project should be pushed in preference to political pet projects involving much greater expense and less benefit.

MOTORIST.

MAXIMUM LOAD LIMITS.

Chicago, June 3.—I am very much interested in an editorial published in THE TRIBUNE on heavy trucks and their destructive effect on pavements.

Whether these trucks are on pneumatic tires or on solid tires the concentrated load at the small point of contact, namely the tire, is still there.

I believe that any highway engineer will bear out my statement that the subgrade under the pavement gives way to a concentrated weight and then the surface material, such as concrete, cracks away with no subgrade.

But why have these concentrated loads? Are you aware of the fact that the city of Chicago allows a permissible load of 30,000 pounds gross load on a four wheel truck? Thoroughly qualified engineers have reached an average of 22,000 pounds as the maximum weight that the modern subgrade will withstand when said 22,000 is confined to four wheels. These same engineers with the same conservatism allow 34,000 pounds to approximately 40,000 pounds on a six wheel truck distributed over three axles.

You will note that over two-thirds of the states in the Union allow a maximum of 22,000 to 24,000 pounds on 4 wheel trucks, with specified weights on each axle.

It would be an economy to both the taxpayer and the operator if the operator would install six wheel equipment on his truck to provide for even the 30,000 pounds which he is permitted to haul.

Your state highway engineers limit the load to 24,000 pounds on four wheel trucks. Why should Chicago be quite so philanthropic as to allow this 30,000 pound weight to the detriment of pavements?

W. P. COLEMAN.

WHOOPEE RIDERS.

Evanston, Ill., June 5.—Who are these "whoopee" riders that go yelling through the streets at night, playing toy saxophones, singing and shouting? Can't the police protect the slumber of hard working people who want to spend their nights as they are intended?

MISS NINA DALTON.

GRACE AND SHERIDAN.

Chicago, June 2.—Is it possible to devise a better method of arranging the stop and go signals at Grace street and Sheridan road?

Before these lights were installed there was no congestion at this intersection, and it was possible to go north at night during the rush hours, crossing this intersection safely and without delay.

I can't see why it is necessary to stop the traffic coming east on Irving Park boulevard before it turns south on Sheridan road, nor can I see any reason why the traffic going north on the outer drive instead of turning west at Irving Park has to be stopped at any time.

Of course, a traffic officer should be stationed at this intersection during the rush hours to assist the occasional pedestrian to cross.

It would be greatly appreciated by hundreds of motorists on the north side of Chicago and in the north shore suburbs if the Lincoln park board would study this intersection and try to improve the traffic control.

JAMES E. McCOY.

CAR WATCHERS.

Chicago, June 4.—I was very glad to see several weeks ago an article by Hal Foust exposing the car-watching racket at every public gathering.

These pests annoy motorists and insult them if a tip is not forthcoming. I should like to see this racket stopped.

H. R. WINTERS.

OAKWOOD AND DREXEL.

Chicago, June 6.—Mr. Donoghue may or may not decide that auto traffic at Oakwood and Drexel should be allowed to turn east on both the red and green light, but it seems unwise to me nevertheless for motorists to override the present regulations so freely whenever their inclination or judgment prompts it. That isn't the intelligent cure, but it is a dangerous one.

NOISY.

LAKE PARK AND WOODLAWN.

Chicago, June 3.—There is a stop sign at the intersection of Lake Park avenue and Woodlawn avenue. If you stop you are likely to be smashed into by those who do not obey the ordinance, and it's time some one insisted on police protection at that corner.

I wrote Chief Russell and Capt. Gill of Hyde Park station received a nice letter from Russell's office, but no action, and that was two weeks ago.

Every one is shouting safety—it's needed at this corner.

H. A. CLEMENTS.

ARRESTED IN DES PLAINES.

Chicago, June 6.—I notice you have been printing some items about police rackets.

Recently the writer was stopped on Ballard road in Des Plaines for not stopping at a stop sign, which I believe has only been recently placed there and in a most inconspicuous place. None of the other four in the car noticed the sign, nor did most of the cars who followed me.

However, the state highway police picked out my car, and after wasting a lot of time telling what he could do to me and many broad statements about how many laws I had broken, he gave me a ticket to appear before his particular J. P. in Park Ridge instead of Des Plaines, or the writer's town of Evanston.

It would seem a better use of their time to catch and punish reckless drivers instead of picking on those who do not knowingly break the many highway rules.

W. W. SMITH.

55TH AND SOUTH PARK.

Chicago, June 2.—I wonder if anybody else has objected to the stop and go lights at 55th street and South park.

Not long ago the orange was taken out of these lights and now only red and green are being used. When you travel along at a moderate rate of speed, you may be just about to enter the intersection when the light turns red right in front of you. This means that you either slam your brakes on or go across the intersection against the red light.

If you stop too suddenly, you are liable to be hit from the rear by another motorist and the other motorist cannot be blamed.

I would like to see the orange light put back in, following the green, to give the motorist a warning of the necessity of stopping.

J. C. PENOWITZ.

MIKE WALSH TO FIGHT CHICAGO BRIDGE EVIL

Will Carry Matter to Congress if Elected.

Michael C. Walsh, Democratic nominee for congress from the Second district, would carry to Washington Chicago's fight to free itself from the open bridge nuisance. He so pledged himself to his constituents yesterday. He is opposing the reëlection in November of Congressman Morton D. Hull, Republican.

Mike Walsh, "dean of Hobo college," head of a flophouse at 211 South Green street, would bar from the Chicago river at least in the daytime all craft that cannot pass under the bridges without their being opened.

Make Joke of Chicago.

"The boat men are making a joke out of Chicago," he said. "Under the present regulations a sand barge or a pile driver is given the right of way over thousands of automobiles and thousand of pedestrians.

"The sad part of the situation is that the boat owners have the backing of the federal government. Washington doesn't appreciate our problem. Washington evidently thinks Chicago is still a frontier trading post with no commerce on land because of the swamps.

"Chicago should send to congress some men able to awaken Washington to the fact that the traffic on our streets is much more important to the community than the navigation on the Chicago river.

"Perhaps barring large craft from using the river would be too severe. Perhaps we ought to let the boats close our streets for a few minutes at a time between 2 a. m. and 5 a. m. But I'm certain that there is no reason for allowing a dredge or a scow with a couple of empty box cars to open all of our bridges during the daytime, keeping thousands of business men from their work, delaying hundreds of trucks, and taking the time from thousands of shoppers."

NEW PARKING DEVICE EMPLOYS SMALL WHEELS

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo.—A novel parking device, designed to permit parking in small space, has been invented by R. W. Branson of the Missouri state auditing department.

It consists of two small wheels attached to the car's front axle and hinged so they may be dropped to the ground through a control on the instrument board. When the small wheels touch the ground, the driver backs the car a few inches, thus raising the front wheels and decreasing the turning radius to a small circle.

Chicago Isn't Only Spot with Few Parking Spaces

There are designated parking spaces in Manhattan for 1,298 automobiles. This figure does not include privately owned garages and parking lots, nor streets and alleys. During the day there are upward of 35,000 cars standing in the streets of the city, and for months police have been seeking to get cars off the highways, but no one has been able to solve the problem about where to store them.

EXPERTS TO MEET IN ROCKFORD TO DISCUSS ROADS

A luncheon will be held in Rockford on Tuesday to discuss the Chicago Motor club's program for the state to widen 870 miles of pavement in the metropolitan area in 1932 and 1933. The program calls for the widening of the Illinois route 5 through Rockford to Freeport, 118 miles from Chicago.

Illinois route 5, also known as the Lake street road and as the Grant highway, is one of the oldest and one of the busiest in the state. Its present narrow pavement also carriers the U. S. 20 markers, the trail from Chicago and places further east to Yellowstone National park.

Civic leaders, business men, farmers and public officials have been invited by the motor club to the luncheon. Rockford is the home of Lieut. Gov. Fred Sterling, and he is expected to attend.

Turkish Taxi Drivers Can't Watch Passengers

Mirrors attached to the windshields of taxicabs in Istabul, Turkey, have been removed by the police. This move was due to drivers being so interested in watching their passengers through these mirrors that they neglected the operation of their cars, with the result that they sometimes crashed into other cabs.

TRIBUNE TO AIR OFFICESEEKERS' VIEWS ON AUTOS

Voters to Learn Stand on Motor Questions.

The TRIBUNE's automobile columns at election times in the future will advise motorists which candidates have treated car owners equitably.

Most of the complaints from the driving public can be laid at the doors of officeholders or their appointees. Someone is responsible in each instance of misappropriation of road repair funds, the mislocation of new pavements so as to aid subdivisions or selfish interests rather than traffic, and the operation of speed traps.

Although automobile owners form a large portion of the electorate, they have received little recognition from politicians.

Instead of devoting all of their attention to the protection of the motoring public, the police prey upon drivers. This is especially true in rural communities on the ouskirts of Chicago.

Politicians tax car owners for new pavements and then allocate construction to further special interests, such as subdivisions.

The only recourse of the motoring public is at the ballot box. By standing together and voting against their betrayers and for their friends they can obtain the relief which is now denied them.

Because the motorists reside under different governmental jurisdictions, it is difficult for them to obtain information on the past record and present attitude of candidates toward problems of special concern to car owners. THE TRIBUNE will furnish this information hereafter.

NO SPEED COPS TO WORRY YOU ON ENGLISH ROADS

All You Have to Do Is Be Careful.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, June 7.—Americans touring England by motor for the first time this summer will notice first of all, perhaps, the absence of their old friend, the speed cop. He isn't here, and as long as nothing happens and there are no complaints, no matter how you drive, there is nothing to worry about.

In England, as in France, the mere fact that an accident has occurred is taken as prima facie evidence of what is described here as "furious driving" and penalties for improper regard for the famous Illinois "safety of the way" are exacted accordingly.

Touring in England will be more enjoyable in some respects than at home. The country is better kept, the roads are neater and are free from billboards and farmyard venders of vegetables and the lake. All the principal roads are well marked and danger points are as clearly and understandably indicated by signs here as in the states.

City Streets Not Marked.

Main thoroughfares near the larger cities are wider, too, than they generally are in America, although the country roads are of the same width. But in the towns and villages the tourist is not as well cared for as at home.

A motorist passing through a village in the states expects to find it strewn along the principal road with no possibility of losing the way. In the cities the routes both state and national are marked from one street corner to the next. But that is not true here, and the driver is apt to find himself caught in the mazes of narrow, old world streets where he soon loses his direction in a profusion of corners and turnings.

Mechanically the car driver is not so well off, either. Filling stations are plentiful but garages were repairs can be made are scarce. There is the further difficulty that American made automobiles are harder for English mechanics to repair because spare parts are not so plentiful and because roadside shop equipment for making them is not as good as in the United States.

No Hot Dog Stands.

Tourists in England will escape the ugly camps which are scattered every few miles along arterial highways in America, and instead of the usual hot dog stand he probably will find something more to his liking. There are tea shops for those who drink it, many with bright little gardens where tiffin is set on lawn tables, with colored parasols provided against the heat of the sun.

But there are other retreats for the tourist seeking refreshment, and many of these are labeled as are the lowly hot dog huts at home: "First and Last Chance." The bars of English inns and those scattered along the roads are held to definite hours of business, varying a half hour or so in their opening and closing time by local enactments but fortunately they are open at hours when they are needed most.

Bars open sometime between 10 and 11 o'clock in the morning and close around 2 or 3 in the afternoon. They open again at 5 and close at 10 or 11 o'clock at night. Hotels serve drinks at all hours to their guests, however.

Tourists Take it Easy.

Generally, the tourist driving through England will be inclined to take a more leisurely course than he would on the Dixie or the Lincoln highways. English drivers don't try so much to burn up the road as we do, and their touring is more a matter of seeing the country than getting to some faraway destination as fast as possible, but speed is picking up.

One of the first shocks that an American motor tourist in England will receive is the high price of gasoline. The price of first grade petrol, as it is called here, is 40 cents per gallon. This is somewhat mitigated by the fact that it is of a higher quality than that generally sold in America and that the English imperial gallon is larger than the American gallon, but in spite of that the cost of gas is far higher than in America.

Few U. S. Cars in England.

If the American motorist has traveled on the continent of Europe he will be surprised by the scarcity of American cars on the English roads. On the continent, American cars are plentiful but in England they are scarce. This is due to two factors. The first is that the Englishman buys his car to run for five or six years and there is a popular belief here that the American car is only good for a year or two when it must be traded in for a new model.

The second hand price of American cars is therefore much lower than that of European cars and this is a factor taken into account by the British purchaser. The second and probably more important factor is that the American car is much more expensive to run. This is due first to the fact that the American system of production provides for a large, rather inefficient engine which eats gas, while the British car is equipped with a small, highly efficient engine which yields about fifty per cent more mileage to the gallon of gasoline than the American car of about the same standard.

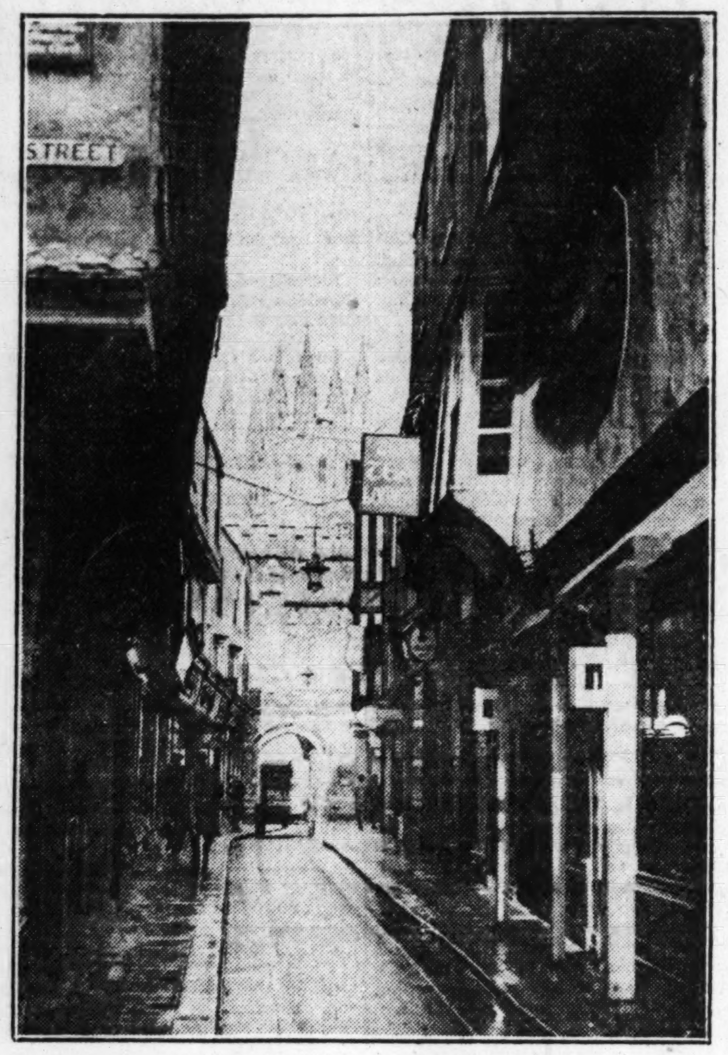
The other factor is the British system of taxation. British cars are taxed at the rate of five dollars per horse power per year. Thus the standard cheap American car with a rated horse power of twenty-two pays $110 tax per year, while an English car of equal or better performance pays only $50 or $60 and costs only about half as much for gas and oil on an equal mileage.

European Cars Faster.

This also applies to French and Italian cars which are serious competitors to British cars and a good many of them may be seen on British roads. Most of the European cars are faster also than American cars of equal grade and this is becoming a greater and greater factor as the speed limit becomes obsolescent. Officially the maximum speed limit is twenty miles an hour but it is never enforced unless the driver seems to the policeman to be endangering the safety of the public or himself.

Most of the American's motoring will probably be done with one of the great cities as a center. From London he can reach Stratford-on-Avon, the home of Shakespeare, in a couple of hours. Windsor, the country home of the king and queen, is an hour away and dozens of other historical and beauty spots can be reached in an equally short time. From Liverpool he is in easy touch with the lake district sung by Wordsworth, and from Edinburgh or Glasgow, the magnificent scenery of the Scottish highlands is easily reached.

NARROW ENGLISH STREET



American autoists touring in England this summer will encounter many thoroughfares like this in the cities. Main routes through cities and villages are poorly marked, and before he knows it the tourist is in one of these narrow streets. The one pictured here is the approach to Canterbury cathedral.

BILLBOARDS ON AUTO ROADS HELD MENACE TO DRIVERS' SAFETY

Roadside advertising on huge billboards which obscure the view and detract the attention of the motorist from his job of driving is dangerous to human safety, in the opinion of Dr. L. I. Hewes, deputy chief engineer of the United States bureau of public roads.

"We know that outdoor advertising on private property interferes with highway operations, that it mars the scenery, and that at times it is even dangerous," he says.

"Outdoor advertising screams loudest on the most densely traveled roads. These are the roads where the operating job, already difficult, is growing constantly more difficult. Yet it is on these roads that rural advertising thrives and confuses the driver.

"Obviously a driver needs his whole attention on the road and crossing signals when approaching a grade crossing. Any advertisement may distract him.

"There is, in newer laws, a marked evidence of the recognition of danger at curves and at railroad grade crossings. Many state laws forbid signs along the highway within a distance varying from 300 to 1,000 feet of such crossings.

"It would seem that highway officials could demand that the rural right of way be entirely free of any outdoor advertising whatever."

R. R. POINTS WAY TO COUNTERACT LOSS FROM AUTOS

I. C. Shipped Machines for Vacationists.

BY HAL FOUST.

Railroads, in their periodical pleas before commerce commissions for higher rates, complain of a loss of business due to the development of highways and automobiles. The Illinois Central last winter pointed the way for railroads to take advantage in the growth of motor travel.

This enterprising railroad, which has led other Chicago lines on electrification, studied its business outlook and found that many of its former patrons were doing their traveling by automobile. The average American wants his motor with him on his vacation or business visit to another city. So the Illinois Central inaugurated a new service, a winter vacation special, for transportation of passengers with their automobiles.

Autos Shipped by Freight.

An automobile was shipped by fast freight to Florida or New Orleans a few days before the departure of its owner and was in a garage on his arrival. The charge for the car was three regular passenger fares provided at least two additional tickets were also purchased for passengers.

At these rates, the shipment of the automobile to New Orleans, for example, cost $92 as compared with a regular charge of $177 for a car weighing two tons. The railroad reports that the plan was a success. Families, who otherwise would have driven south, took the train, giving the carrier both freight and passenger business.

With the beginning of the summer vacation season, the arrangement would be of considerable service to those who would like to spend a week touring in the Rockies or on the west coast, but cannot spare the time or do not care for the long cross-country drive.

Future Possibilities.

The arrangement has possibilities for much future development. With the automobile a necessity for convenient transportation, fast passenger trains might soon be justified in carrying a special car or two for the passengers' automobiles, just as they now carry baggage cars.

A Chicago salesman, with a number of scattered customers to visit in St. Louis, could drive his automobile on to a train at the Union station, spend the night in a berth, and in the morning drive the automobile off the train ready for business. The cost of shipping the car would be less than the cost of hiring an automobile in St. Louis.

Auto-Train Service.

A Chicago family wanting to spend Sunday driving in the Minnesota forest preserves could leave their homes on Saturday night, have a good night's rest, spend the Sabbath motoring, and then sleep on the train back to Chicago on Monday morning.

In making a cross-country drive, tourists could spend their days in their automobiles and their nights aboard trains. The railroads and the air lines offer a similar service now.

In Europe, there have been bicycle trains that carried cyclists and their wheels to and from the cities. American railroads of the future may have automobile trains. The cost of passenger and vehicle transportation at present might be prohibitive, but with a large volume of business the costs will be reduced.

TRANSPORTATION STILL A FACTOR IN EDUCATION

"Transportation continues to be a necessary and growing factor in school centralization," says a bulletin of the United States bureau of education. 'Improvement in roads and in efficiency and comfort of motor vehicles has brought large benefits to rural children.

"There has been considerable advance in recent years in the cost accounting systems used by districts furnishing transportation, especially those furnishing it on a large scale. Approximately one-third of the states now grant aid specifically for pupil transportation. They are Connecticut, Delaware, Indiana, Kansas, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Texas, Vermont, Wisconsin, and Wyoming."

U. S. HAS FIFTY TIMES EUROPE'S CONCRETE ROADS

The United States has fifty times as much concrete paved highway as all Europe, according to the 1929 edition of "Highways Handbook," published by the highways education board of Washington, D. C. The United States also led with nearly five times as much macadam and nearly three times as much asphalt, whereas Europe led in stone pavement and graveled grades. The United States has 3,016,281 miles of paved highway against a European total of 2,450,430.

AUTOIST MUST GIVE COW ON ROAD RIGHT OF WAY

Which has the right of way, a cow being driven along the highway or a motor vehicle operator? Wisconsin's new state traffic code, says the national safety council, settles this point, along with many others, on a common sense basis.

The auto driver is presumed to have more sense than the cow. The cow, therefore, is given the right of way and the driver must govern himself accordingly.

AVIATION

FLIVVER PLANES BEING TESTED BY MANY MAKERS

Look for Unique Designs in Next Two Years.

While a growing number of aviation enthusiasts are clamoring for safer airplanes, simpler to operate and maintain, several groups of engineers throughout the country are quietly and in some cases secretly at work on "flivver" planes with many new safety features.

At Garden City, L. I., a group of young engineers are said to be at work in the laboratories of the Curtiss-Wright corporation on a small monoplane of all metal construction which will be equipped with all the safety appliances that won the Guggenheim safe aircraft competition for the Curtiss Tanager.

Plan Safety Bumper.

It will differ radically from that plane, however, in some important features. The plans, so far as they have gone, call for a pusher type plane with the propeller extending out from the stream lined rear of the fuselage. The tail surfaces will be carried on booms. The wing, it was said, will be a thick section and have a strong tendency toward the "flying wing" type of construction.

A feature of the new plane, according to sources not directly identified with the company, will be a safety "bumper" on the nose for the protection of both the plane and its occupants in case the plane starts to nose over. The under carriage will have unusual shock absorber characteristics.

Experiments indicate a landing speed as low as 40 miles an hour and a high speed of more than 100 miles. The company, it is reported, plans to simplify the building of the planes in order to make large scale production possible. Efforts will be made to bring the cost to consumers down to $2,500 or lower.

In Naugatuck, Conn., a two place, all metal, low wing, open cockpit plane has been built almost entirely by machine. The metal wing sections have been turned out by stamping and rolling machinery in order to cut down high labor costs. The plane, called the 'Cairns," is undergoing tests at Hartford.

In Los Angeles, at the Northrop plant of United Aircraft and Transport company engineers are experimenting successfully with a new all metal flying wing of machine construction. The first of these planes to be built is a two seated open plane with pusher motor. A new six place low wing passenger plane has also been built along these lines for high speed transport.

These developments indicate that aviation engineering, which has been more or less stagnant for the last two years, is about to produce important innovations in design.

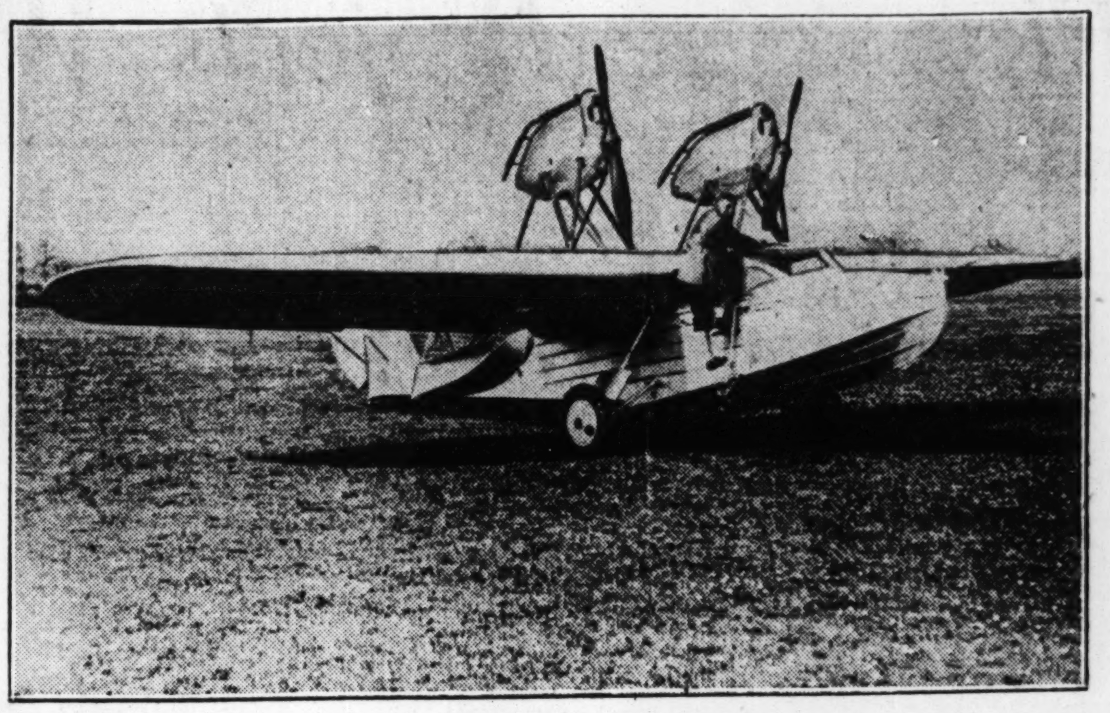
Drastic Changes Seen.

Drastic changes in airplane design were predicted recently by William B. Stout, designer of Ford planes and president of Stout Air Lines, in an address before a meeting of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics held at Langley Field, Va.

Among the problems placed before the committee were the following:

Further investigation to determine the most advantageous placing of the nacelles which house the power plants of multi-motored airplanes; further study of propeller design with a view to reducing noise and increasing efficiency; continued investigation looking to reduction or elimination of the heavy drag on the airplane in flight; research to determine the sources of various noises and vibrations which cause discomfort in flying with a view to eliminating them at the source.

NEW ENGLISH AMPHIBIAN



ONE of the first new light amphibians to be introduced in England is the Cutty Sark built by the Saunders-Roe company of London. While it is built primarily for use as a seaplane an amphibian under carriage has been especially built for this plane for those who choose a land and water craft.

Noteworthy is the absence of wire bracing which is used in most of the British built ships. This indicates a trend toward the American design with the interior bracing. The Cutty Sark resembles the Fokker amphibian, except that the Fokker plane is powered with a single motor.

This new British plane is a monoplane. Two water cooled motors are mounted high on top of the wing. Passengers and pilots enter the plane from the pilot's cockpit via a portable ladder. The plane seats six including a crew of two. The manufacturers claim a cruising speed of 90 miles per hour.

ALASKA TO CHILE AIR MAIL TIME SET AT 2 WEEKS

MONTREAL.—With the institution of a new international air mail connection between Winnipeg and Minneapolis and St. Paul, via Fargo, N. D., which is expected within about two months, it will be possible to send a letter from Aklavik, Alaska, within the arctic circle, to Santiago, Chile, nearly 12,000 miles away, in two weeks.

The route which the letter would follow, sketched by W. J. Irving Glover, second assistant postmaster general of the United States, would pass through Fort McMurray to Edmonton, thence to Winnipeg and on to the Twin Cities, to Chicago, Brownsville, Tex., across the Central American states, Columbia and Peru.

Under the most favorable conditions over the land and water route mail could not be delivered between the two points in less than seven weeks, and this only during the period of summer navigation in the north.

Believe Pipe Line Projects Will Help Relieve Depression

LONDON TICKER DLES; BROKERS PLAY THE PONIES

Derby Week Factor in Dull Market.

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, June 7.—"Derby week" ived up to its reputation, with paucity of business still the "favorite" n the stock exchange. Brokers and ealers crowded Epsom Downs in an ndeavor to find recompense among he "Derby favorites" for a lack of itimate business elsewhere. Derby ay saw house and city offices almost eserted for the attractions of England's greatest racing week. This traitional influence, with the impending Whitsuntide vacation, and less optiism in regard to the immediate monary outlook, combined to accentuate epression and to diminish the week's ctual business on the stock markets o almost negligible proportions.

Even the recent bright atmosphere bout gilt edge securities seemed louded by new fears of monetary unertainties. The crumbling of quotaons continues, with only sellers in vidence, while the continued slump commodity and base metal prices dicates more financial troubles looming in these sections in the city.

Gold Demands Revived.

There is a revival of continental old demands and a steady drift of oreign exchanges against sterling in he principal foreign centers; Berlin, New York, Paris, and Amsterdam ausing considerable worry to financial interests.

The New York sterling rate again ipped below $4.86, establishing the west rate which has been touched ince September, 1929, and New York as still seller at the end of the week t $4.85 13-16. As usually is the case, ny weakness in the sterling rate in New York is quickly reflected in the utch exchanges, Amsterdam shaping s course by the barometer of the merican exchange.

But the chief attention has been rawn to the foreign exchange posion as a result of the withdrawal of substantial amount of gold from the ank of England for Germany. This evelopment, following closely upon e acquisition of large amounts rently by France, has modified the utlook of the London money market. hances of a further reduction in the nk rate have disappeared, and city rcles are now believing that the oney rate has probably touched botm, although the prospects of a long ntinuance of trade depression and preciated commodity prices cannot lost sight of.

France May Take Gold.

The French exchange rate, after aving been steady for some time, also oved against London, bringing the elief that France before long will ke more gold from England and that e general situation and outlook ally demands a higher level of disunt rates. There is a probability at the needs of this position will be t by an advance nearer to the bank te.

With these adverse influences operting, the markets generally remain nder the shadow of uncertainty, the ck of activity has made speculative ovements nonexistent, and even securities of the investment type are w failing to attract support. Liquiion of stocks from an unusually rge number of "deceased" estates ings a constant supply of sellers to he jobbers and tends to make today's osition very injurious to prices.

Wide discussions are still going on regard to the prospects of a big overnment conversion loan operation, ut Philip Snowden, chancellor of the xchequer, continues to keep his serets. The possibility now talked of is hat he will first tackle the four per nt tax free war loan of which there about $400,000,000 outstanding, and lso the four and one-half per cent easury bonds of which there are ore than $600,000,000 outstanding uch a proposal would afford evidence to the likelihood of the success of conversion offer to holders of the e per cent war loan, of which merican bankers retain big blocks.

A feature of the commodity markets is week was the new low record for bber following the New York weakss. The noticeable absence of suprt here is consequent upon the ination of the dealers to await the fect of the recently ended rubber tapg holiday.

Coal and Rail Men Tilt Over Freight Rate

BY SCRUTATOR.

The Illinois coal industry has been defending itself during the last week against an attempt of railroads doing business in the state to make straight the way to increases in freight rates on their product. Hearings on the matter have been held before an interstate commerce commission examiner at the Hotel Sherman and will be continued through the early part of this week.

Witnesses for the carriers have contended that the present rates, notably one of $1.90 a ton from southern Illinois to Chicago, are out of line with the interstate commerce commission's basis of coal rates in interstate traffic. As the present rates in Illinois, intrastate, were established by the state commerce commission, the carriers ask that the federal body exercise a prerogative to take full jurisdiction from the state and to use it to make raises.

Increase or Loss?

Five cents a ton increase, according to carriers, will mean nearly a million dollars more revenue annually to them. Here the issue is joined, as the coal operators, the manufacturing interests, and the chamber of commerce opposing these carriers assert that any higher rate not only will mean no increase in gross revenue from Illinois coal, but will mean an actual decrease.

D. W. Buchanan, president of the Old Ben Coal corporation, summarized a portion of the arguments for the shippers as follows:

"The freight rates now are higher than the traffic will bear. They are in excess of the value of the transportation service tested by the prices that can be obtained competitively for Illinois coal. We can't continue without adequate volume.

"The railroads complain of revenue losses from the 5 cents a ton reduction to Chicago. Their vision does not extend to conceive a future situation under which our industry may have gone to its death and under which the railroads would be deprived of freight money hitherto accruing from thirty-five to forty million tons of Illinois revenue coal."

Expects Gas Competition.

Testimony of George W. Reed of the Peabody Coal company emphasized that the competition of Illinois coal is not all coming from the coal of other states in future. He expressed the conviction that within three years every city in Illinois with more than 30,000 population will be supplied with natural gas from the southwest, which naturally will narow the market for all coal in these communities. The gas, driven through pipe lines, will give the carriers no revenue.

On other occasions the opinion has been expressed here that the railroads in their rate changing efforts have given overmuch attention to higher prices and not enough to prices low enough to keep traffic moving freely on their lines. High rates build up transportation competition on the waterways, on the highways and in pipe lines. This is a generality that deserves more consideration than it gets from railroads and the interstate commerce commission.

EXPANSION IN GAS INDUSTRY AID TO BUSINESS

Large Orders Placed with Steel Firms.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 7.—The unprecedented expansion in the natural gas industry now going on, which includes the construction of huge pipe lines to transport this fuel from the distant producing areas to the more thickly populated centers, is a development believed by the industry to not only materially aid the unemployment situation in this period of depression but in addition will be largely responsible for the maintenance of operation in the steel industry at or near normal capacity.

This development has been compared to a certain extent to that which the railroads went through immediately following the civil war.

During the last week orders for steel pipe aggregating approximately 300,000 tons to be used in several important gas pipe line projects were placed with the various steel mills throughout the country. An executive of one large company in the market for 50,000 tons of pipe stated that the demand upon the steel industry for this class of business was such that it was difficult to place an order for any quantity for nearby delivery.

Projects Under Way.

One of the principal natural gas pipe line projects under way is that involving the construction of a 24 inch line over 1,000 miles long from the Texas panhandle to Chicago and adjoining areas. This line is being built by the Cities Service groups, the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and other interests. Another is the Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line company's $40,000,0000 line from Texas to points in Indiana and Illinois, which is already under construction.

LARGER ORE RESERVES

A trend toward the accumulation of larger ore reserves in the great lakes region by the nation's leading steel companies has resulted during the last year in the acquisition of several large ore companies and in the affiliation of other companies by important steel units, according to bankers identified with the steel industry.

The cause of this trend, the bankers declare, is the belief that the exhaustion of iron ore reserves in the great lakes range is not remote, and that within twenty-five or thirty years a large proportion of the high grade ore obtained at present through the inexpensive surface mining methods will have been taken out of the ground. As this scarcity of ore increases, the ore owning companies will be able to dictate to the ore consuming steel companies to a greater extent. It is with a view to forestalling this development that the steel companies are establishing closer relationships with the ore owning and ore factoring companies in the great lakes district, the bankers declare.

Recent Affiliation.

The most recent instance of an affiliation of an ore factoring and ore producing group with steel producing interests was the announcement a

CHICAGO BANK STOCKS DROP; LOSSES RANGE UP TO 20 POINTS

Chicago bank stocks dropped sharply last week, with losses ranging between 5 and 20 points. Continental Illinois Bank and Trust sold down to low transactions at 724 but regained part of its loss, being 728 bid, 732 asked, off 17 points. Foreman State National lost 12 points at 728 to 731. Northern Trust was off 20 points at 855 to 865. The rights were wanted at 182 with offerings at 188.

First National was offered down 10 points to 710 without attracting buyers. Central Trust Company of Illinois declined 8 points at 370 bid, 375 asked. National Bank of the Republic was an exception, being wanted at 146 with offerings at 147 up 2 points. The rights were unchanged, being quoted 2¼ to 2½. Harris Trust and Savings lost 10 points at 825 to 830. Union Bank of Chicago was 2 points lower at 310 to 314.

In the miscellaneous group Kellogg company advanced 25 points to a new high of 185, relinquishing a portion of this gain being quoted 170 bid, 175 asked. Northwestern Yeast sales ranged between 112 and 117, closing 112 to 115. Elgin National Watch after early sales at 37¼ was in supply at 35⅝ with best bids at 35.

CITES RAPID INCREASE IN POSTAL SAVINGS

An increase of more than 10 per cent in postal savings between July 1, 1929, and Feb. 28, 1930, was announced by Postmaster General Brown as "the greatest peace-time growth in the history of the system." Deposits increased $16,341,000 to a total of $167,901,652.

For February alone, the increase was $2,840,717, of which Florida contributed $99,200; Texas, $606,947; Illinois, $409,509; Alabama, $202,981; Nebraska, $133,881; South Carolina, $122,331, and Indiana, $101,236.

Mr. Brown advocated an increase in the limit of individual deposits from $2,500 to $5,000.

ATTACKS MELLON AND HIS PART IN GERMAN LOAN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 7. — Flotation of German reparation bonds in the United States to begin shortly was credited for the most part to Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon by Representative Louis T. McFadden, chairman of the house committee on banking and currency, today in an address before the people's lobby in conference. Continuing his attack upon Secretary Mellon and the bank for international settlements, Representative McFadden asserted that Secretary Mellon had permitted the Federal Reserve bank of New York to acquire an autocratic dominance over the federal reserve board. He added:

ANDREW MELLON.

"The Federal Reserve bank of New York is eager to enter into close relationships with the bank for international settlements and on its own initiative has already established the precedent of permitting European banks of issue to draw upon it for loans. All this has been done with the permission of the secretary of the treasury. The conclusion is impossible to escape that the treasury department is willing to pool the banking system of Europe and America, setting up a world financial power independent and above the government of the United States. The commercialization of the Young plan bonds in the United States to which they have given their approval is corroborating evidence of this purpose."

Rails Lead in Week's 21 Bond Issues

New York, June 7.—As was the case last week, new offerings of bonds this week aggregated considerably less than $100,000,000. However, a total of twenty-one individual issues were brought out, of which thirteen were state and municipal loans. The new bond issues marketed this week amounted to $69,132,000, compared with $49,428,000 last week, $181,093,000 the previous week, and with $63,057,000 a year ago.

Railroad financing topped the list this week with a total of $29,790,000, comprising two issues of equipment trust certificates, one of $15,750,000 by the Canadian National Railways and the other, $14,040,000 by the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific. The former was offered at prices to yield 4.15 to 4.85 per cent and the latter to yield 3.30 to 4.60 per cent.

Two Foreign Issues.

The state and municipal issues ranged in size from $5,000,000 state of Mississippi 5½ per cent short term obligations to issues of but $300,000 of which there were two. The foreign loans this week comprised $3,360,000 Kingdom of Norway Municipalities Bank 5s, marketed on a 5.17 per cent basis, and an issue of $5,000,000 city of Brisbane, Australia, 6s, which were offered on a 6.30 per cent basis.

Two issues of notes for the Indian Refining company and the Signal Oil and Gas company, comprised the industrial financing of the week. The public utility financing consisted of an issue of $3,000,000 5 per cent notes of the Hackensack Water company and an issue of $2,500,000 Southwestern Natural Gas company 5s, due 1943.

Offering Comparison.

The new offerings of bonds, by groups, for this week and last, follow:

	This week.	Last week.
Railroad	$29,790,000	$ 3,510,000
State and municip'l	17,482,500	4,718,000
Foreign	10,360,000	4,200,000
Industrial	6,000,000	....
Public utility......	5,500,000	37,000,000
Totals..........	$69,132,500	$49,428,000

The light bond financing during the last two weeks is ascribed to the sizable blocks of unsold bonds in the hands of dealers from the heavy offerings of previous weeks, and to the fact that investment bankers wish to leave the way clear for the German annuities loan, the offering of which has been delayed owing to the fact that all of the details of the offering have not yet been worked out. The unusual nature of the issue and the infinite details involved in the offering of the loan in the principal money markets of the world have required additional time and planning.

HEAR OF FORD MOTOR PLANS FOR EXPANSION

New York, June 7.—(AP)—Dow Jones & Co. say today that the Ford Motor company has under way an extensive expansion program which will increase manufacturing and assembly facilities.

Plant sites, says the dispatch, have been bought at several of the company's key points, where new and larger plants are either under construction or are contemplated.

One of the larger projects is the acquisition of about 300 acres at Fairport, near Cleveland, where a large assembly plant will be built to employ 15,000 men. The present Cleveland plant will be continued. A large site for similar expansion also has been purchased near Buffalo, N. Y., the dispatch adds.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 7.—Wall street's punch drunk stock market took a real flop today. Groggy from the bear pounding of the last week or so, the leaders went down in a group—some of them to new lows for the year—dragging the whole list after them.

Losses among the more active issues ranged from 1 to 7 points. Some of the highly volatile shares dipped even more sharply. Case Threshing Machine showed a decline of 18½ points on its closing sale. Allied Chemical and Dye was off 10⅜, Vanadium corporation 10, Worthington Pump 9¼, and Foster-Wheeler 8½. Every group came in for slaughter.

It was the heaviest selling movement the market has had to endure since the early part of May. Much of it, very evidently, had its origin in the professional bear camp, which has been working with increasing vigor in the last two or three days, but a considerable element of it just as certainly came from margin accounts weakened by persistent hammering until they could no longer stand the strain. Some, too, came from bull traders who had grown tired of waiting for the expected rise.

Trading Expands.

Business was on the heaviest scale in some time amounting to 2,244,100 shares for the two hour session as compared with yesterday's total of 2,154,860 for five hours. The ticker was unable to keep pace with the trading and ran from 10 to 20 minutes late throughout the greater part of the time.

Much of the early selling came from out of town—from holders growing shaky over the growing epidemic of dividend cuts and omissions, "general vacations" announced by big corporations for their employés such as for

CHICAGO STOCK PRICES DECLINE UNDER SELLING

All Sections of List Feel Pressure.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Incessant selling continued to eat away at stock prices during trading on the Chicago exchange yesterday. Pool operators at their best could only cushion the fall for their favorite issues. Net losses for the day ranged up to 6 points. Transactions were comparatively heavy for a short session, amounting to 252,000 shares.

Conversation in the customers' rooms along La Salle street was less concerned with when the market will rally and more with when the decline will slow up.

Bendix Sells Lower.

All sections of the list were burdened with the pressure of selling. In the motor group Auburn found its way to a new low at 143 on sales of less than 1,000 shares. Bendix sold through 40 and closed off nearly 2 points at 38¼. Borg Warner furnished an exception with a gain of a fraction.

Ranking the list in point of sales volume Grigsby Grunow slipped over 2 and closed at its low for the day at 22. Stock of Grigsby's affiliate, Majestic Household, was down 5½ points on heavy dealings. U. S. Radio suffered a loss of around 2.

Utility stocks displayed a firmer tone than the rest of the list. Losses were small. Middle West finished unchanged and Commonwealth Edison receded 2. Missouri Kansas Pipe Line moved up a fraction against the trend to a new high above 36.

Industrial Losses.

Losses among the industrial stocks ranged up to 5 points. Super Maid fell back 2 points and Reliance Manufacturing sustained a similar loss. A. M. Castle on light sales dropped 5 points to 50. Lion Oil was soft following published reports that dividend action had been postponed. Directors yesterday, however, declared the regular dividend of 50 cents a share on the common. The meeting was originally scheduled for Friday.

A compilation by Otis & Co. shows the extent which the market has declined during the week. The market value of the 50 most active stocks traded in on the Chicago board last week totaled $2,729,845,646 at the close yesterday. This represents a decline of $172,833,817 or 6.33 per cent from the market value at the close of the previous week. The analysis shows that 31 of the stocks were traded in last year. These thirty-one stocks had a market value yesterday of $659,116,437 as compared with $664,892,613 on June 8, 1929, a decline of $5,776,176, or .87 per cent.

RETAIL STOCK, BOND DEMAND BELOW NORMAL

Retail demand for stocks and bonds during May was considerably below normal, and the volume of new public offerings showed a decline of about 15 per cent from April, according to the monthly investment review of Lawrence Stern and company, investment bankers.

The review also stated that reports from leading investment houses in the twelve federal reserve districts revealed that they "are not so optimistic as last month as to the outlook for general business conditions." The majority, it was stated, reported their opinion as to the business outlook in the immediate future "as being only fair—with some frankly foreseeing poor business and others predicting a turn for the better in the near future."

"The decline in the volume of new security offerings during May," the review states, "was about equally divided between stocks and bonds—the totals in both instances being considerably below April. Total new offerings were about $767,000,000, compared to a volume in excess of $900,000,000 in April. Bond offerings amounted to $590,870,121, compared to $683,759,874 in April. Stock offerings were $176,871,360, compared to $216,985,404 in April."

Officials of Two Concerns Deny Merger Negotiations

Reports that merger negotiations were being carried on between Miller & Hart, Inc., and Mickelberry's Food Products company were denied yesterday by officials of both companies. C. J. Roberts, president of Miller & Hart, said that his company is not contemplating any merger, nor has the subject been discussed. E. J. Engel, president of Mickelberry's, said that the rumor of merger negotiations with Miller & Hart was unfounded. He added, however, that Mickelberry's is working on an expansion program which involves the acquisition of other food products companies.

WHEELING & LAKE ERIE TO PAY BACK DIVIDEND ON 7% PR. LIEN STOCK

New York, June 7.—(AP)—Directors of the Wheeling and Lake Erie railway have declared a back dividend of 7 per cent on the prior lien stock for the period from Aug. 1, 1922, to Aug. 1, 1923. In January directors declared three back quarterly dividends of 7 per cent for the period from Nov. 1, 1921, to Aug. 1, 1922.

Directors of the American Commercial Alcohol corporation voted to omit both the cash and stock dividends due at this time. They have been paid at the annual rate of $1.60 a share cash and 5 per cent stock.

Directors of the Crosley Radio corporation voted to omit the quarterly dividend of 25c on common stock due at this time. The company reported a net loss for the year ended March 31, 1930, of $431,059.

The Mother Lode Coalition Mines placed its dividend on a 20c annual basis instead of 40c when it declared a 10c semi-annual dividend.

The Noranda Mines, Ltd., cut its dividend rate from $3 to $2 annually when it declared a quarterly dividend of 50c a share.

The Union Metal Manufacturing company declared the usual extra dividend of 25c per share on its common stock in addition to the regular

News and Gossip of Stock Marts

Chrysler Outlook.

Chrysler has been treated rather roughly in the market for several months, but of late there have been indications that the liquidation has been about completed and that there may have been some accumulation. The company is doing well compared with the industry as a whole. Its shipments in May totaled 40,644 units, compared with 37,481 in April.

Gasoline Prices.

Reports were current in the Wall street district yesterday that most of the leading gasoline producers in the east are desirous of raising prices.

Movie Earnings.

The unusually warm weather in the early part of May is reputed to have cut into the earnings of the motion picture companies to quite an extent. As a result, it is doubted in some quarters whether they will show as large a gain in the second quarter over the corresponding period of last year as they did in the first three months.

Cosden Oil.

Cosden Oil has encountered profit taking after its rather swift advance. The story told about this stock is that its floating supply is limited and the short interest large. Cosden's advance has been a mystery to many, however. Although earnings have shown improvement, the stock is not yet in the dividend paying class.

The Annual Report.

A good many mistakes made by investors are due to the erroneous assumption that bookkeeping is an exact science.

A company's annual report is at best an approximation. Taken alone it is not a thoroughly dependable indication of the concern's prosperity or its earning power. In addition to being based partly on the opinions of the management it has the fault of covering too short a period of time to make possible a fair estimate of the company's investment possibilities.

Take the balance sheet, for instance. It presents a picture of the concern's financial position today. It is possible that the picture was different yesterday or that it will be different tomorrow.

Then, too, the picture is a painting rather than a photograph. It is prepared by human beings and is based partly upon their appraisal of factors which cannot be determined by any mathematical formulae.

In computing a company's assets it is a simple matter to determine the amount of cash on hand. That is arithmetic. But what about plant and equipment? A factory may have cost $1,000,000 ten years ago. What is it worth today? The answer is necessarily a guess. Whether it is a good guess depends on how well accountants can analyze and correlate a mass of detail about earnings, repairs, depreciation, obsolescence, supply, demand, changing costs, and many other things, each of which in itself is another guess.

This is only the one item and has to do with tangible assets. What about such intangibles as patents and good will? Conservative companies usually write good will down to one dollar or leave it out entirely. But sometimes good will is a concern's greatest asset.

Consider the earnings statement. The company, let us suppose, reports that earnings for 1929 were $3.47 a share after charges for depreciation and depletion. These charges are estimates—guesses. The above list of examples is by no means exhaustive.

It will be seen that the figures of an annual report are not infallible. They are important, however, because they afford something to work with and they are valuable to the investor who realizes that they are largely approximations and does not swallow them whole.

SAYS OFFENSIVE IS BEST POLICY FOR BUSINESS

"The best commercial strategy, even during a depression, abandons the defensive and launches an offensive campaign for new business," said J. E. Morrison, president of the Peoples' Abstract company of Joliet, in an address before the Illinois Abstractors' association at the Hotel Sherman yesterday.

"Even in this abstract business," Mr. Morrison pointed out, "there are many avenues of new business, and the only way to combat overhead beyond a certain point is to drown it in more production."

Top yesterday, $13.00; average, $12.00.
Estimated receipts at Chicago Monday, 18,000 cattle, 50,000 hogs, and 20,000 sheep.

In spite of the meager supply of hogs offered on the week-end session, prices broke 10@20c, going to the lowest level in 11 days. The extreme top declined 20c at $10.30, while the general average was off 15c at $10.05, comparing with a peak of $10.55 and average of $10.20 at the high point of the week.

After directs had been deducted from the supply only 1,500 of the fresh receipts remained on the market, hardly enough to establish quotations. About half of the 4,000 over from Friday were held off the market when prices dropped. All interests were willing buyers at the reduction rate.

The hog market held a strong position during most of the week, a marked contrast to conditions in other branches of the live stock trade. A slight reaction in the market for fresh pork, the result of soaring temperatures in mid-week, had little influence on the price of live hogs.

The general average for the entire week at $10.20, was within 5c of the highest weekly average since March. Only six weekly averages have been higher this year. The narrow spread in prices has been a feature of the trade for several weeks, and was more pronounced on recent sessions. Light and heavy grades were only 10c apart at the close.

Hog Futures Active.

Activity featured the hog futures market at the close of the week in view of the setback in the cash trade. July light opened at $10.50, but finished at $10.45, while September light sold at $10.40. Mediums for next September delivery sold at $10.40, equaling the highest sales of similar contracts since early in April. July and September heavy grades carried bids $10.10@10.20 at the close of the week.

Although there was a break in the market this week, the higher level of prices earlier in the week held the general average at $11.35, which compares with $11.10 the previous week. Prices are $2.60 lower than a year ago and $2.25 under two years ago.

Considering the size of the week's receipts, which were largest of the year, the break is not regarded as an indication that the market is in a weaker condition than ten days ago. Wholesale prices on the dressed beef market moved slightly higher, in spite of the hot temperatures. The price list at the close at 15½@22c per pound compared with 14@21½c a month ago.

Lambs Get Setback.

Sheep and lambs experienced a sharp setback during the past week. Hot weather knocked the price of spring stock to the lowest levels of the year after midweek. Similar [illegible] week ago were selling at [illegible]

Prices paid for the new crop of lambs tumbled 75c to $1.50 during the week, an influx of stock from the [illegible] buyers practically all the [illegible]. The number of southern [illegible] dumped on the market [illegible] in several years.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 18,000 cattle, 50,000 hogs, and 20,000 sheep, against 18,159 cattle, 46,839 hogs and 10,080 sheep a week ago and 15,772 cattle, 51,098 hogs and [illegible] sheep, the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 53,000 cattle, 152,000 hogs and 76,000 sheep, against 38,693 cattle, 142,976 hogs, and 65,275 sheep [illegible] week ago that Oglesby, Horton & Co., a large Cleveland ore company, had become affiliated with the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron company, controlled by Cyrus S. Eaton, who is also the dominant force in the Republic Steel corporation.

The affiliation was accomplished through investments by Oglesby, Horton and Cleveland-Cliffs in each other's securities. According to authorities in the steel industry the most important result of the move was that it assured Republic larger ore reserves and ore transportation facilities. The Oglesby-Horton company's fleet of ore boats added to that of the Cleveland-Cliffs corporation, gives the Eaton interests the third largest fleet of ore carriers on the great lakes, exceeded only by the United States Steel corporation and the Interlake Steamship company, controller by Pickands, Mather & Co.

URGE GOLD ECONOMY

Economizing in the use of gold and scientific handling of it were urged by financial experts who asserted at a dinner in honor of Sir Josiah Stamp at the Harvard club that gold physically controls the social and industrial destinies of the world.

The dinner, given by Frederic A. Delano, president of the Stable Money association had for its keynote the importance of eliminating the wide fluctuations in the purchasing power of money with their disastrous effects upon trade and business and the relations of debtors and creditors.

International emphasis upon the necessity of stabilized money was given by the receipt of messages from financiers in other countries, some of them pointing to the present business depression as a striking example of the need for relief. Sir Josiah, British industrialist and economist, supported this view with the declaration that a shift in money values was responsible for the situation today.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, June 7.—Reports now confirmed show that some large purchases of raw silk have been made for future delivery at the lowest price quoted for twenty years or more. Silk goods are selling moderately. There have been some lower offerings of printed and woven wash fabrics with sales active on sheer lines. Other cotton goods ended the week quiet. More business is coming forward on men's suiting fabrics for fall cutting. Additional business was done on tropical suitings, which have been benefited by hot weather. Burlap shipments for May were substantially higher than in April. The market is quiet.

At a special meeting of stockholders of F. E. Myers Brothers company an increase in authorized common stock from 200,000 no par shares to 300,000 no par shares was approved.

DECADE BACK A TINY PHONE LINE; NOWCALLSWORLD

International T. & T. Tells Spectacular Story.

New York, June 7.—The International Telephone and Telegraph corporation will celebrate its tenth anniversary on June 16 this year. During the ten years the company has grown from a holding company for the Porto Rico Telephone company and the Cuban Telephone company into a manufacturing, operating, engineering and sales organization engaged in developing electrical communications in all its branches in forty-seven separate countries.

The annual report of the company issued last week gives for the first time a complete chronology of its development during the last decade. The principal forward step occurred in 1924, when the Spanish government granted a concession for the creation and operation of a general telephone service throughout continental Spain and its contiguous territories.

Gets French Interest.

In 1925 the International Western Electric company was acquired from the Western Electric company, Inc., American Telephone and Telegraph manufacturing subsidiary, and its name changed to International Standard Electric corporation. In the same year a large interest was acquired in the Thomson-Houston Telephone company of France. The International Western Electric properties acquired included manufacturing plants in Belgium, China, Argentina, France, Japan, Italy, Norway, England, Australia, and Spain. In the same year control of the Mexican Telephone and Telegraph company was acquired.

In the following year a new manufacturing company was organized in Spain and the one acquired in 1925 liquidated. A controlling interest also was acquired in the Czeija-Nisel Telephone and Telegraph Manufacturing works in Austria.

The first venture of International in the western hemisphere came in 1927, when the All America Cables, Inc., was acquired. This company operates submarine telegraph cables between New York and Central and South America and the West Indies. Other properties acquired were the Montevideo Telephone company, Ltd., the Sociedad Coöperative Telefonica Nacional of Uruguay, the Chile Telephone company, the Comphanhia Telephonica Rio Grandese of Brazil and the Compania Telefonica Argentina. This gave international telephone operations in four large South American countries. A manufacturing affiliate in Hungary was organized in the same year.

Largest Gain in 1928.

The largest transaction in its history came in 1928, when the Postal Telegraph and Cable corporation was formed to acquire control of the Mackay companies, which operates through subsidiaries a telegraph service throughout the United States, with connections to Canada and cable services to Europe and Asia.

Radio operating companies were created in Argentina, Brazil, and Chile in 1928, and the Printer Telegraph manufacturing plant of Creed & Co., Led., of England, was acquired in the same year. In 1929 the Ferdinand Schuchhardt Telephone and Telegraph manufacturers of Germany were acquired. All America cables took over the operation of the United States and Hayti Telegraph and Cable company's cable from New York to Cape Haitien and the cables of the French Antilles system. Radio telephone and telegraph concessions were acquired in Peru and Colombia. Control of the United River Plate Telephone Company of Argentina was acquired from British interests.

SAYS AVIATION WILL INFLUENCE CITY GROWTH

Aviation will have a profound influence upon the future development of American cities, according to C. F. Palmer of Atlanta, Ga., vice president of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers, which will meet in convention tomorrow at Biloxi, Miss.

"Those cities in America which have the best facilities for aviation will make most marked progress during the next decade," said Mr. Palmer. "The airplane, in its present state of development, needs wide open spaces for airport facilities. Usually those spaces are to be found only at the outskirts of cities. Unless every possible means is utilized to reduce the traveling time from the airport to the business center to an absolute minimum, the great advantages which aviation has to offer American cities will be lost. Those which do create facilities which are most accessible will step ahead of the cities which neglect this increasingly important new means of communication and transportation.

"A study of American cities shows the influence of transportation. In the early days it was water transportation that determined the locations of cities, and it was the development of water transportation that caused cities to grow. With the advent of the railroad a new factor was introduced. Its influence can be seen in the history of Chicago, which has grown to the second city of the nation because of its strategic location from the rail transportation viewpoint, and in Atlanta, the distribution center of the southeast.

"The newest transportation factor is, of course, aviation. It cannot be ignored, or it will confer its great benefits on others. Until engineers design helicopters, which can make landings on skyscraper roofs, cities must develop rapid transit highways to the airports, or, where cities are adjacent to large bodies of water, such as New York, Chicago, San Francisco, and Seattle, a shuttle service with amphibians plying between the airport and the water front should be established, so that from two to three hours may be saved in handling of mail or delivery of express or passengers. As cities take advantage of the opportunities offered them by aviation so will they develop."

FARM and GARDEN BY PAUL POTTER

STEPS TO WEED RIDDANCE CALL FOR VIGILANCE

Gardeners Must Know Pests' Habits.

BY PAUL POTTER.

The price of weed free gardens and lawns is perseverance, coupled with some knowledge of the types of weeds and their life habits, in order to cope most successfully with them. In the words of A. L. Stone, Wisconsin state weed inspector, it takes "backache, perspiration and eternal vigilance."

Of all classes of weeds, perhaps the perennials are hardest to handle, Mr. Stone believes. Yellow dock, chicory and dandelion are of this type, with long tap roots that must be dug out or hoed so frequently that they never produce seed. They may be allowed to grow until about ready to bloom, when they should be pulled by hand and burned.

Quack grass, Canada thistle, morning glory and sheep sorrel are also bad garden weeds, spreading chiefly from fields and through transferring of soils. All soils are heavily infested with weed seeds, most of which will live for many years, making the eradication processes both constant and tedious. Prevention of seeding is not enough to eliminate these, since a small piece of live root will start new growth.

Spade Out Entire Plant.

One method of destroying small patches of these perennials is to dig them out with a spade, being careful to get all the running roots or rhizomes to the surface where the sun and wind will dry them out and kill them, Mr. Stone advises. Two diggings are usually necessary to complete the job. Constant hoeing, not only between rows but between plants in the row, gradually exhausts such root systems.

"The running roots of Canada thistles or the rhizomes of quack grass will interlace with corn roots and quack will grow right through potatoes, beets, carrots and other root crops," he says. "When they get into the rows of rhubarb or asparagus, the only solution is to start a new bed in an uninfested portion of the garden and as soon as it begins to produce, the old beds should be dug up and the weeds killed."

While biennial weeds, such as wild parsnip, burdock and wild lettuce, are easiest to kill, they are still too prevalent in gardens, Mr. Stone finds. No good gardener would tolerate them, he says, when they can be cut off two or three inches below the surface just when they begin to bloom. New plants may come up from seed remaining in the soil, but they are subject to the same severe treatment.

List of Annuals to Hoe Out.

The annual weeds, of which the purslane or "pussly" is perhaps most troublesome, include such plants as the common chickweed, crab or finger grass, witchgrass, stinkgrass, barnyard grass, redroot, lamb's quarters, speedwell, common ragweed, cheeses, green and yellow foxtails, shepherd's purse and wild mustard.

"As annuals live only one year, it would appear that if no plants were allowed to go to seed they would be eliminated," states Wisconsin's weed specialist. "Such is not the case because the seeds of many of these weeds will lie unharmed in the soil for many years. Therefore, in order to completely free the garden from annual weeds it is not only necessary to kill the living plants but to destroy the seeds in the soil."

Cultivation, begun early and persistently continued throughout the season, will destroy all annuals and make the production of excellent crops possible, concludes Mr. Stone. He also refers to the use of chemicals in annihilating pernicious weeds, but this involves letting the soil remain idle for as many as four applications during the year.

Sodium chlorate at the rate of one pound to a gallon of water is applied at the rate of one gallon per square rod, according to Mr. Stone, with a sprinkling can or air pressure knapsack sprayer.

Put Debutant Perennials with Vegetables: Expert

Until the average hardy perennial flower plant is two years old, it belongs in the vegetable garden. Victor H. Ries, extension specialist in floriculture for the Ohio State university, believes that the average hardy flower does not attain its full beauty until after it becomes "of age."

He also urges this practice because he says that the young plants likely will receive better care in the kitchen garden. When full grown they are excellent around the foundation of a house until the more permanent shrubs have been selected and planted.

Putting flower beds in the middle of a lawn is not considered good practice in comparison to placing beds around the edge of the yard. Both for the sake of the flowers and the lawn the latter plan is advised. The lawn then serves properly as a foreground to set off the flower beds to their best advantage.

HONOR JOHN CLAY, FOUNDER OF FARM WRITING AT AMES

Ames, Ia., June 7.—Founding of the first agricultural journalism instruction course in the world twenty-five years ago, funds for which were made by John Clay of the John Clay Live Stock Commission company, Chicago, will be celebrated at Iowa State college here Monday, June 9. Two hundred persons, prominent in farm writing instruction and writing, are expected at the banquet in the evening.

Speakers include, in addition to Mr. Clay, President R. N. Hughes, Dean C. F. Curtiss, Prof. Blair Converse, head of the technical journalism school; H. A. Wallace, editor Wallace's Farmer; F. W. Beckman, editor Farmers' Wife, and Fred Bohen, president Meredith Publishing company, Des Moines. The department has grown in a quarter century from instruction to one pupil to a present enrollment of 750 students.

Agricultural Questions

CARE OF HYDRANGEA.

Would you please give me some advice on a hydrangea plant? The leaves fall off. Can I plant this out in the yard? Is it advisable to put in a dark place this winter? I will appreciate your help before all the leaves fall off. MRS. G. G.

REPLY.

Hydrangea plants, with a little care, will live from season to season. After the plant has finished blooming, cut back all the branches to about one-half their length, repot, and place out of doors, and give ordinary garden care. In the fall store the plant in a cool, light place until January, when it is ready for winter forcing in the window garden. In the late autumn and winter give only enough water to prevent the roots from drying out and keep the plant as cool as possible without freezing.

GROWING PEANUTS.

I would appreciate information on growing Spanish peanuts in this state. MRS. O. R.

REPLY.

Peanuts are regarded usually as a southern states crop and require 100 to 140 days without frost, moderate rainfall during the growing period, and abundance of sunshine and a relatively high temperature. The United States department of agriculture places the northern boundary line of the possible area adapted to their production at the southern tip of Illinois. Outside of this area cultivation is considered uncertain.

SPRAYING EVERGREENS.

What shall I use for a spray on evergreens that are turning yellow? MRS. H. J. A.

REPLY.

Reliable insecticide and fungicide dealers will give you expert advice on the care of evergreens. More detailed information is required as to the trouble. In general Bordeaux mixture is used for disease, and other sprays for insect pests. Some species are so sensitive to treatment that expert advice is best before treatment.

LILY OF THE VALLEY.

I have some lily of the valley, but they do not bloom as they should. Have had a few blossoms on each year, but would like to know why they do not bloom more freely. MRS. I. O.

REPLY.

Sometimes when set in new and rich soil, the lily of the valley fails to bloom, although making abundant growth. But when the plant fails to bloom even in the second and third seasons it is only necessary to wait. In time bloom will appear when the soil is somewhat exhausted and growth less vigorous.

BROWN IN LAWNS.

We had a beautiful lawn until late last summer, when our lawn of creeping bent grass turned gray in spots and this spring it seems dead. What is the trouble and the remedy? MRS. M. L.

REPLY.

Evidently the trouble is what is called "brownpatch," a fungus disease which kills the foliage but does not kill the roots and is particularly aggressive in attacking fescue, redtop and most forms of creeping bent grass. Mercuric chloride is the cheapest remedy, but care must be taken not to burn the grass. One pound is sufficient for 5,000 square feet of lawn, applied in 50 gallons of water, properly agitating the mixture before applying. After checking the infection, the grass should be watered and fertilized at once to restore growth.

Diseases often are carried by weeds growing around tomato plants. The safest procedure for growing in small or large areas is to kill all the weeds in and around the plot or field.

Shippers with years of experience in the hog business assert that death losses often are increased 25 to 30 per cent by feeding hogs in cars at loading time or in lots immediately before loading them.

Returns for Corn in Silo Exceed Stover Feeding

Returns of $71.65 for an acre of corn, when put into a silo and fed to steers as silage together with cottonseed meal and mixed hay, have been found recently by an Ohio state experiment station farm to compare very favorably with an acre of corn cut and husked and fed to steers as shelled corn and stover with similar amounts of the accessory feeds. The latter system gave returns of only $50.80 per acre of corn, which is a ratio similar to those found by other agricultural experiement stations.

IMPROVEMENT IS NOTED IN METAL MART

Cleveland, O., June 7.—[Special.]—Daily Metal Trade today says: "Decided improvement continues to characterize the plate market in the east. As a result of increased bookings during the last few weeks eastern mills have been able to step up operation to an average of 80 per cent of capacity. At Cleveland steel demand continues sluggish and sellers do not look for any change in the situation before fall.

"Some further recession in automobile production is expected at Detroit and this may result in a shrinkage in automotive steel requirements. Additional steel pipe tonnages are coming out and the pipe mills are reported to be in excellent condition so far as backlogs and prospective business are concerned."

Mo. Pacific Issue Approved But Not Likely to Be Made

Washington, D. C., June 7.—(AP)—Approval by the interstate commerce commission of a Missouri Pacific railroad proposal to issue $38,659,000 in new common stock was recommended in a report today by A. C. Devoe, commission examiner. It was understood at the commission, however, that the issue is not likely to be made. The Missouri Pacific recently passed into control of O. P. Van Sweringen of Cleveland and his associates. The stock issue in question, provisionally undertaken by former interests in control of the road, was intended for payment of back dividends on Missouri Pacific preferred stock. The new management has announced its purpose to meet this obligation by other methods.

CHICAGO BANK STOCKS SEEN IN DEMAND HERE

Harris Estate Holdings Worth $13,000,000.

Chicago bank stocks are a favorite investment of wealthy individuals, families, and estates. They not only cling to such securities in fair weather and foul, but seize opportunity to add to their holdings in times of depressed prices, such as the stock market collapse of last year afforded.

This is disclosed by analysis of the annual lists of holders of stocks of Chicago banks, which were made public yesterday, according to law. They show little change in the large holders, except as shifts have resulted from mergers and offerings of new stock in the last year. This year there are 128 individuals, estates, and corporations which have holdings valued in excess of $1,000,000, whereas a year ago there were less than 100 such stockholders and two years ago there were fewer than 60.

The Norman W. Harris estate remains in first place as the largest stockholder, with its holdings valued at nearly $13,000,000. But the Marshall Field estate is a close second, with holdings of nearly $12,000,000. Third in rank is the National Life Insurance Company of the U. S. A., with more than $8,000,000.

The largest individual stockholder is Albert W. Harris, with holdings exceeding $7,700,000. In the $5,000,000 division appear George Woodruff, Guy H. Mitchell, and Mrs. Elizabeth S. McElwee. In the $4,000,000 rank are Stanley G. Harris, Arthur Reynolds, Hortense L. Aacton, Stephen G. Morse, Harold E. Foreman, S. W. Anderson, Robert Allerton, and Oscar G. Foreman. In the $3,000,000 division are Gerhard Foreman, Alfred K. Foreman, Edwin G. Foreman, Edward F. Swift, Madeline Foreman, John A. Lynch, and Ira N. Morris. In the $2,000,000 class are Ralph De Sarte, George M. Reynolds, Kate S. Buckingham, Philip D. Armour, Frederick H. Rawson, John Bain, Thomas M. Howell, R. M. Roloson, Eames MacVeagh, Franklin MacVeagh, Harriet B. Borland, Lester Armour, Martin A. Ryerson, Shirley Farr, and C. A. Babcock. In addition to his own holdings, George M. Reynolds and his wife formed a trust for holdings valued close to $2,000,000.

As a family, the Foremans appear to be the largest group of stockholders, with aggregate holdings valued not far from $24,000,000. The most diversified stockholder is John Bain, with holdings in 20 institutions valued above $2,500,000. Edward F. Swift has holdings in 12 banks.

Federal Trade Commission to Begin Foshay Hearing

Washington, D. C., June 7.—(AP)—Public hearings in the federal trade commission's study of public utilities financing will be resumed June 12 with investigation of the W. B. Foshay company and of the Public Utilities Consolidated corporation, both of Minneapolis. Commission examiners, who have been looking into the firms' records, will be the witnesses. On June 23 the commission probably will begin hearings on the National Power and Light company and Electric Bond and Share company subsidiaries. These investigations are likely to be the last before a summer recess.

WHEAT TRADING REFLECTS WEAK STOCK MARKET

Closing Prices Show Loss of Around 1c.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Weakness in the stock market in New York was reflected in a decline of around 1c in wheat yesterday, the finish being about the bottom, with net losses of ¾@1c, July closing at $1.06⅛@1.06¼ and September $1.09⅛@$1.09¼.

Trade was extremely small, and mainly in evening up for over the week-end and preparatory to moving into the new exchange quarters on Monday. Winnipeg was strong at the start, but eased later with Chicago and finished ⅝c lower. Liverpool had a holiday. Buenos Aires was ¼c lower at the last with heavy rains reported in parts of that country.

The wheat market quickly passes from an oversold to an overbought condition, and while the finish the previous week was well toward the top, the close on Saturday was near the bottom, with prices 2@2⅜c lower than a week ago. Corn, however, was unsettled, and finished 1c higher to 1c lower, the former on July, with oats ⅜@½c higher and rye 1⅝@2⅜c lower. Lard lost 2½@3c for the week, while bellies were 47½@80c higher.

Russian Seeding Delayed.

If reports from Russia regarding spring wheat seeding are to be relied upon a very small crop should be secured this season. According to returns to the department of agriculture from its representative abroad only 37,000,000 acres had been seeded to May 20, compared with 35,600,000 acres on May 15, and the total is about 21,000,000 acres less than last year. A good increase over last year is shown in the Ukraine which suffered considerable from winter killing in 1929. The market was not affected by the report.

Warmer weather with rain is badly needed in the Canadian northwest, according to the Free Press report, and while seeding was about two weeks ahead of last year the growth at the present time is about the same as in 1929, although the crop is well rooted and has excellent color. Favorable weather prevailed in the American southwest for harvesting and for maturing the new winter wheat crop, and it is expected that quality will be excellent. No rain was shown in the spring wheat area both sides of the line and fair and warmer weather was forecasted for over the week-end.

With Liverpool and continental markets closed there was little interest taken in North American cash wheat, and no sales of consequence were indicated in reports from the seaboard.

Corn Market Easy.

While there was a let-up in the aggressive selling of cash corn to arrive by the country, the eastern demand also fell off and, with the weakness in wheat and favorable weather conditions over the main producing areas, the corn market developed an easy undertone and closed ⅜@¾c lower, with September leading. The latter closed at 81⅝c, with July, 81¼@81⅜c. Trade was light, with scattered commission house selling in evidence on the minor upturns. Purchases to arrive aggregated 55,000 bu, while shipping sales were 26,000 bu. Buenos Aires closed unchanged to ½c lower.

Oats market felt the effect of the beneficial rains which have fallen in the last two days in the central west, and closed ⅛c lower, rallying from the inside figures toward the last on short covering and scattered buying. July finished at 40@40⅛c, or ⅛c over September.

Trade in rye was mainly in spreading operations, with the close 1@1¼c lower, July being 61⅝c, and September, 65⅝c.

TRUSTS REPORT RESOURCES NEAR FOUR BILLIONS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 7.—Resources totaling nearly $4,000,000,000 are represented in 175 investment trusts, which up to today had returned questionnaires sent out by the New York state bureau of securities in an investigation of investment trusts.

Investment trusts were called upon for information concerning the character and condition of their portfolios, details of the acquisition of their investments and other data.

Replies of specific investments will be held confidential, but a general resume of facts gleaned from the inquiry will be available to the public after they have been compiled and studied by the bureau, it was said.

On the whole, the attorney general's office found the investment trusts ready to coöperate in the investigation by furnishing the required information. Answering the questionnaires entailed considerable statistical work on part of some of the larger investment trusts.

Pro-Rate Nearly Million Among Pool Members

Almost $1,000,000 is being prorated among the members of the Saskatchewan Pool Elevators, Ltd., as their share of the pool's surplus earnings for the crop year 1928-29. This refund is at a rate of three-quarters of a cent a bu of pool grain shipped over the platform or through line elevators and billed to pool terminals.

COTTON FINISHES AT INSIDE

Business in cotton was light yesterday and the range of prices lower, with the close at the inside, after opening at the highest of the day. There were net losses of 12 to 17 points in Chicago and 14 to 17 points on new crop futures in other markets. Spots were 15 points lower, with New York 15.70c, New Orleans 14.85c, Galveston 15c, and Houston 14.90c. There were no cables from Liverpool and there will be none Monday owing to Whitsuntide holiday. The weather over the belt was in the main fair. Complaints of weevil infestation came from central Alabama. Statistics in the main were bearish, as compared with last year. Spinners' takings for the season aggregate 12,782,000 bales, or nearly 2,000 bales less than last year. Prices follow:

BUTTER MARKET UNSETTLED

A decline of ⅛c in November butter contracts and an advance of the same amount in June brought the spread between the two deliveries into more normal proportion on the Chicago Mercantile exchange. Sales were 72 cars and receipts 14,149 tubs.

November eggs weakened ⅛c net after early strength. Some considered it due to renewed storing activity, while others thought general nervousness was to blame. Sales were 37 cars and receipts 22,370 cases. Prices follow:

PROVISIONS NEGLECTED

In the speculative provision trade business was light and the range of prices narrow yesterday, the close being unchanged to lower on lard futures, the latter on October. December was nominally 15c lower. There were no trades in bellies. Shipments of meats for the week were larger than the previous week, but under last year's, and the same situation prevailed in lard. Packing in Chicago since March 1 aggregates 1,529,000 hogs, against 1,706,000 last year. Prices follow:

OPERATION OF "POOL" BRINGS INJUNCTION

New York, June 7.—(AP)—Accused of operating a pool in Manhattan Electrical Supply company stock on the New York stock exchange, W. J. Goldman & Co., security dealers, and six individuals were restrained from further dealings in securities today in an injunction issued in the Brooklyn Supreme court.

The individual defendants include Welker Cochran, former billiards champion and now a customers' man for Harriss & Vose.

Representatives of the bureau of securities claim that through a contract in which Richard H. Brown, president of the Manhattan Electrical Supply company, agreed last summer to buy 50,000 shares of common stock, W. J. Goldman & Co. formed "one of the most audacious pool operations in the bureau's experience."

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Trade sentiment in wheat was mixed at the close. Every one in the grain trade is watching weather conditions in the southwest where harvesting is on and the American and Canadian northwest, where good rains are needed. Between these two conditions operators are inclined to go slow in making commitments on both sides, with a leaning towards bearishness because of the disappointing export business in hard winter wheats. At the last bids on wheat were given preference, while on corn it was about a standoff in the privileges.

A point made by Fred Uhlmann of the Uhlmann Grain company is that receipts and shipments of wheat for the week will show only a moderate decrease in the visible supply. A new factor which has entered into the price making is the great depression in business and the decline in stock market which makes speculative buyers for wheat scarce.

A grain man from downstate says the southern Illinois has a very light wheat crop this year, but corn is doing well and has been benefited by rains the last few days. In Missouri conditions on the whole are good for wheat.

Area sown to wheat in nineteen countries so far this year is 131,732,000 acres, an increase of 2 per cent based on the 133,959,000 acres reported by those countries in 1929 when they represented 55 per cent of the world's wheat acreage, exclusive of Russia and China.

instance that granted by the Continental Motors corporation for its workers for two weeks beginning June 29—and by the failure of the market to rally after the repeated bear attacks of the last few days.

Some of the highest grade stocks of the list figure in this overnight accumulation of orders—radio for example. Ten thousand shares of it were put on the block at the very outset of trading. Other large opening orders were Radio-Keith, 10,000 shares; Vanadium, 5,000; General Electric, 10,000, and Commonwealth and Southern, 6,900 shares.

U. S. Steel Sags.

United States Steel, the leader of leaders, began to sag right off the reel and continued to do so through to the finish. It broke through to a new low for the year at 164 and was off nearly 3 points at the close of trading. Westinghouse was weak from the very beginning, declining some 6 points. General Electric dipped 2¾, Radio 3⅜, Western Union 2½, and Johns-Manville 2 points.

Amusement shares and public utilities were the hardest hit as groups. Loews dropped nearly five points and Fox, Warner Brothers, and Radio-Keith were off 1 to 2 points. Among the utilities American and Foreign Power dipped 4⅜, Waterworks 3⅜, Electric Power & Light 3¼, and Pacific Lighting, 2 points.

In the merchandise section, Macy stood out with a tumble of 7½ points. Montgomery Ward and Sears Roebuck both held their own fairly well. The coppers had to take a further drubbing and the oils and railroads yielded to the pressure.

PRODUCE MARKETS

Spot butter was in better demand, with prices steady to ¼c higher. Fresh eggs were firm. New potatoes were weak, with southern sold at $3.60@4.00 per 100 lbs, while North Carolina barrels brought $5.25@5.60. Receipts of all kinds 132 cars, with 170 cars on team track. No sales of old. Live turkeys declined 2c, with other poultry unchanged. No receipts by freight.

BUILDING IN CHICAGOLAND MAKES A GAIN

May Figures Climb 54% Above April.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Chicagoland suburbs registered an increase of 3.94 per cent in building construction for May over the preceding month of April, according to a survey of building conditions in the metropolitan area made by S. W. Straus & Co. The permits taken out last month in forty-four communities totaled $3,513,191 as compared with $3,379,044 for April.

Chicago itself registered a gain of 80 per cent for May as compared with the preceding months. Grouping the city and its suburbs, an increase of 54 per cent is shown. The total building construction for May in Chicago and surrounding towns was $15,210,491 as compared with $9,869,344, or a gain of $5,341,147.

La Grange, in Cook county, made the largest gain of any of the suburbs for May as compared with the preceding month, registering 1,670 per cent. Lombard and Downers Grove, both in Du Page county, came second and third with increases of 681 per cent and 575 per cent respectively.

Batavia Makes Imposing Gain.

While the comparisons between May and April are cheering, the comparative figures for May, 1930, and May, 1929, are not quite so rosy. At that, several towns registered heavy advances over the same month of last year. Batavia, on the Fox river, tops the list with the imposing gain of 1,865 per cent in its building permits for May, 1930, as compared with May, 1929.

The next two are the pair of Burlington suburbs which won recognition in the comparisons between May and April. These are La Grange and Downers Grove. La Grange registered a gain of 266 per cent for May over May. Downers Grove, which seems to be one of Chicago's fastest growing suburbs, made an increase of 226 per cent for last month over May of 1929.

Downers Grove Gains Fast.

Downers Grove, by the way, was fourth town in Du Page county when the 1920 census was taken. It was then surpassed by Elmhurst, Wheaton, and Hinsdale in the order named, with Glen Ellyn trailing in fifth place.

The 1930 census has shifted things about a bit with Downers Grove pushed up to second place, next to Elmhurst, which retains its place at the top. Glen Ellyn also has jumped up in the scale from fifth to third place, while Wheaton has slumped from second place to fourth. Hinsdale also has slid down from third place to fifth.

Following are the comparative building figures for the Chicagoland suburbs:

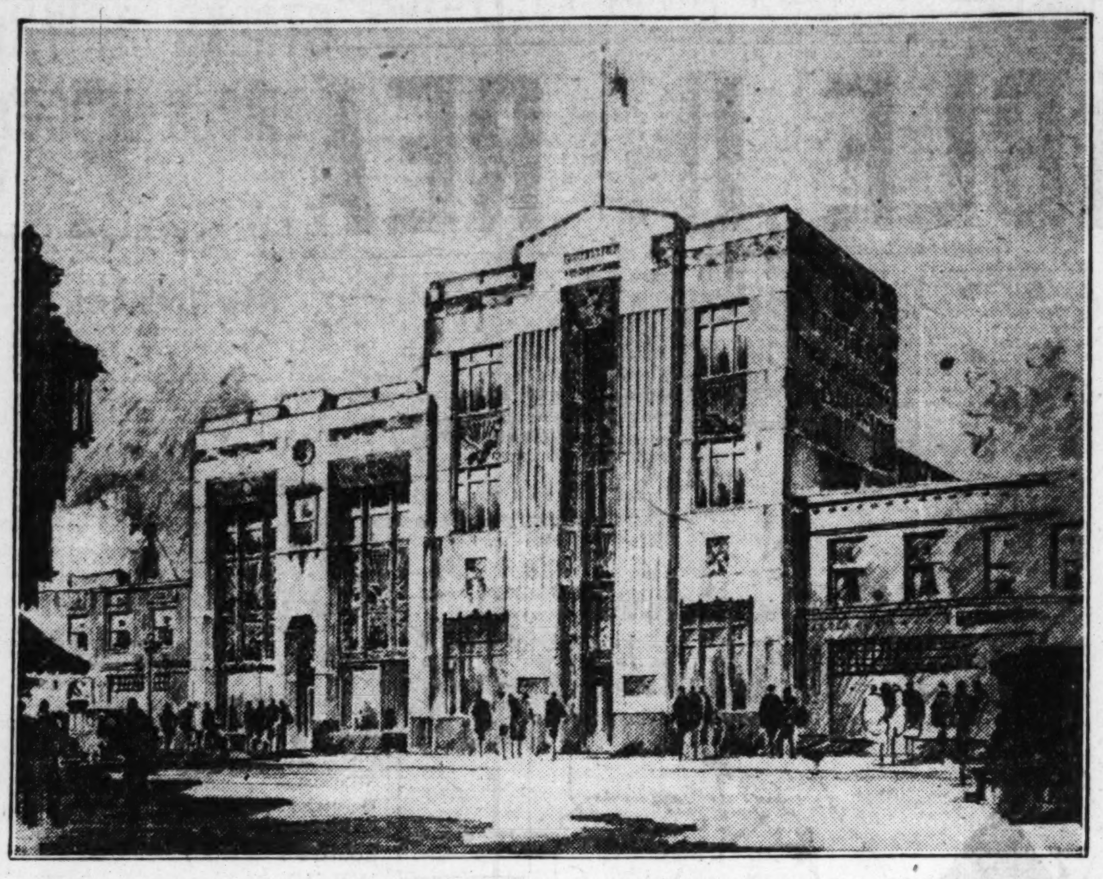
NEW SOUTH SIDE BANK BUILDING



Above is the new home of the Chatfield Trust and Savings bank to be erected at 7936-40 Cottage Grove avenue. It will provide quarters for both the bank and McKey & Poague. Meyer & Cook are the architects. The cost is placed at $350,000. Elmer A. Johnson made this picture.

CHATFIELD TRUST BANK TO PUT UP $350,000 HOME

Building to Rise on Cottage Grove.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

Work is scheduled to start in a few weeks on a new home for the Chatfield Trust and Savings bank at 7936-40 Cottage Grove avenue, a little bit south of the institution's present building. The new structure will also house a branch office of McKey & Poague, Inc., one of the largest south side real estate firms.

A. W. TOBIAS.

Meyer & Cook designed the bank's new home, which is to be three stories high. It will be of modern architecture. The street elevation will be finished in Indiana limestone, black granite, bronze, and other metal work.

The building site fronts seventy-five feet on Cottage Grove avenue and the approximate cost of the undertaking is placed at $350,000.

As to the interior, it will be finished in typical bank style. There will be a modern vault in the basement for safety deposits. A feature of the building will be a community room, which is to be available for use by clubs, societies, and other organizations in the neighborhood.

The Chatfield Trust and Savings bank was organized in 1926 by the Woodlawn Trust and Savings bank group. It now has resources of more than $1,000,000.

Officers of the bank are: A. W. Tobias, president; Arthur H. Meyer, vice president; Stanley G. Boberg, cashier, and J. C. Just, assistant cashier.

JOHN P. HOOKER ACQUIRES ESTATE IN OLD VIRGINIA

John P. Hooker of Hooker & Slosson has just acquired a 600 acre estate in the Tidewater country of Old Virginia where he plans to spend some of his leisure moments with his family and friends. The property is the Belle Grove plantation on which stands an old colonial mansion built in 1790. It is located at Port Conway, on the Rappahannock river, about twenty miles below Fredericksburg. The property is famous as being the birthplace of President Madison, though the President was not born in the mansion now standing. Port Conway was named for Francis Conway, grandfather of President Madison. Belle Grove plantation has a mile of frontage on the Rappahannock, with a wharf that accomodates vessels drawing up to twenty feet of water. The abstract of title runs back to 1667 to an English crown grant.

WORK STARTS ON 5 STORY INN AT STATE-SEVENTH

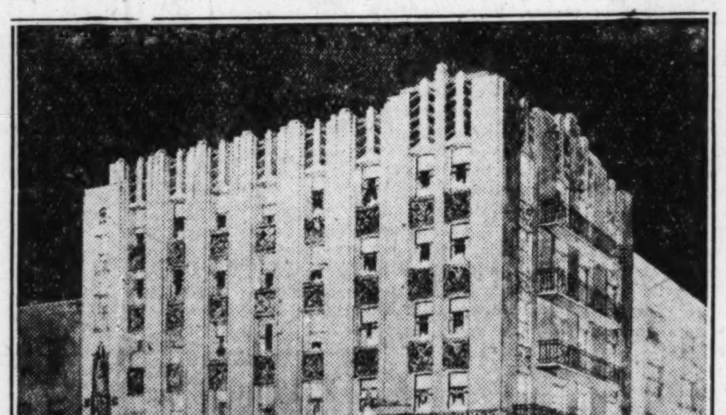
For the first time in a good many moons the close-in-to-town section of South State street is the scene of a building operation. The old building at the southeast corner of Seventh and State has been torn down and last week excavators were busy clearing the site for a five story hotel and store structure which is to replace the old relic that formerly stood on the land.

The Quigley trust is the owner of the ground which fronts forty feet on State and ninety feet on Seventh.

The new hotel—which will be known as the East Seventh Street—will be of fireproof construction. There will be a number of stores on the ground floor and seventy rooms on the four upper stories.

Designed by Michaelsen & Rognstad, Inc., the building will be of modern architecture. It is estimated that the structure will cost $150,000. The Duval Construction company has the general contract.

EAST 7TH STREET HOTEL



Work has started on the above five story building, to be known as the East 7th Street hotel, at the southeast corner of State and 7th streets, from plans by Michaelsen & Rognstad. The estimated cost is $150,000.

CART ORDINANCE OF HORSE DAYS IS WITHDRAWN

BY THOMAS WREN.

Through the efforts of the Illinois Motor Truck Operators' association the Chicago public cart license ordinance has been repealed, according to an announcement made by Patrick J. Lavelle, an official of the cartage organization.

P. J. LAVALLE.

Lavelle stated the cart ordinance was adopted in Chicago three decades ago, when express wagon owners of the one horse variety stood on street corners and solicited business, similar to other groups of public vendors. He pointed out the cartage business then underwent a period of transition, with the result that the small express dealers faded from the picture, while the trucking industry became highly organized along business lines. Lavelle asserted the old cart license tagged along and was fastened on the reorganized industry.

Several attempts, he said, were made to have the law repealed, but the only successful fight against it was waged by State Senator Thomas J. Courtney, who was guided in the controversy by Michael J. Galvin, head of the Chicago Truck Drivers' union, local 705.

Secretary C. F. Martell of the Truck Operators' association stated Chicago truck owners are assessed with nine different state, county, and city taxes, and he avers the cartage men believe their business has been the object of some discrimination. The association, said Martell, has started a campaign to have these various levies adjusted.

The officers of the Truck Operators' association are: Daniel F. McKeown, president; H. Hinchliffe, vice president; W. E. Cloud, treasurer; C. F. Martell, secretary. The executive committee is William Fullerton, George Wolff, M. Neilsen, and Patrick J. Lavelle.

SUBDIVISION FIRM GIVES MIDLOTHIAN VILLAGE A PARK

For the seventh time in the forty years it has been in the subdivision business, John R. Robertson & Co. have given a park to the public. This last gift is an entire block of land in the center of their subdivision in the village of Midlothian. Mr. Robertson delivered the deed of the block of land to be a playground for all time, to R. J. White, president of the village.

JOHN R. ROBERTSON.

The American Legion, Midlothian post No. 691, Kenneth Sidell, commander, had charge of the ceremony of dedicating the park to the use of the boys and girls of the village. The speakers were Paul T. Klenk, assistant attorney general, and Frank J. Kasten, mayor of Blue Island.

When John R. Robertson & Co. laid out the village of Midlothian a few years ago they set aside a block of land in the center for a future park. The village has grown so in the last few years and there are so many children that they decided the time had come when the park was needed.

HOME BUILDING AND REMODELING

A SUMMER HOUSE IDEALLY PLANNED FOR SIDE OF HILL

Designed to Give Maximum of Livable Area.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.
[Home Builders Editor.]

The hillside site is a popular one for the summer home, although to achieve the best results the topography of the land must be carefully studied.

This cottage today shows an excellent way to handle a corner hillside site, with the ground sloping down sharply to the road on both sides. Home of Dr. and Mrs. Frank E. Deadman in Club Estates, Geneva Lake. Designed and built by Arthur B. Jensen, 7 West Madison, Chicago.

Such a plan as this may also be used just as well on a level lot by eliminating the basement garage.

In the designing of this house long outside stairs and high basement wall exposed to view have been avoided by grading up to within a foot of the main floor level on the entrance side of the house. The fill is secured from excavation of the basement. This naturally requires a cement retaining wall under that side of the house, but it pays for itself by providing a basement garage. The house shown is so situated that it stands 7 feet above grade on the far end so that one can drive into the basement from the ground level without any grading or excavating at that point.

Simple Exterior Effect.

Extremely simple in its exterior effect, a decorative feature has been given the cottage by the addition of an entrance of pleasing lines, grouped with the fireplace.

The floor plan is both a step saver and a money saver. Each room is easily accessible from the others and yet the living quarters are separated from the sleeping quarters. Here are fairly large rooms in a small house, simply because there is no waste space.

If desired the living room could be made 29 feet long without making the house larger by connecting the front bedroom and living room with French doors and using in the bedroom a disappearing bed and furniture that might pass as living room furniture. This disappearing bedroom would make an ideal guest room, or it could be used equally well for some family purposes. The owners' bedroom is near the kitchen and the children sleep in the large airy dormitory upstairs, which is always cool at night if one is fortunate enough to have built in the woods.

As to Dining Room.

The dining room is really a glazed porch, but if one prefers it can be screened only, with French doors between the porch and the living room. To save space in the compact kitchen, the rear entrance is off the porch, near the kitchen.

Note should be made of the stairway down to the garage directly under the attic stairs. During inclement weather it is especially convenient to be able to unload both passengers and packages in the house itself.

Indeed, a garage attached or separate is as much needed in a summer home as in a city residence by most families. Even though a family uses the cottage for week-ends only, the average person does not care to make a habit of leaving the car out all night, exposed to summer storms or spring and fall weather.

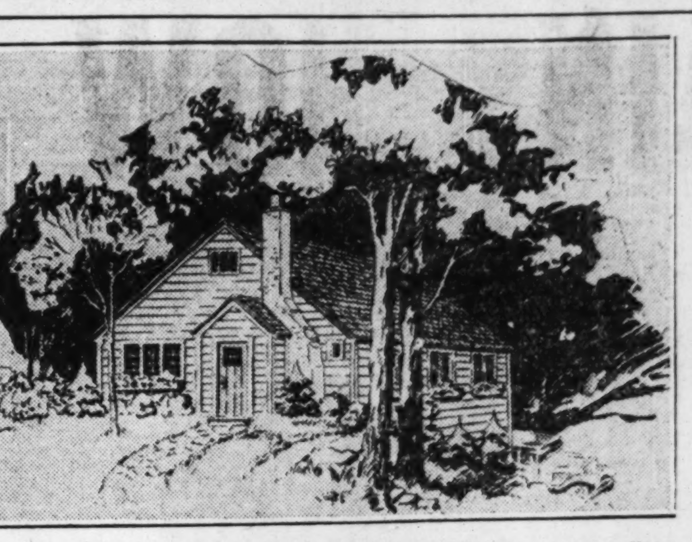
Bottom Price $2,350.

By using good summer construction the cottage can be built for $2,350. This cost includes staining both exterior and interior, using the basement only for a garage, and eliminating most of the interior trim and finish. Plumbing needs, toilet, tub, lavatory and sink [$300] are included in this estimate. If no running water is available this amount can be deducted.

Employing all year round construction, however, and finishing the exterior and interior as one would a city residence, would bring the cost up to about $3,600. This additional $1,250 covers extra sheathing, double floors, full basement with cement floor, furnace, walls plastered, complete interior trim and two coats of paint outside and in.

In both types of construction the attic dormitory is left unfinished, although by the addition of two dormers, two large bedrooms could be built there.

COST IS MODERATE



A five room country home illustrating an ideal way to handle a hillside site. The cottage may be built for $2,350 by using good summer construction; for $3,600 using year round construction. Residence of Dr. and Mrs. Frank E. Deadman, Country Club Estates, Geneva Lake, Ill. Designed and built by Arthur B. Jensen, 7 West Madison street, Chicago.

BIGGER, BETTER WELL DESCRIBE 1930 BATHROOM

Advising on Items to Include.

BY HOMER GRANT.

The 1930 bathroom differs from its predecessors of a decade ago not alone in its colorfulness and beauty, but also in the quietness and efficiency of its plumbing and fixtures.

Haphazard bathroom planning and equipment have gone into the discard. It is no longer placed in any space that one does not happen to want for anything else. Bathroom fixtures are no longer crowded into as little room as possible. Everywhere we see a tendency towards larger and better equipped baths, and also better located baths. We see bathrooms which are even given two windows—given as much sunlight and ventilation as possible, for the place the bathroom occupies is chosen with ventilation and exposure factors well in mind.

But just what should I include in my new bathroom that I may make sure I am building for the best in every way?

Well, first, before any purchases are made, there is the selection of the plumbing contractor. Choosing one with a reputation for good work means that good plumbing will lie in the concealed parts as well as the visible parts.

Get the Best.

A home owner may have several contractors bid on his house plumbing and one bid will be much lower than any of the others. But before the lowest of all bids is taken, the owner should make sure just what grade of fixtures will be used in the hidden spaces of the walls and the floors.

This is even more important than the fixtures which are evident. A home owner who has not a great deal of money at his disposal and who must economize in every possible sensible way can use comparatively inexpensive fittings such as tub, lavatory, medicine cabinet and so on. For these can be replaced with newer, handsomer types and higher grades of finishes later on when his purse becomes larger.

After the hidden parts are properly installed come the visible parts to be considered.

Type of Lavatory.

Pedestal lavatories have come to stay. These can be of enameled iron or vitreous china. The latter are more expensive but are easy to clean, are free from chipping and retain their luster indefinitely. Here again, however, purse strings only stretch so far. If enameled lavatories are the ones to be afforded they can be depended upon to give good service and if one can afford the additional cost of an acid-resisting enamel finish it is a wise investment.

Faucets, of course, are optional on all lavatories. The use of the mixing type is very general now.

As for toilets, there are three types of toilets made by most manufacturers: The wash down, the reverse trap and the siphon jet. Get a good quality in the type you can afford; the siphon jet is the last word in smoothness of operation and it is claimed that it will give trouble free operation for practically the life of the house. But naturally it costs more than the others.

Remember Shower Baths.

Bath tubs of all sizes and types are on the market. Again it can be said that the built-in tubs have come to stay and that the tub on legs is not the thing to put in a new or remodeled house if one can possibly afford the other types.

Shower baths should not be forgotten; in separate compartments or installed over the tub. Whatever type one secures should be equipped with a special shower mixer which enables the bather to get any desired temperature by turning only one valve. When one has such a controller one does not need to be afraid that scalding water will pass through by accident, for if the cold water supply stops suddenly for any reason the delivery is instantly cut off. One of the newest things in shower heads is the type which cleans itself by a simple twist of a lever.

Where one is remodeling an old house a closet can frequently be converted into a shower compartment, with no great additional structural work or high cost of installation.

NATURE BECKONS TO HER QUIET SOLITUDES along the Mazon river. Here, as elsewhere throughout the Illinois countryside, trees and shrubs have come into full leaf above a carpet of velvet green, joining in a symphony of color with blue water and blue sky.

THE TRIBUNE COLOR CAMERA ATTENDS ITS FIRST LIGHT OPERA SEASON, reporting photographically on the new cultural venture of the Chicago Civic Opera company which may be enjoyed in this year's showing until June 21. The scene is from "The Bohemian Girl."

O! THE GALLANT FISHER'S LIFE—Two disciples of Izaak Walton journey through shady lanes of the forest preserve along the Des Plaines in search of a promising pool. Don't deny yourself the joys of BEER

If you miss beer, it is only because you do not know these facts:

There is a brew, called Atlas Special Brew, which is even better than the best of old. It is made by the same masters who made Atlas Beer, always famous in Chicago. And they take special care, so you won't miss beer.

Not a "near-beer," without age or zest. We use the old-time process, skill and materials. But now we treat the water, so you get here the mellow flavor of famous European brews.

Flavor, Tang and Zest

After the brewing we evaporate most of the alcohol. But you don't miss that. If you compared this brew before and after the alcohol removal, you could not tell the difference.

Alcohol was only a small factor in good beer. What people liked in beer was the foam and flavor, the sparkle and the zest. They liked it in the evenings as a social drink, at dinners as a help to digestion, at night as an aid to sleep.

All those delights remain to you in Atlas Special Brew. And few have ever tasted an old-time brew as good.

Don't Spoil This Joy

Don't turn to rank substitutes. Atlas Special Brew will bring back at their best all the helps and joys of old. Just be sure of the name—Atlas Special Brew. A famous laboratory, on every bottle, certifies its purity.

It costs only 15c a bottle, much less by the case of 24 bottles, delivered to your door. Just ask your dealer or phone us. Over 15,000 grocers, delicatessen stores and drug stores in Chicago and surrounding states supply it. Look for the green Atlas Special label on each bottle. THE GRAF ZEPPELIN AT LAKEHURST—Hitched to a great stub mast, the leviathan of the sky, which took off last Monday night on its homeward cruise, was backed into the New Jersey hangar at the terminus of its westward trans-Atlantic flight from Friedrichshafen, via Spain and Brazil. It had ridden out the worst storm of its career during the voyage to Lakehurst.

JUST ANOTHER OCEAN FLIGHT TO DR. ECKENER—Nonchalant, almost bored, the commander of the Graf Zeppelin is caught in an amusing photographic aspect.

THE DAY OF THE HEROES IN CHICAGO—The brilliant scene on Michigan avenue as marchers in the Memorial day parade, 25,000 strong, swung down the boulevard to the lilt of bands and the throb of drums. As remarkable as the spectacle upon the street was that upon the curb, where scores of thousands were massed to pay tribute to the nation's defenders.

HISTORY RE-ENACTED—Sergt. Edward S. Younger of Chicago, who selected the body of the unknown soldier, reproduces the ceremony at Arlington cemetery.

THE NATION'S FUTURE ADMIRALS ON PARADE—Cadets of the naval academy, bronzed, straight, and slim, pass in review before Annapolis officials as thousands of spectators look on. The parade was a feature of annual June week ceremonies at the national school of the sea.

TWELVE FEET UP, plus ten inches, John Wonsowicz, world record pole vaulter of Froebel High, helped the Gary school win the interscholastics at Stagg field.

A FASHION OF THE HOUR—To have your dog sit for his portrait. Diana Thorne, an English artist, is shown here with a model, a dapper Scottie. Miss Thorne is noted for her etchings and paintings of dogs, which do not, by the way, have to be blue ribbon animals. To the right you see two other portraits of "just dogs," pictured in debonair poses. The etchings and paintings are on exhibition at the O'Brien Art galleries. (Associated Press photo.)

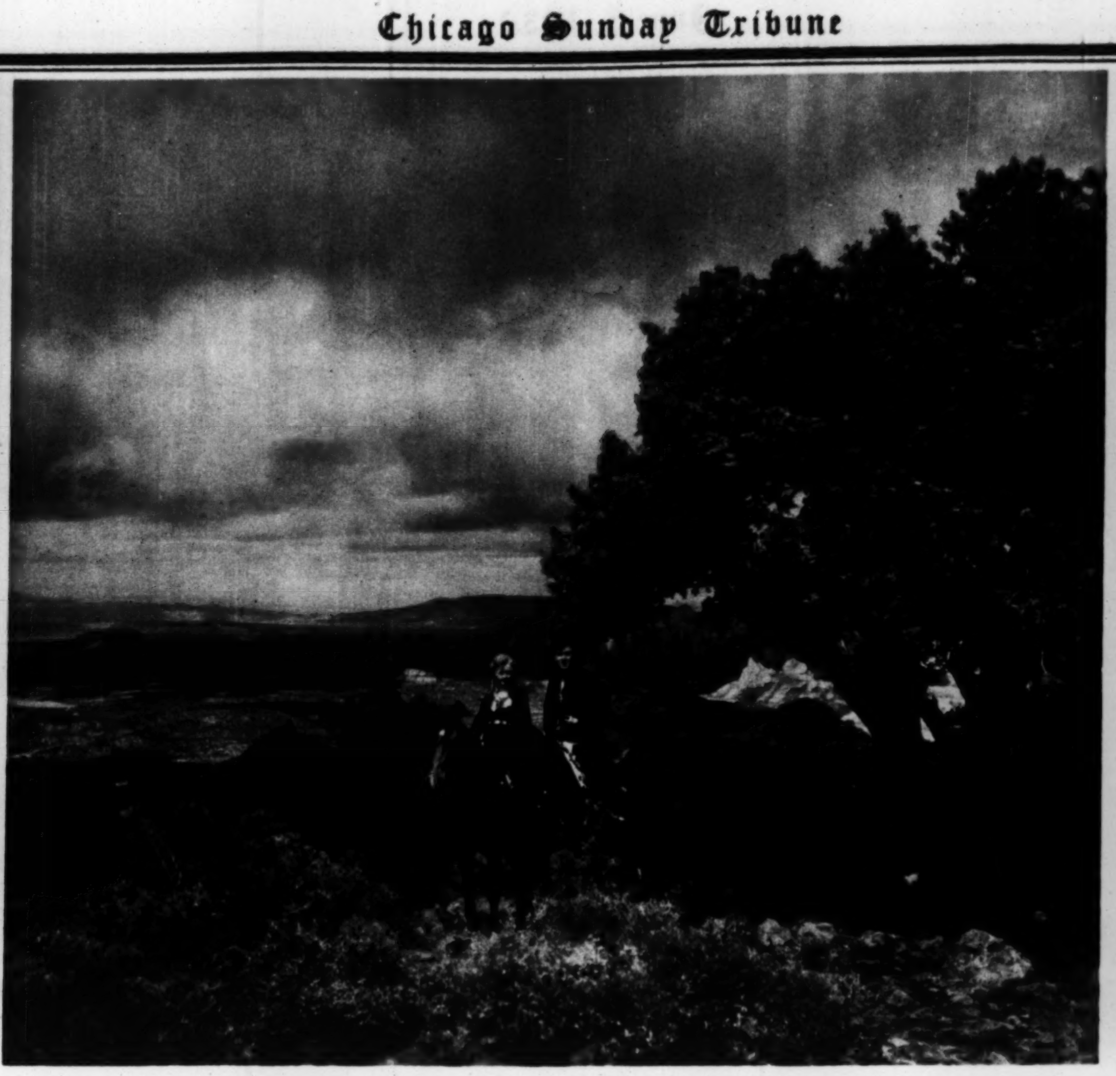
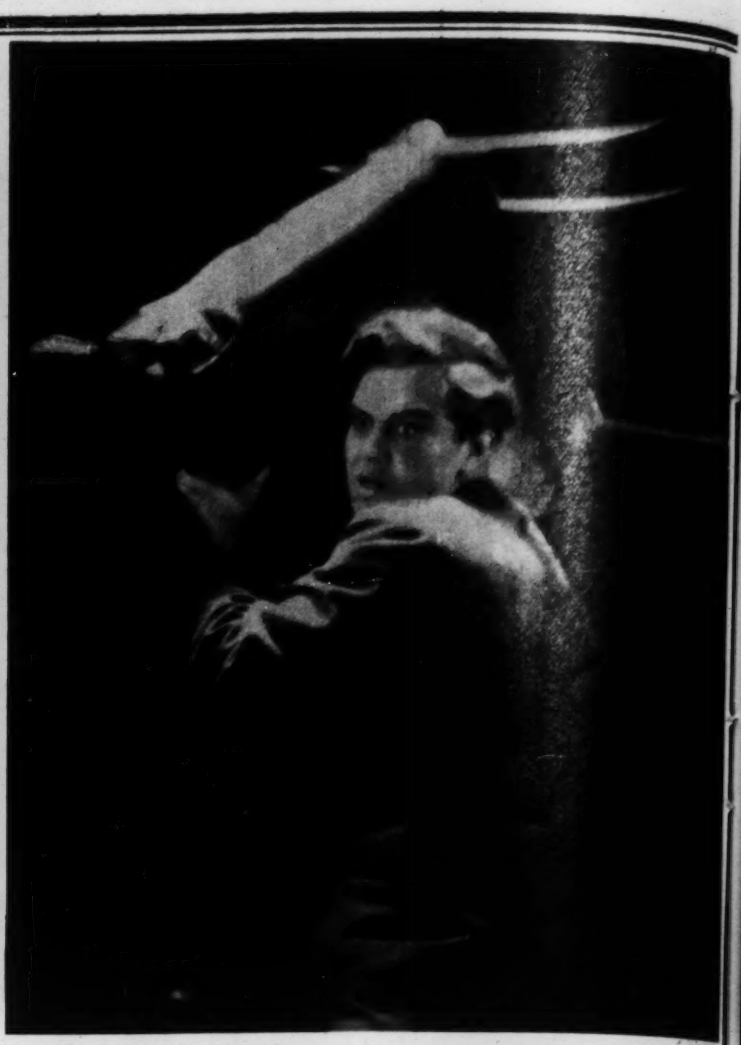
IN "AN EVENING WITH PAPA HAYDN"—Marie Bronarzyk and Pedro Espino, young Chicago singers, will be featured in a stage presentation by the Skalski orchestra at the Goodman theater next Thursday and Saturday evenings, when first American performances of Haydn's one act comic opera in English, "The Apothecary," will be given.



"WHOA," said he, reining in his fiery steed and looking about the Arizona landscape to see what he could see. He is George O'Brien, and she is Lucile Browne, and the scene's from "Last of the Duanes." Let's go places in Arizona!



WHEREUPON, seizing a hefty chair about its midriff in his rage, he—well, if you see the picture you'll learn the rest. He's Gustav Frohlich, playing in "Asphalt."

TWO MORE MOVIE ACTORS, though they weren't consulted about it at all, were subjects of the exploring camera of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson in Africa. The Riverside zoo may introduce some of their kinfolks to Chicagoans in a naturalistic setting.

"This Common Ailment leaves its mark on body, face and mind"

"..Yeast checks it," says Germany's most colorful physician

PROFESSOR DR. MARTIN MENDELSOHN of Berlin—no more colorful figure exists in German medicine today! No more authoritative voice than his could bring you this message of warning—and hope:—

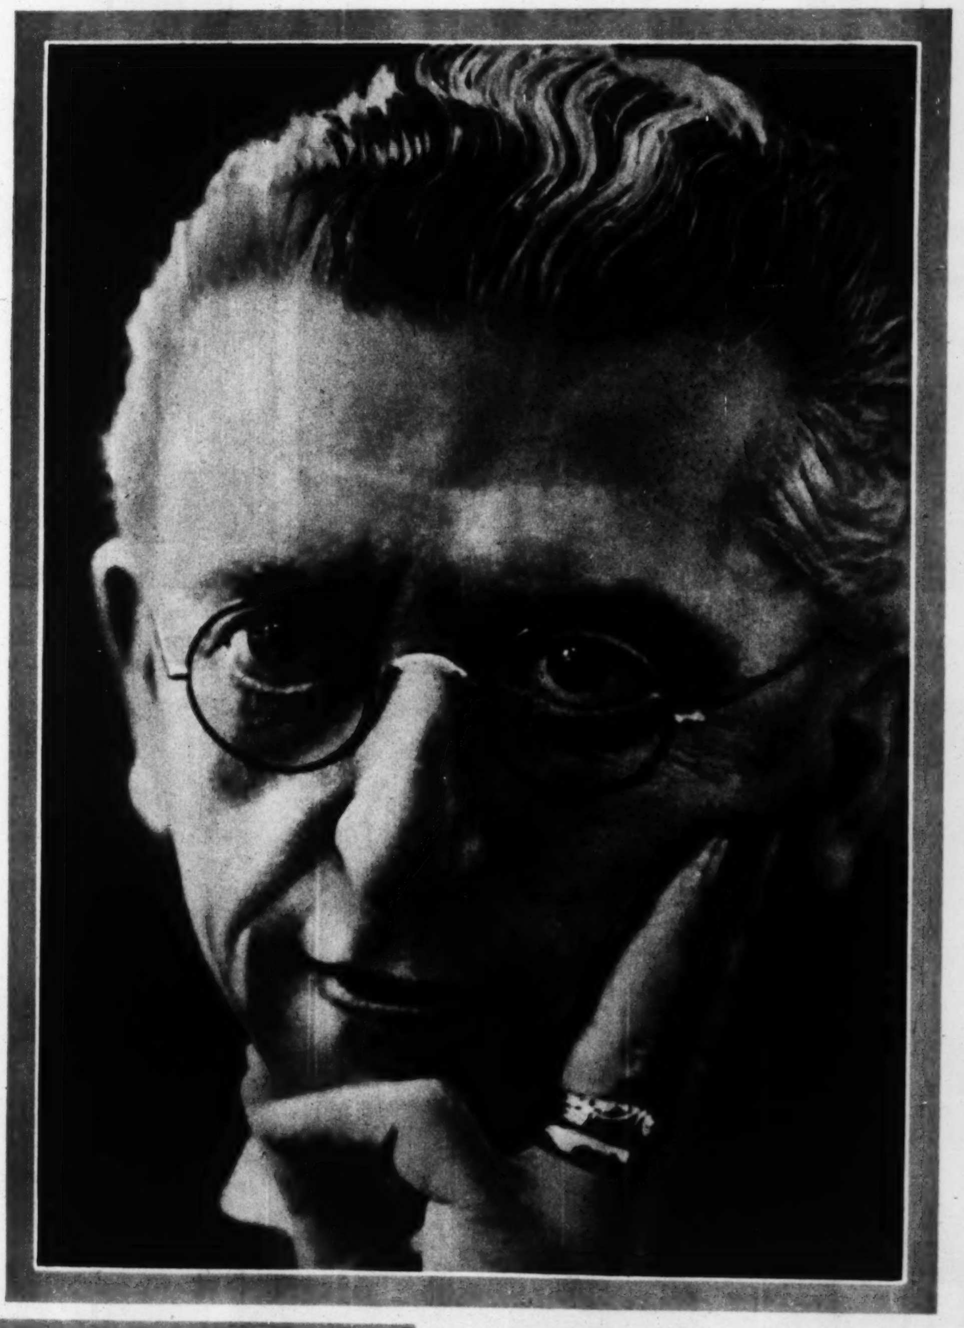
"Constipation is the insidious enemy of our time. It affects all classes, all ages. It undermines the system, making it an easy prey to disease. Often it mars a whole life, stealing vigor and strength, clouding the mind, leaving its mark on body and face.

"Yeast prevents constipation. It stimulates the wave-like motion of the intestines necessary to effect regular elimination.

"With the cleansing of the intestines and the toning up of the system, skin blemishes such as acne and boils disappear.

"Now fresh yeast contains the increased value of the 'sunshine' vitamin D, which counteracts the pronounced ill effects of lack of sunshine."

Let 3 cakes a day of Fleischmann's Yeast keep you "regular," energetic, fit! Every cake is rich in two vitamins indispensable to health—vitamin B and the "sunshine" vitamin D. At grocers', restaurants and soda fountains. Just follow the directions on the label.



DR. MENDELSOHN was physician to the great Eleonora Duse and to the sister of Kaiser Wilhelm I. As medical adviser of the Russian Government, he reported periodically to the Czar. The entire German press recently acclaimed his latest medical book.

"My doctor advised Fleischmann's Yeast"

"I was old before my time," writes Mrs. Mabel Kinneer, Staten Island, N. Y. "As long as I can remember I had suffered from constipation. As I grew worse and worse, I visited a stomach specialist. He advised eating Fleischmann's Yeast every day. Halfheartedly I began. But very soon I noticed improvement. Now I am well. Yeast keeps me in wonderful trim."

Leading doctors of 3 countries say:—

Geheimrat Dr. Carl von Noorden, founder of Europe's most exclusive clinic, at Frankfort, Germany, states: "The use of yeast can bring about normal functioning of the bowels. It is used constantly in my clinic."

Dr. Georges Caussade, physician of the world-famous Paris Hospital, "l'Hôtel-Dieu," says: "Yeast has a real effect on constipation and nutrition."

Dr. Paolo Alessandrini, head of the hospitals of Rome, says: "Yeast has long been famous for its ability to keep the intestines active, clean."

© 1930, Standard Brands Incorporated

Fleischmann's Yeast (with the familiar yellow label) is the only yeast that contains "sunshine vitamin."

Things that best can be done by machines are done by machines that are the admiration of the engineering world. These make delicate measurements or precise applications of tremendous force beyond the power of even the rarest craftsman. Costly to secure and maintain, the use of these machines often materially slows up production. After Eighteen every woman should begin to watch for

Coarse, Conspicuous Pores

on Nose . . .
Chin . . .
Forehead . . .

These are the three places you must watch for conspicuous face pores

The spell of a beautiful skin!

Almost every girl has it at eighteen when the pores of her face are small and fine!

This is the time to begin to watch for the gradual coarsening that starts right after eighteen—and shows especially on nose, chin and forehead.

To keep your pores small and fine, use Woodbury's Facial Soap. It actually shrinks large pores to fineness, and guards against big pores.

Formulated by a skin specialist who spent a lifetime studying the skin and its needs, Woodbury's keeps the face pores small by freeing them of the hardened fatty substance that causes them to enlarge—contracting them to their natural size. The first time you use Woodbury's you will notice its astringent action on your skin.

Begin using Woodbury's today! With each cake of Woodbury's comes the booklet of the most famous skin treatments in the world.

It will help you to keep the clear, fine skin texture that is your right.

Woodbury's is 25 cents a cake at any drug-store or toilet-goods counter. It also comes in convenient 3-cake boxes. John H. Woodbury, Inc.—Cincinnati, Ohio. © 1930, J.H.W., Inc.

AMERICAN HEROES

"THE SWAMP FOX," Tarleton dubbed elusive Francis Marion, fighting idol of the rough ding "Marion's Brigade." On the editorial page of today's Tribune, in the main news section, Clifford Raymond writes the spirited story of Marion and the daring exploits with which he il- mined the darkest days of the Revolution.

VISUALIZING INTERESTING LETTERS—Ceylon, a paradise for lovers of the picturesque, was the origin of today's winner in The Tribune contest. Here Singhalese are shown beaching a catamaran on the coast at sunset. Does the picture give you the urge to set sail immediately for "somewhere east of Suez"?

A DEMONSTRATIVE MOMENT IN A FAMILY OF SORTS—Two sorts. The cubs, silver foxes of a farm near London, lost their real mother to some stage or other of the fur business; but they found a solicitous foster mother in a tabby with maternal complex.

Traffic on Foot

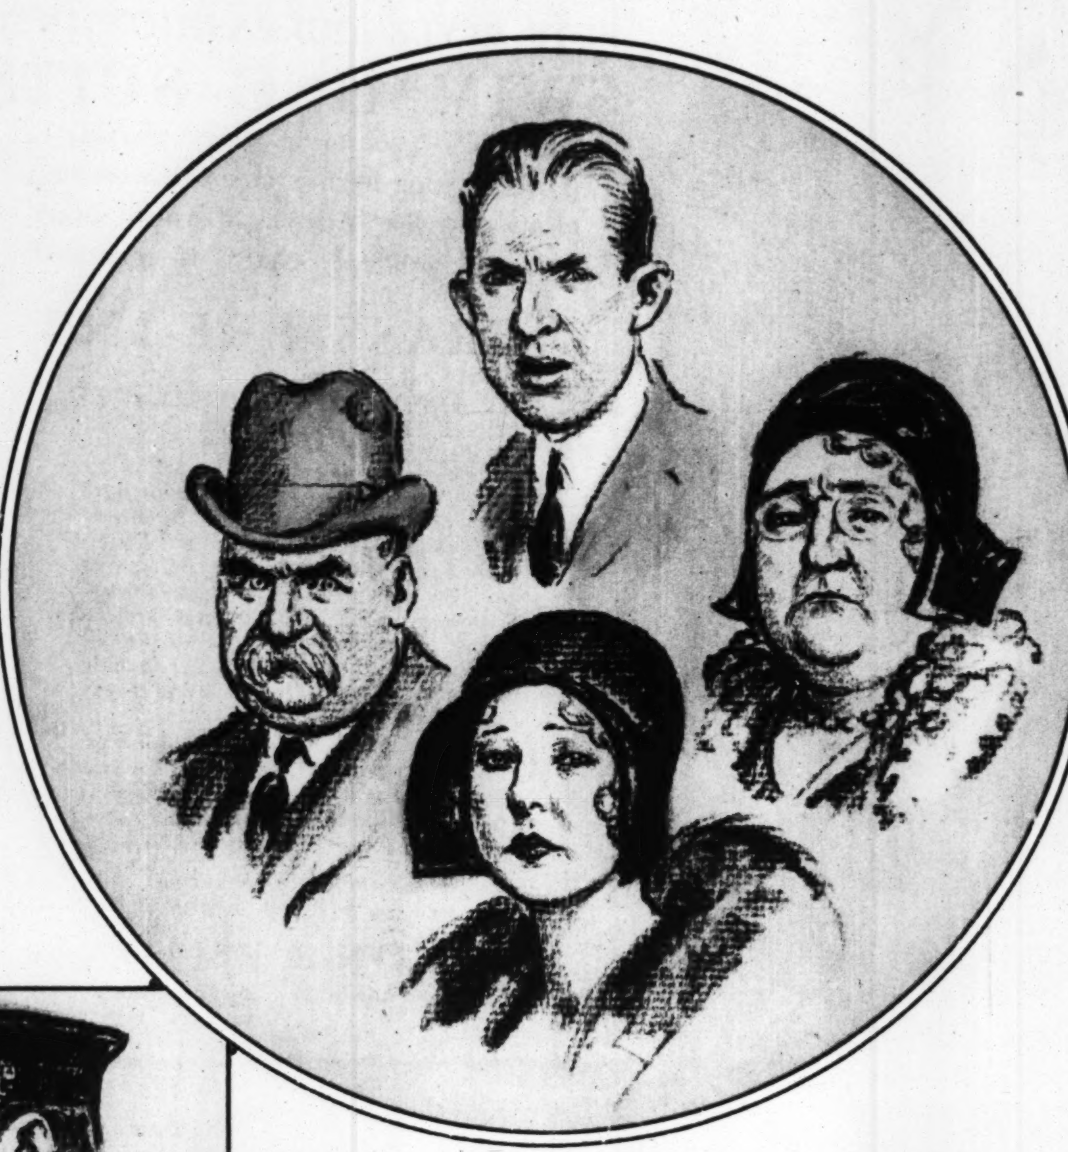
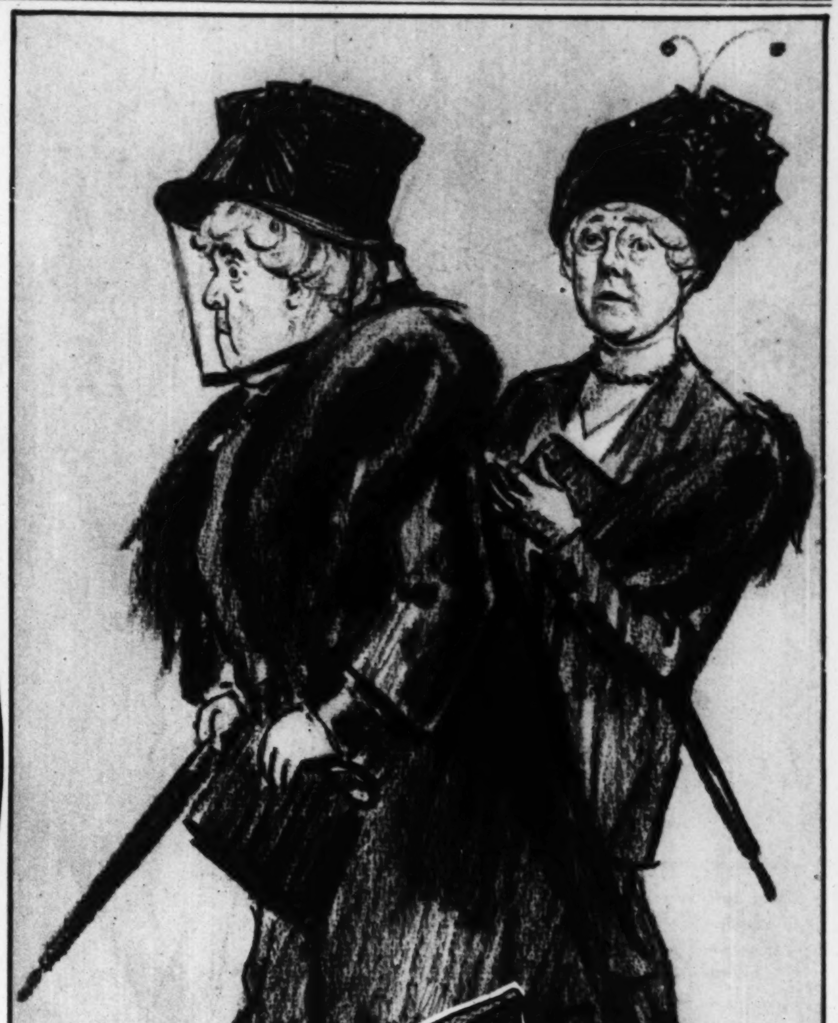
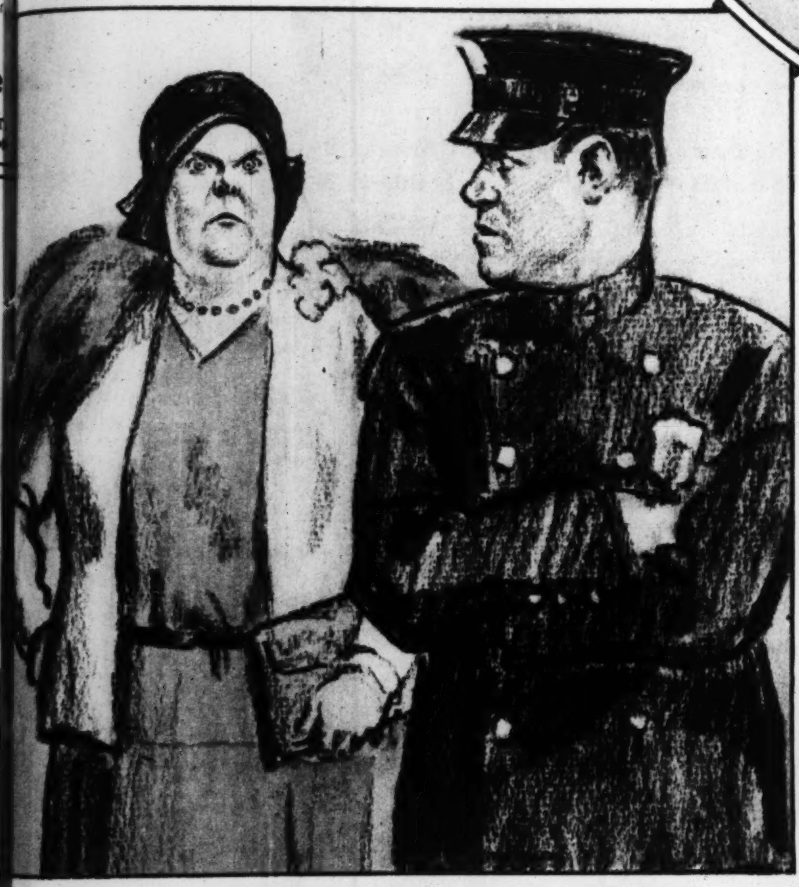
st a lady backing out of the wrong side of a upe, thereby giving the driver of the car behind fearful jolt.



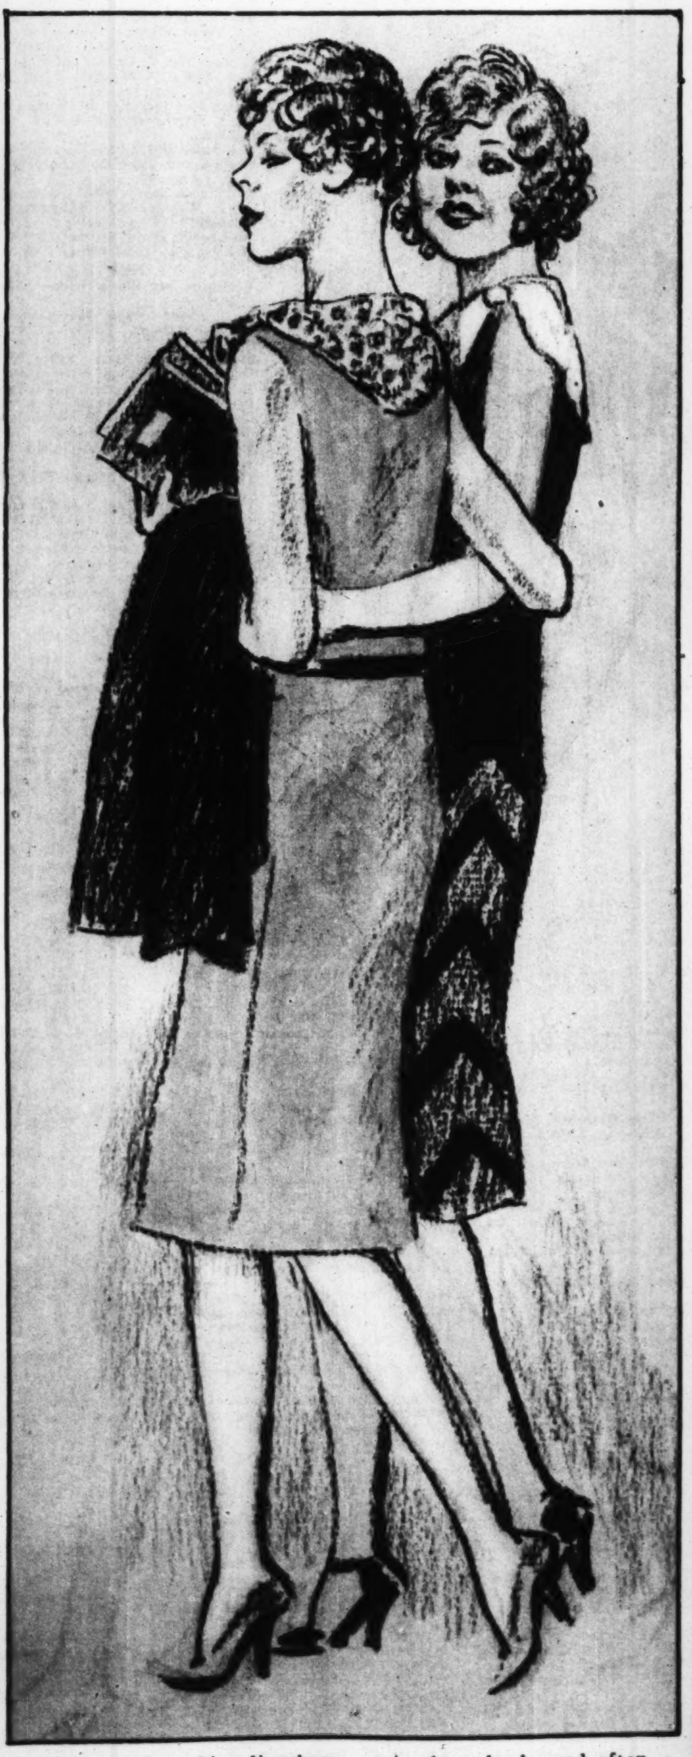
Four varieties of dirty looks directed at a taxi driver who made an unlooked-for left turn. If pedestrians would only realize how a mean look from a person on foot engenders feelings of hatred in the plastic mind of a taxi driver, only the sweetest of smiles would wreathe their brows. Because taxi drivers, even the most callous, will seldom if ever run down a pedestrian with a sunny smile.



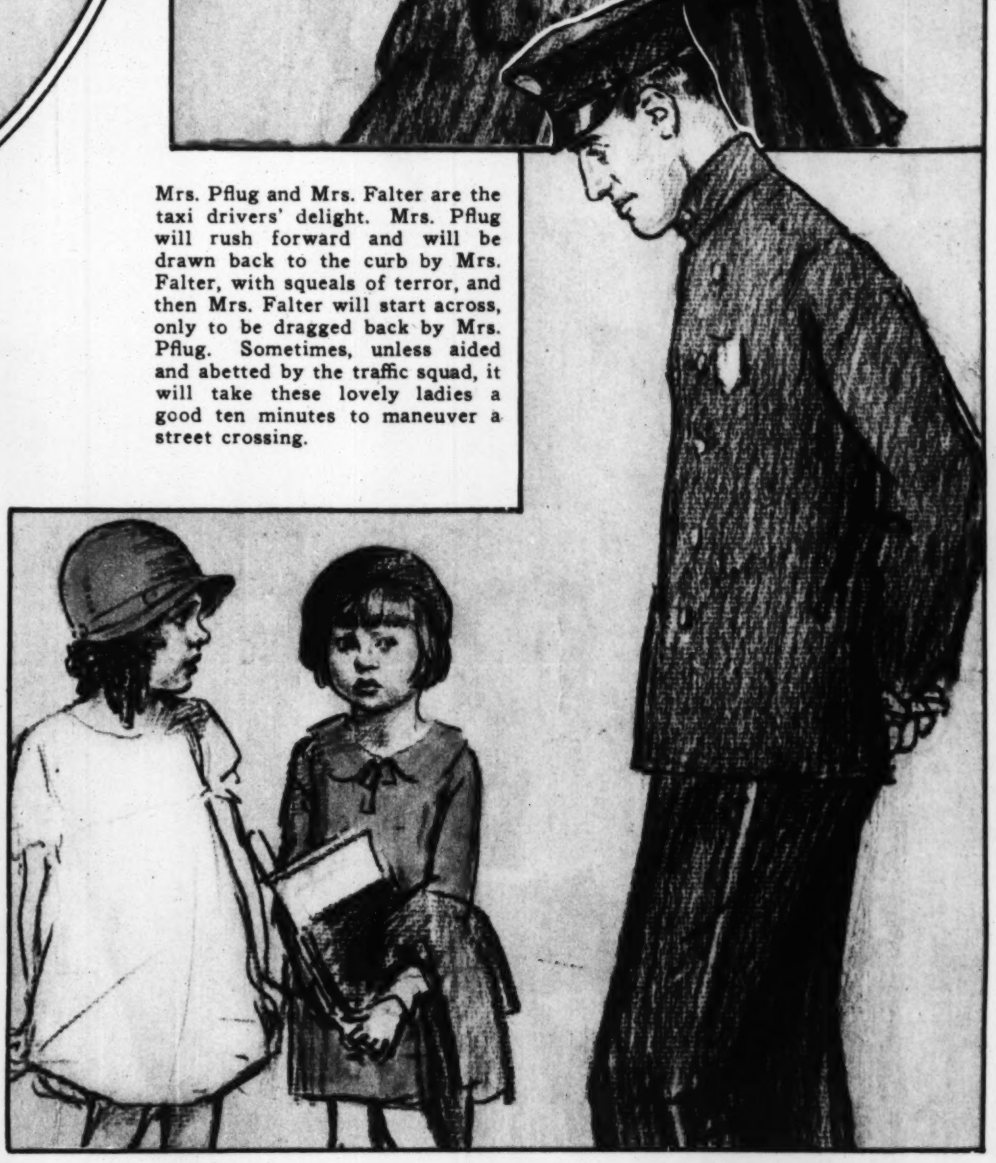
Mrs. Pflug and Mrs. Falter are the taxi drivers' delight. Mrs. Pflug will rush forward and will be drawn back to the curb by Mrs. Falter, with squeals of terror, and then Mrs. Falter will start across, only to be dragged back by Mrs. Pflug. Sometimes, unless aided and abetted by the traffic squad, it will take these lovely ladies a good ten minutes to maneuver a street crossing.



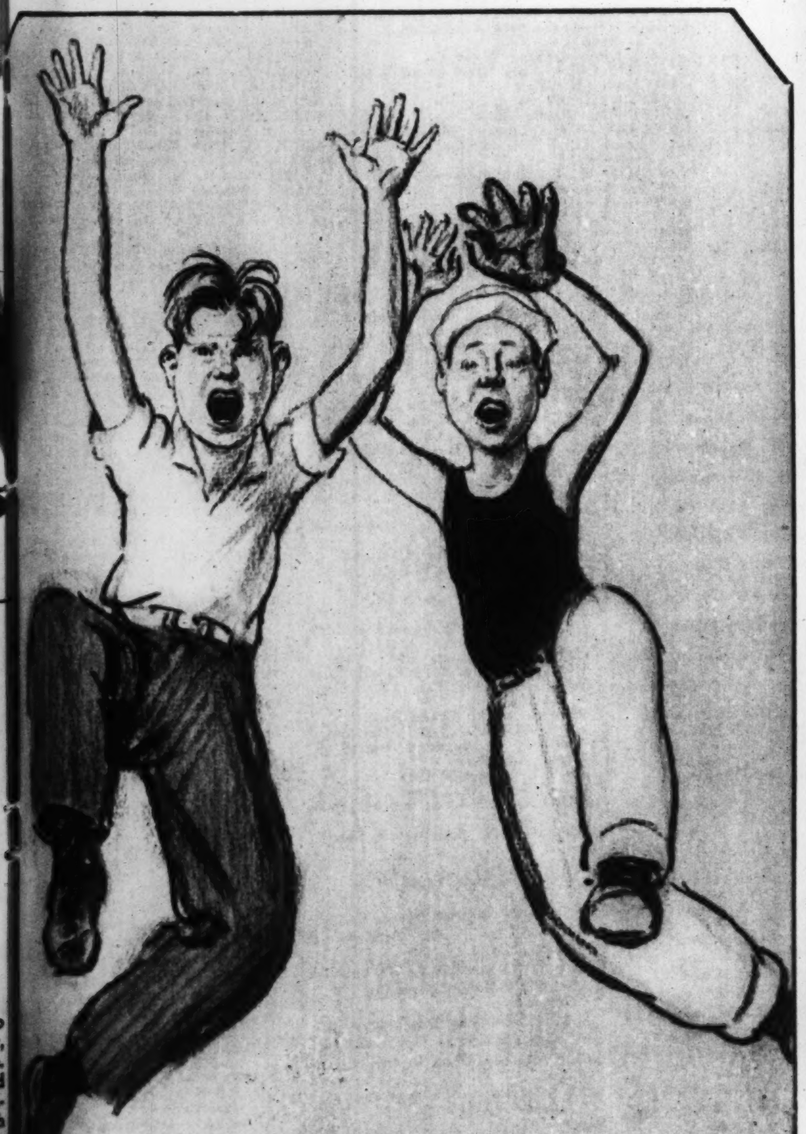
"I know my rights, and don't you forget it, young man. And don't you and me any of your lip!" Officer Reardon has seen fit to stem the tide f traffic on foot, of which Mrs. Isabel Dahl is an integral part. And no ig bully of a cop can push Isabel Dahl back to the curb with impunity, no, siree!



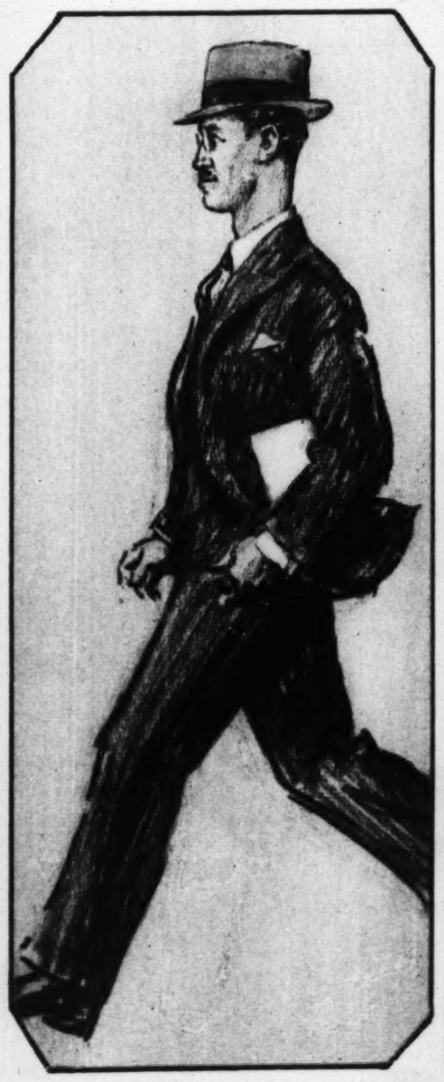
Julia and Josephine live 'way out in the suburbs and often walk out on the state road, talking intimately of this and that. Sometimes they are so absorbed discussing personable boy friends that they forget and stay right in the path of the cars. And if a limousine with a couple of unoccupied seats happens along, why Julia and Josephine will, if urged, accept a lift back home.



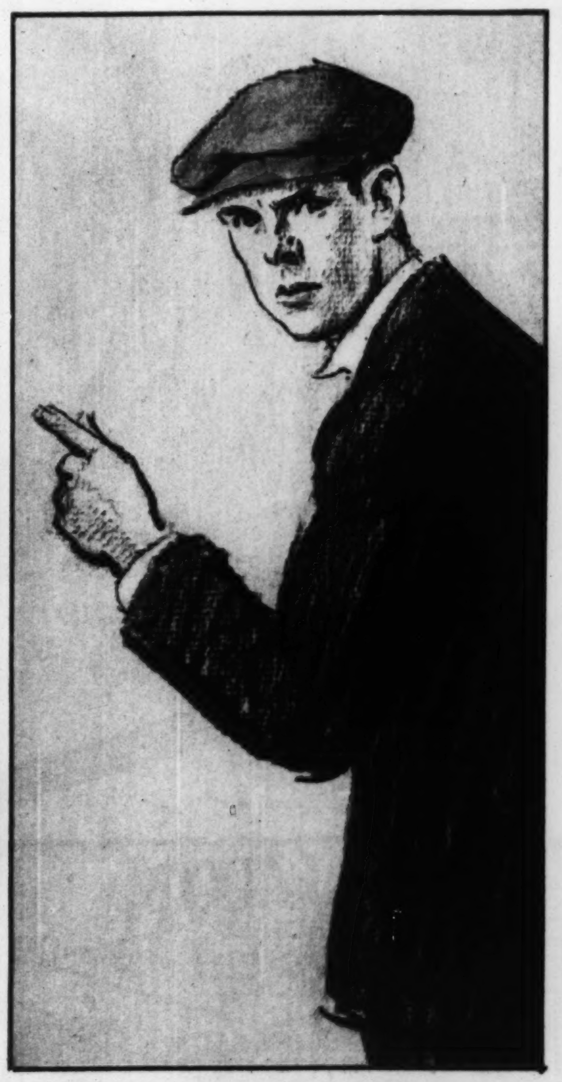
" Hey, you, what's the idea? Wanta get run over? " Officer Burelli giving Marilyn and Gracie a heavy lecture before seeing them safely over the street crossing.



ese boys just have to run out into the thick of the one-way traffic, seeing 's the season for baseball. Not so good for nervous motorists.



The care-free jaywalker cutting across where traffic is thickest and lights are reddest.



Hiker on a state road getting all set to request a lift from a passing motorist. He's trying very hard to look wistful.

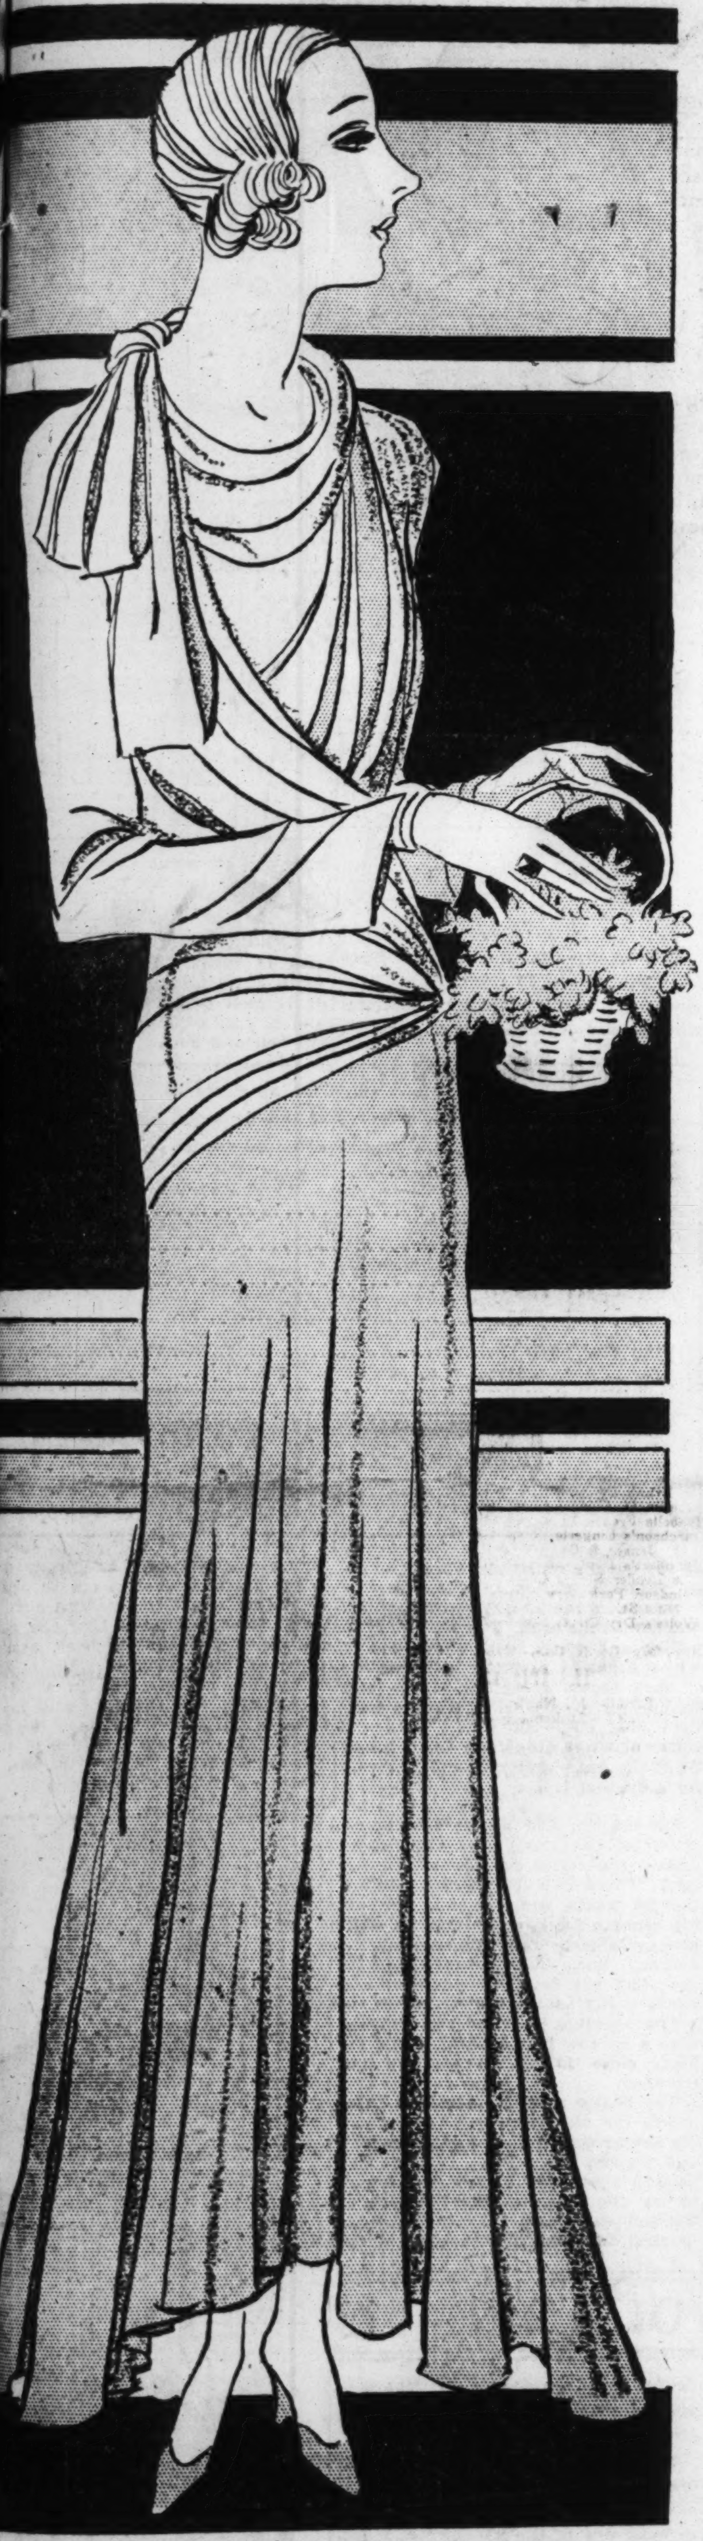
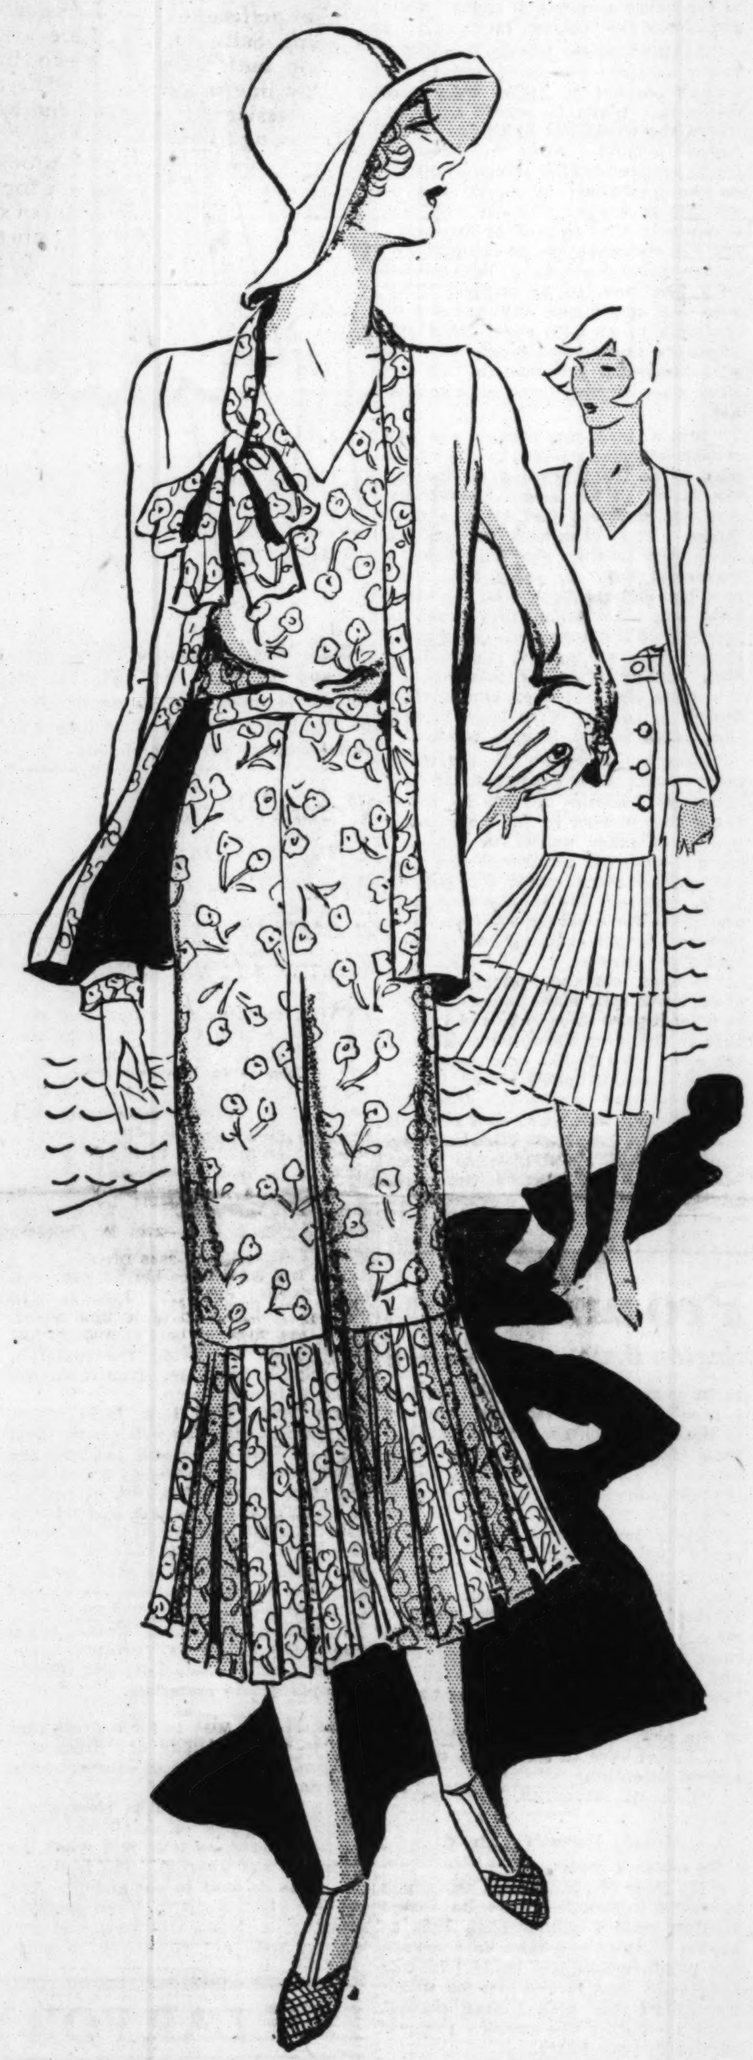
EAST MEETS WEST IN PARIS PAJAMAS

Garments Long Considered Chic in the Harem Are Now Joining the Feminine Parade to Bridge Parties, Receptions, and Smart Beaches



Vionnet drapes these hostess pajamas of dove gray and rose satin and pale gray georgette in Grecian lines.



Molyneux's new country costume of orange coral tussor has figured crepe ¾ "pantalettes" and a removable skirt, both trimmed with box plaited flounces.

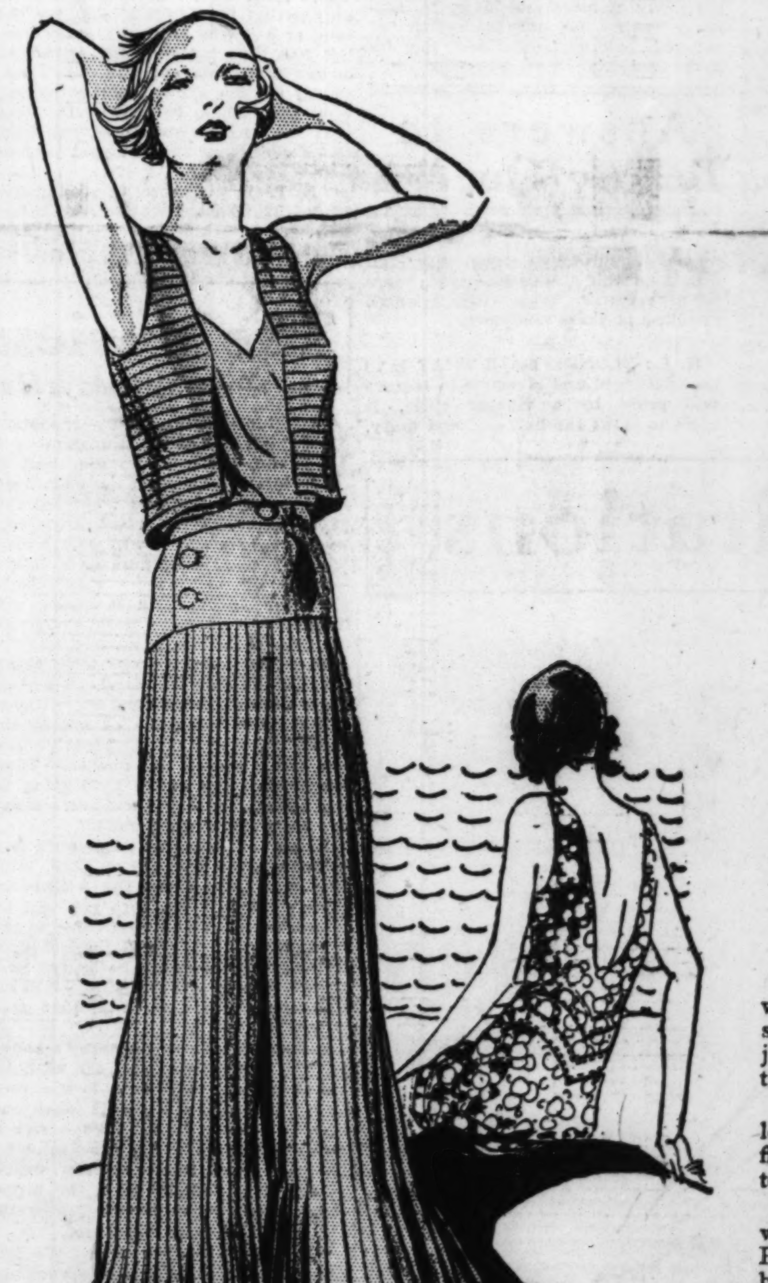
Paris - Snapshots

¶ New summer hats in organdy have chiffon flowers "pressed" flat between their double transparent brims.

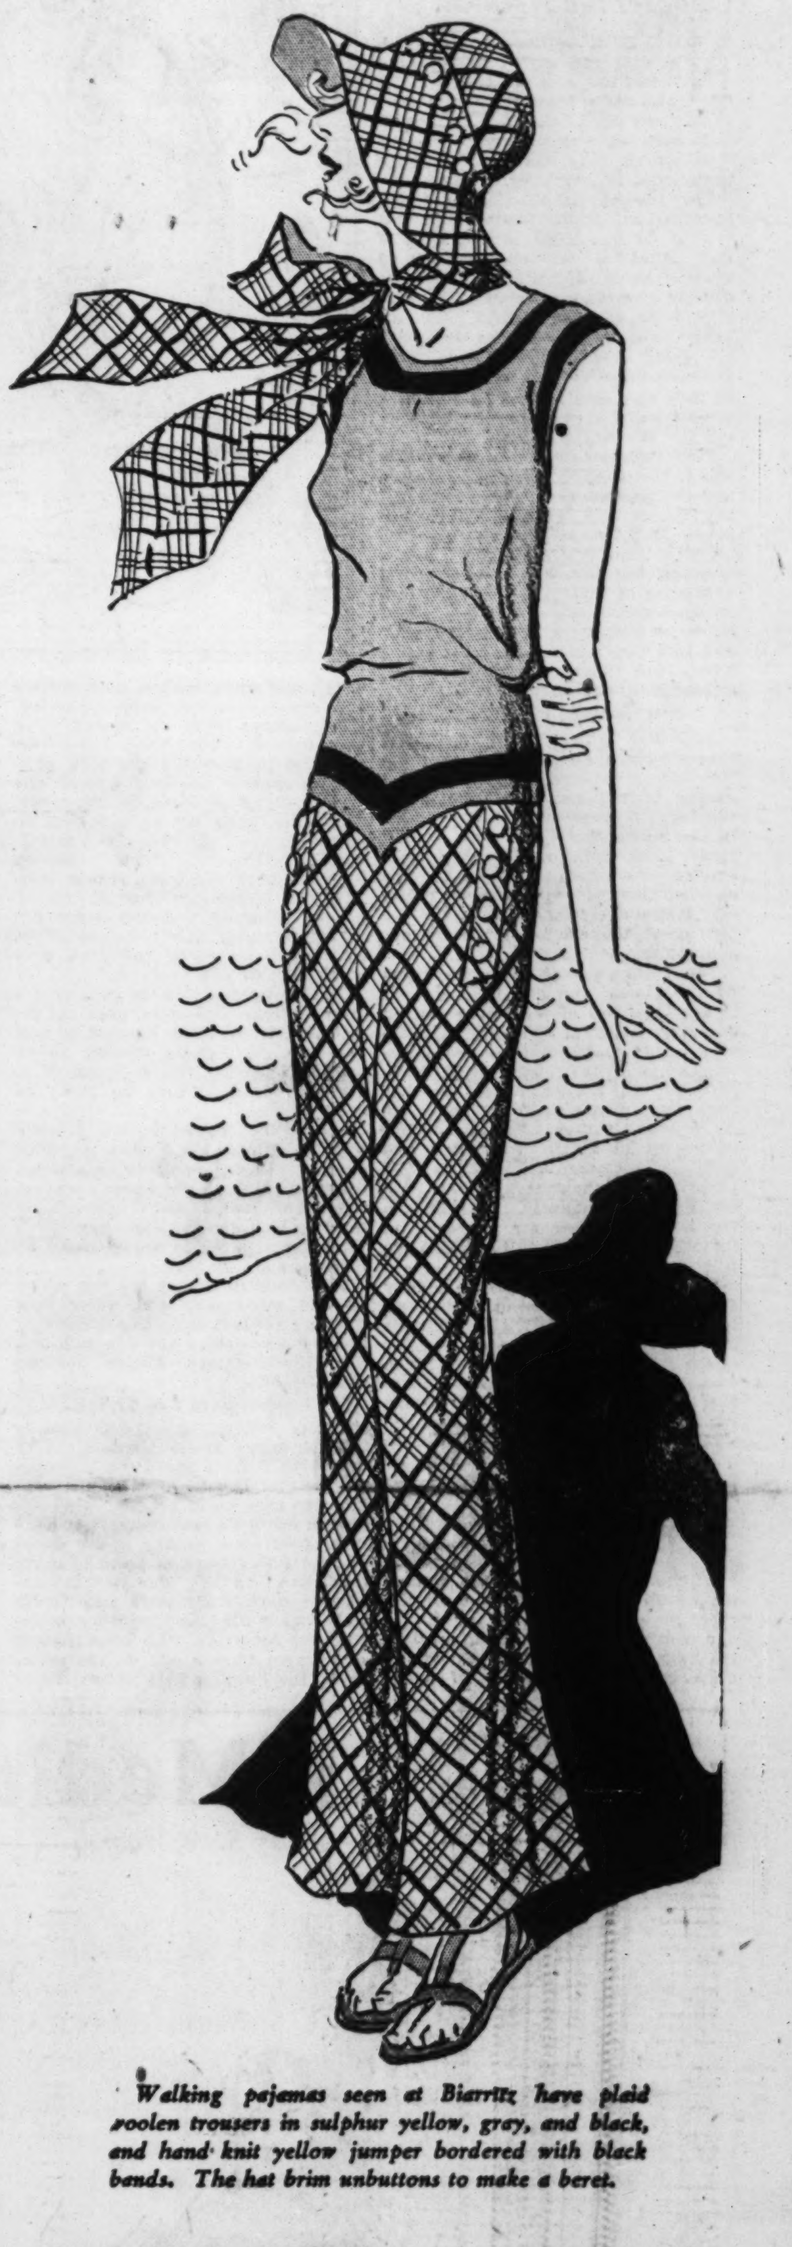
¶ Green and black are the latest millinery color combination. The smartest women at the races wear black straw hats trimmed with prairie green taffeta or vice versa.

¶ Velvet hats are already appearing on smart Paris heads, and it is rumored that Paris milliners will feature colored velvets in their fall creations.

¶ Hand painted linen shoes are a summer novelty. They match hand painted bags and parasols for country wear.



These tailored beach pajamas from Jane Regny in Pompeian red crepe de chine have plaited trousers and a tucked bolero.



Walking pajamas seen at Biarritz have plaid woolen trousers in sulphur yellow, gray, and black, and hand-knit yellow jumper bordered with black bands. The hat brim unbuttons to make a beret.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—(Special.)—To the occidental mind trousers, until lately, have always been considered a male attribute. The "new women" of the nineties, who donned "mannish" mers to mount their dangerous new bicycles were looked n as outrageously eccentric, in spite of the fact that their kers were so voluminous that they could not possibly be taken for their brother, or even their father, by anyone but ntenarian suffering with cataract.

In the Orient, the attitude to trousers is just the reverse of s. The most womanly women in the world, shut up in ems and all that—Turkish, Persian, Hindu, Chinese—have ys worn 'em, while the Celestian mandarin and the Nip-ese daimio have shrouded their indubitable virility in skirts. them, the old American chestnut, "the missus wears the ts" seems simply a natural statement of hard fact.

There are two reasons why trousers have succeeded in in- ting themselves, like the cunning little limpet, in the inine mode of today. They are comfortable and they are dest. The modern girl just insists on her comforts. No re sheet armor and stilt heels for her! And she can't be thered coping with a plaited or circular skirt wide enough free activity in a high wind on the beach or on the tennis rt, either!

The Paris couturiers play a game of follow-the leader with smart women. They design the myriad manifestations of mode, of course, but it's the elegantes, themselves, who de- the trends governing fashionable forms and they are guided the requirements of their all around active social lives. They no reason why men's fashions should hold the monopoly on common sense and they insisted on pajamas, the occidental incarnation of the oriental trouser, for both interior and exterior lounging.

Pajamas proved so successful in informal life that, gradually, they crept out of the lounge lizard class and penetrated into more select society. Louiseboulanger introduced them to informal dinners; Boué Soeurs took them to afternoon bridge parties; Vionnet sponsored them at madame's day at home.

Now, pajamas, like everything else, have been converted to feminism. They had to be or they would have found fashionable doors shut in their faces. The garconne, in this year of grace, 1930, is suffering a total eclipse and the Paris couturiers have turned their genius toward bringing the feminine note into pajamas. They are cutting them princess, plaiting, tucking and draping them. They are using dainty flower printed shantungs and cottons and satins and chiffons. Above, new pajamas are fashioned to accent curves, while their lower circumferences plus ultra plus fours and out Oxford the wildest Oxford bags that ever graced the English seat of learning.

Shorts have become longs—except chez Patou, where they hide under an abbreviated kilt for beach wear. Elsewhere, three-quarter length trousers are a part of every sports and many more formal costumes.

Schiaparelli has always shown crêpe or shantung panties to match the blouses of her sports suits and buttoning to the blouses round the waist. She makes white tussor plus fours for tennis, and jersey knickers for golf, this year. Louiseboulanger puts three-quarter length tussor coolie trousers under the drape around silk or wool skirts of her new morning frocks. Suzanne Talbot makes flowered knickers buttoning tightly below the knee, or frilled pantalettes to be worn with her flowered and frilled Kate Greenaway frocks.

Worth's new pajamas are more alluring than the most feminine tea gowns, with their full circular trousers falling in sculptural folds and their diaphanous draped coats with floating sleeves. Lelong sticks to his Oxford bags, but covers them with long fitted and flared, Persian flowered coats or butterfly sleeved, Japanesy kimonos.

Patou likes full, high waisted trousers of flowered satin, with inside mousseline blouses, flowered jackets and huge flower trimmed hats, for afternoon country wear. Marcel Rochas' shantung and linen beach pajamas are excitingly Spanish with their trousers flared front and back instead of sideways, while the Spanish influence, chez Chantal, is expressed in slenderly flared trousers, slim boleros and tightly draped sashes that permit the steel spring activity of the Toreador.

Dorothy Dulin has sketched for you some of the smart new ways in which Paris couturiers adapt the feminine charm of eastern trousers to meet the trig chic of western ensembles.

In one sketch, a lady is wearing Vionnet's new Greek pajamas that look like a formal afternoon gown until she sits down, when the full circular skirt of dove gray crêpe satin, dipping slightly at either side, turns out to be divided into two. The jacket in paler gray Georgette is softly draped and buttoned on the left hip in Vionnet's characteristic diagonal closing.

It's worn over a blouse of rose crêpe satin with draped and looped collar that becomingly frames the face and adds to the flowing classic effect of the whole ensemble, which is intended to replace the hostess gown for the afternoon reception.

Another picture shows a beach pajama from Jane Regny which, though tailored, is a hundred per cent feminine. It's of Pompeian red crêpe de chine. The trousers are finely plaited below a buttoned hip yoke, the plaits being stitched down to about fourteen inches from the ground, when they burst into a super sea going flare. The simplicity of its sleeveless bolero jacket is relieved by all over horizontal tucks. This pajama is worn over the bathing suit shown on the seated figure dipping her toes into the blue Mediterranean. It's in an exclusive Regny jersey that has irregular circles in three shades of Pompeian red printed on a navy blue ground. It has a deep sunburn back, a V shaped front and its only trimming consists of two stitched bands curved into points front and back that indicate the waistline.

Another lady is wearing one of Molyneux's new country costumes in orange coral tussor and figured crêpe that has delicate flowers outlined in black on its orange coral ground. The slender three-quarter length trousers edged with box plaited flounces are the 1930 version of the 1830 pantalettes. They are attached to a sleeveless blouse of the figured crêpe. The crinoline is replaced by a smart skirt of the orange tussor, with box plaited double flounces mounted on a snug yoke that buttons up the side over the trousers and makes the ensemble conventional enough for morning wear in town, as you can see by the small figure in the background. The short jacket of orange tussor is unlined but trimmed round the edge with a band of the figured crêpe that ties into a bow knot on the right lapel.

The "walking pajamas" sketched elsewhere were worn by one of the smartest girls at Biarritz this season. You know what the underbrush on those Basque hills does to bare legs or stockings. Consequently, lots of girls who are fond of walking have taken to trousers as their regulation daytime attire. These were of plaid woolen striped in sulphur yellow, gray and black, cut on the bias, buttoned like sailor's pants. The sleeveless hand knit jumper was of sulphur yellow, edged with bands of black. Hat and scarf were made of the plaid wool lined with plain yellow. The brim of the hat, which was buttoned on to the crown all round, could be removed, leaving a smart beret.

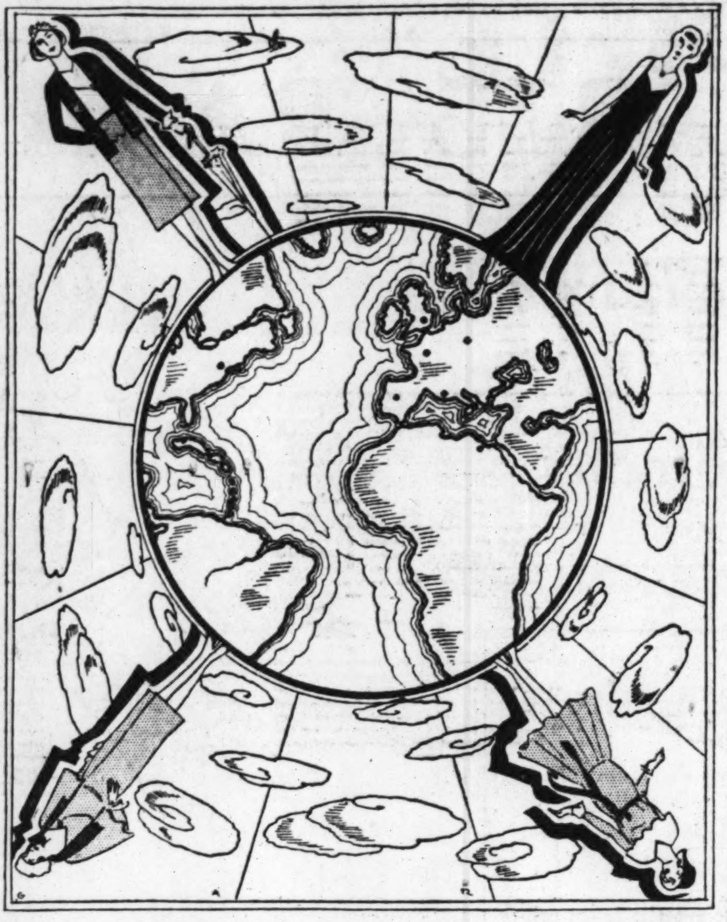
Make-Up Tells Nationality

By Antoinette Donnelly



Though Mademoiselle Likes Her Dash of Color and the English Go Their Pallid Ways, Miss America Wisely Chooses the Natural.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—Clothes, jewels and styles in feminine hairdress may be found much the same from the China seas to this side of the Atlantic. The standardization of feminine accouterment is becoming daily more and more international in character.

For the preservation of national prestige in distinctly feminine matters—what do you think must be relied on? Make-up. So long as women wear make-up they will look the part of their geographical setting. Women may wear the same short skirts or long, the same ear and arm trappings, the same kind of shoes—from Timbuktu to Keokuk—but by their make-up they may achieve that "difference" of nationality that makes life interesting for the world tourist.

"By their make-up you may know them—the French from the English and the English from the American," say Helen Josephy and Mary Margaret McBride, whose recent researches into the "intimate" living, dressing, beautifying, shopping habits of women of France and England are incorporated in one of last year's best sellers, "Paris Is a Woman's Town," and this year's "London Is a Man's Town [But Women Go There]," Coward-McCann, publishers.

Distinguished by Make-Up.

Make-up, which these observant young women have studied carefully from many national angles, is such a matter of national taste and habit, they say, that even if all the women in the world wore the same Chanel model as a uniform, they would still appear as distinctly national in type as when Gretchen wore a velvet bodice and Maria a scarlet bandana for the benefit of the colored plates in our geographies.

"In France, make-up is as theatrical as the Opéra Comique even on the street," the two clever young women observed to me in an informal interview. "At night, at fashionable restaurants or at the theater, it is impossible to tell French stage favorites from their chic women of the world. All classes—if they have any vanity at all—make up in a dashing and quite artificial manner, which is completely foreign to American and English styles in make-up. The French lily is not painted for the sake of imitating nature, but to improve upon it."

This vivid artificial make-up is fully appropriate to its Parisian setting, my informants believe. It is the inevitable result of the gorgeous stagey quality of the Parisian street scene. So much does the background influence them that both English and American women in Paris, if they are at all susceptible to environment, soon begin to add more color and boldness to their own make-up, no matter how conservative they were at home.

Chic French Women.

French make-up is more elaborate and thoroughgoing than in other countries. The chic French woman makes up her nostrils, lobes of her ears, her eyes, as well as her cheeks and mouth. They even make up their toe nails and, of course, their hands, quite generally. Instead of using water, a French woman uses creams and lotions, especially prepared to suit her individual skin. A cream is always used as the basis of her make-up, which gives her skin the look of a smooth lotus or a magnolia petal. She prefers liquid or salve to dry rouge, as a rule. She not only makes up under her eyes, but over them, matching the color of the "dust" used on her eyelids to the color of her eyes. And the lashes are frankly embellished. Nostrils and ear lobes are delicately tinted like a bisque doll's. Her mouth is heavily carmined, with no attempt to look "natural."

The powder used on the neck is of a different tone than that used on the face and is carefully blended to suit the skin. A French woman knows and provides for the discrepancy in difference in skin tone on face and neck.

When the American or English woman imitates the French make-up, even in Paris, it is never so successful in effect as on the French woman. The French woman has a bolder, more theatrical charm and can carry off a vivid make-up which would make an Anglo-Saxon look hard.

That English women use less make-up and more soap and water than women of almost any other nationality is the conclusion of the two conscientious investigators, Misses Josephy and McBride.

London Fogs Are Trying.

Where everything is mysteriously foggy a heavy make-up would not be consistent. This is why French women are the first to tone down their make-up when they go to London. Englishwomen use little cold cream, but plenty of good soap, usually flower scented, and just enough coloring to make them look healthy. The British complexion is naturally good and "holds up" under wind and weather better than the American, who looks pinched and drawn after a day on the moors or in the hunting field unless she is fortified with cream and nourishing lotion.

"On the streets and at parties," warn the co-authors of the highly informative book on what to do and what not to do when you are in London, "the American does well to imitate her English cousins and choose a restrained aristocratic make-up. The pale English make-up is most noticeable to the globe trotter in the evening at grand charity balls when stage and society mingle for some good cause. The stage beauties stand out quite distinctly in contrast to the society beauties because of their make-up. And all look quite different in their Paris models from either French or American women wearing the same clothes."

American women choose the happy medium when left to their own devices. Theirs is neither so bold a make-up as the French nor so pallid and "tea rosey" an effect as the English aristocrats.

"On shipboard, where all nationalities mingle in a kind of Never-Never land [as kind to one type as another] the American usually looks the most genuinely natural and most in harmony with the modern spirit of rational balance," conclude the famous American travel book authors.

Consideration Goes Unrewarded

By Doris Blake

The Girl Who Is Easy on a Fellow's Pocketbook Because of the Kindness of Her Heart Merely Sits at Home for Her Pains, Says Young Correspondent.

WHETHER to kiss or not to kiss for popularity's sake is not the only problem confronting girls, it would seem. One of almost equal concern in the lives of our young women is whether or not to be "exacting" in the matter of entertainment.

Young men complain constantly of the high cost of beau-ing. Some of them conclude after a season of full salary spending that the bachelor life is the best they can hope for. Courting days are "holdup" days for them. There's nothing left for a first furniture installment.

Well, the girls have something to say about that, too. Something, I believe, Patricia, their spokeswoman, has put into words worth a few minutes' serious consideration. So we'll let her have the floor. The "Mere Man" she refers to, as you may readily guess, registered a kick about his inability to save with girls wanting expensive entertainment and being content with nothing but the best.

Girl Answers Critic.

"Dear Miss Blake," she writes. "As 'a Mere Man' advises girls in your article of recent date, perhaps you'll allow a mere girl to advise him. I agree with a good part of his arguments; but his viewpoint is limited, or he is not looking for the traits in girls he thinks he is.

"As he speaks for a large group of boys, so I speak for girls. The boys I know and the kind I like to know are young men such as he describes, boys of moderate means who work hard for their money and often are educating themselves for a profession at night school. Some of them are away from home and appreciate being one of the family group for an evening, just as they also enjoy taking girls out.

"I know some girls expect more from boys like these than can be consistently expected of them, but there are plenty of girls who do not. What a shame those with the same ideas don't gravitate together, somehow! There must be a reason, and it probably is that the boy is looking for the kind of girl who is nice, I grant you, but has that indescribable attraction of knowing about everything in town, seeing all the shows, and of having been everywhere to dance. He likes that knowing air about her, realizing, as he does, that she is also a perfect lady.

"BUT, the girl who has gone everywhere has demanded the best entertainment and has received it. And you couldn't expect to find in her the considerate, unselfish type of the other and entirely different personality. So, it seems to me, man wants to eat his pie and have it, too.

Kindness Misunderstood.

"There are girls who believe in treating a fellow as they would like to be treated if they were in the boy's place, but this is what often happens: One young man had taken a girl out a number of times and the girl as well as the mother felt it only courteous to invite him to tea. He came and had a most pleasant evening. He continued to take the girl out and he was asked to her home in return.

"Then this remark of his came back to the girl. 'O yes,' he said, 'I like Margaret immensely, but I'll have to stop seeing her. Seems like a fellow can't take a girl out without the folks trying to lasso him. They've had me to the house a couple of times.' That girl now is the 'taking' kind.

"Another young woman knew the young man she was going with had a limited amount to spend for entertainment. When he would ask her where she would like to go she would suggest a movie. After the show she would decline his offer of refreshments on the plea that she didn't care to eat late at night. She did it so unobtrusively that instead of appreciating her consideration he thought her rather uninteresting to be satisfied with just that, so he stopped going with her and made any number of sacrifices to go with some other girl whom he really liked much less, but who suggested amusements she desired whether they fitted his purse or not.

"Still a third, just because she was considerate, was thought by the young man to be too interested in him for the safety of his single blessedness. And the girl was just being a good fellow. The consensus of opinion about her is that she will make a wonderful wife for some one, some day, but still the boys take the other kind out. Yet when they want to marry they'll choose her. They have spent all the money they should have been putting aside for marriage on the other girl, yet they expect their fiancée to be thrilled to tears to help them save money from now on.

"They cut down on the entertainment during the engagement. If they exchange presents it will be something they'll need in the home after while. In other words, the considerate girl loses out all around and does not even receive credit for her efforts. Instead, she is misunderstood and taken for a rather spineless creature who is not exacting and is 'just that type, anyway.'

"Women, old and young, are just about what men make them. They'll be what it pays them to be and I mean that in the very nicest conception of the term. We all like companionship; we all crave happiness; deep in our hearts we like to give the other fellow a break. But when that break is considered a leak in an otherwise perfectly good dike and distance is put between man and it at the first sign, any girl is foolish to let a warm heart rule a wise head."

The Movies: Pro and Con

By Gladys Huntington Bevans

OUR local movie house—or motion picture theater—was showing a film I wanted to see. But it looked as though the odds were against me, because as I entered the rather small, crowded lobby my way was actually blocked and I was greeted with, "Please, lady, vuy me a ticket—here's my money." "Please lady take me in with you—here's my money." "O, Missus, won't you take me past the entrance with you?"

The other adults there were being besieged, literally besieged, as I was. Here were all these children, without adults, with the price of admission, clamoring to get in. Children simply are going to see the movies. They are in 999 cases out of 1,000 going to see something they shouldn't. What are we going to do about it?

As parents, alive on this eighth day of June in the year of Our Lord, 1930, who truly care about the welfare of their children, I am sure you will be interested in a letter that came to me in January. The letterhead reads: "The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc.; Will H. Hays, president; Carl E. Milliken, secretary."

As I have not room in today's paper for the whole letter and my reply, I am giving only extracts. It is a well known fact that statements taken out of their setting do not always give a true picture, so I am quoting carefully and fairly from the letter, which is signed by Mr. Milliken, the secretary of the motion picture producers.

Letter from Producers.

"My Dear Mrs. Bevans: We are familiar with the Chicago survey on the subject of children and the movies as referred to in your article of Jan. 12.

"The survey created quite a little editorial comment, as that subject is one of importance because every right thinking person is concerned in all influences that have a bearing on the characters of the children. But there is one newspaper which in discussing the survey brought out a fact that was not referred to in any other discussion. The Des Moines, Ia., Capital said:

"'Most important, however, for those who are asking that films be made better influences for the young, is the low ranking of educational movies. They meet with favor among only 2 per cent of the children. It is plain if these are to be improved by pictures it must be through those classes they like, not by making moral appeals to them through those they find uninteresting.'

"From a different angle the St. Louis Post-Dispatch said: "Active censorship at its best is stupid and often becomes odious. If applied to pictures with the child in mind, it would result in the end of mature and sophisticated films, which older persons are entitled to see if they wish

"'The best restraining influence would be in the home. If parents will find out what kind of picture is showing at the corner playhouse before giving Junior a dime as the price of quiet at home, and will rule accordingly, they will do more than all the censors in the world.'

"This association has given a great deal of consideration to the subject of pictures suitable for the children, and a number of years ago the members of the association contributed parts of films from which were made pictures especially suitable for children, under the direction of an expert familiar with child training."

"These programs of pictures were called 'Saturday morning movies,' and wherever local groups interested in child welfare interested themselves in helping the exhibitor, these pictures were quite successful, but in most cases there was little or no coöperation and the exhibitor had to give up the idea. The children of today want timely topics and generally are interested in the pictures the older people enjoy and do not care to be singled out for special attention.

"CARL E. MILLIKEN, Secretary."

. . . . .

Modern Parent's Answer.

To which I reply:

"My Dear Mr. Milliken: I was much interested in your letter, but have been waiting until I should have time to answer it fully and take up the various points which you made. In this brief reply and in the articles which will follow this week I shall present what I consider the modern parents' answer to your letter.

"I do agree with you that it is up to the parents to find out what is being shown at the movies before allowing their children to go. But the weak point in this argument is that there is such a small percentage of films that children should be allowed to see after the parent has done the careful censoring.

"I must say frankly that I do not think the hands of the motion picture industry are quite clean regarding this matter of the children when one reads that section of the Film Year Book for 1929 called 'Exploitation Manual.'

"There are cited various methods to incite children to attend the movies, few of which seem worthy of indorsement by those who have any regard for the welfare of children.

"To be quite mild about it, one could say that the industry is going out of its way to beguile children into its theaters. A list of devices for this purpose includes free matinées for children, baby contests for the prettiest, chubbiest, best dressed baby; orphans' parties, children's fairs, etc.

Few Movies Win Approbation.

"As I said before, there might be some justification for even such a procedure if the movie house, after it got the child in, gave it anything of proper interest. When out of thirty critiques published in one month by the 'Magazine for Parents' only three met with whole-hearted approbation for children, the industry cannot well justify its position."

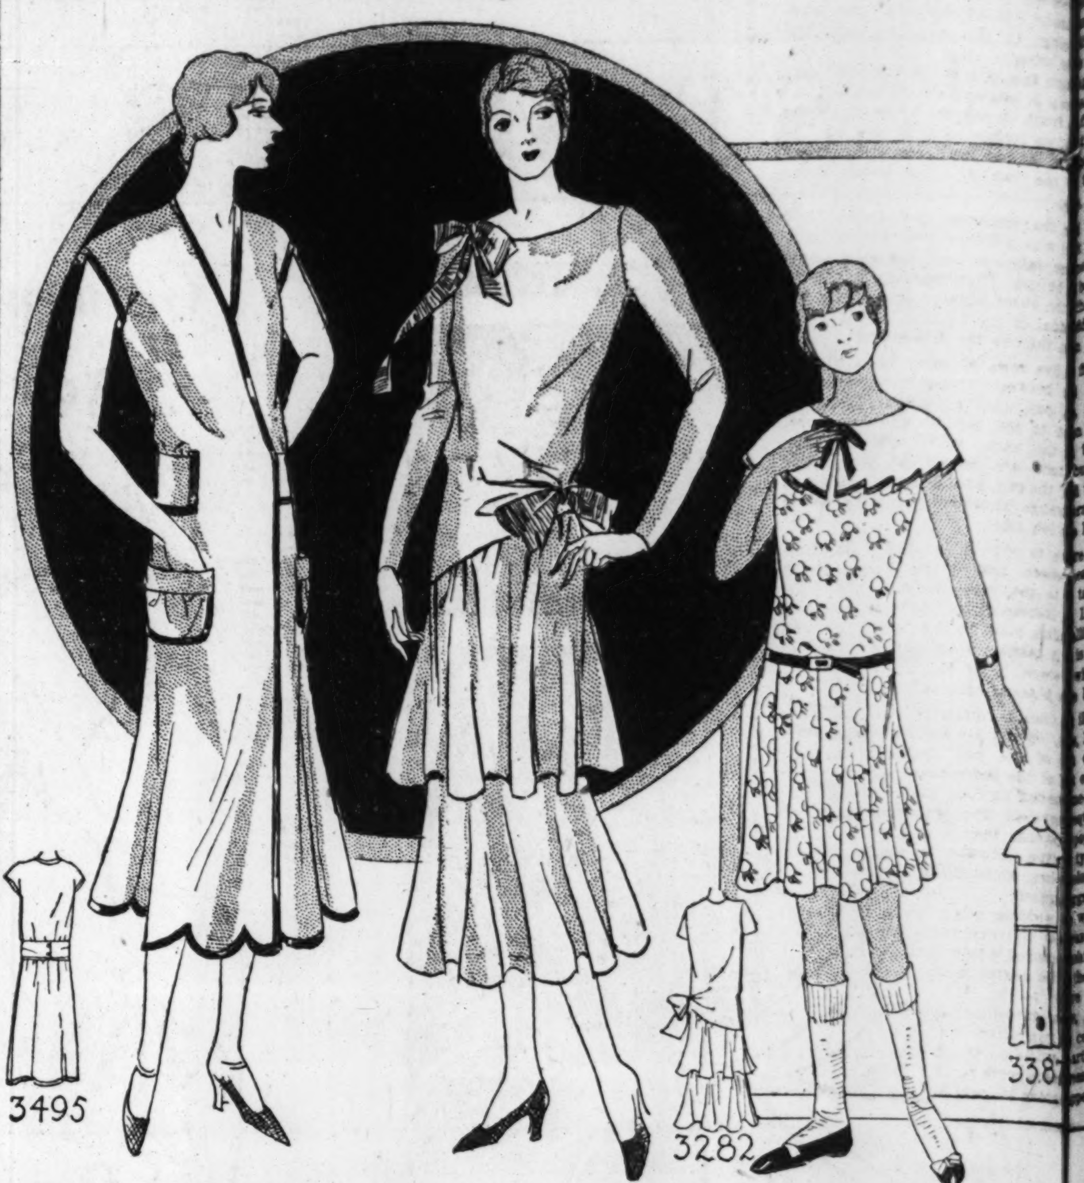
Patterns and How to Use Them

By Clotilde



3495—Woman's or miss' dress. Sizes 16 and 18 years and 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 2⅝ yards of 39 inch material with 11 yards of binding.

3282—A dress for the sub-deb. Sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20 years. Size 16 requires 3⅛ yards of 39 inch material with ¼ yard of 39 inch contrasting.

3387—Girl's dress. Sizes 6, 8, 10, and 14 years. Size 8 requires yards of 39 inch material with ½ y of 27 inch contrasting for the col and ¼ yard of 39 inch contrasting the belt and bow.

Practicality and Charm Combine to Make These Patterns a Delight to the Clever Home Sewer.

THE morning frock made of any one of the charming wash materials has assumed new importance as to line and fabric. The surplice closing of the model made by pattern No. 3495, has a decidedly slenderizing effect that is sure to appeal to every woman It molds its hipline through a wide belt, and this is passed through a bound opening, thus giving a panel effect to the front of the dress. This belt buttons in youthful manner at the center back.

You will do well to shrink your material before cutting. Open it well and lay it in a tub of boiling water. When the water is cool enough to put your hands in, wring the material, and hang it on a line. Iron it smooth while it is still damp.

The drop shoulders form short sleeves, and these, as well as the neck, front of the dress and bottom, are finished with a binding of a contrasting color. The dress can, of course, be straight at the bottom and finished with a three inch hem if you don't care to take the time to finish it with the bound scallops. Two patch pockets add to the jaunty appearance of this dress, as well as being useful.

Printed dimity, linen, linene, shantung, pique, sateen, printed lawn, gongha, cotton broadcloth, and tub silk are appropriate materials.

Pattern No. 3387 is for a dress that may be used for play or "dress up" occasions, depending, of course, on the material chosen.

The cape collar makes sleeves unnecessary and is a detail that will appeal to girls, as it is just what the grownups are wearing. The bodice, in two parts, is easy to cut and fit. The rippling skirt is cut in seven sections, creating a lovely fullness, and will launder well, not stretching in parts as the usual circular skirt is apt to do.

Grosgrain ribbon in a contrasting color makes the attractive narrow belt and bow at the neck. Printed dimity in yellow and white, with the collar of white organdy and the belt and tie of dark brown grosgrain ribbon, will be chic for a play dress, while a nautical blue crêpe de chine, with the collar of white crêpe and the belt and tie of the dress material, will be lovely for a dressier frock.

Pattern No. 3282 makes a stunning frock for the young girl. It follows closely the styles for her grown sisters. There is a long waisted bodice that is caught with plaits at the left hip beneath the bow, making the right side quite deep—thus emphasizing the diagonal line. The gathered tiers of the skirt are decidedly youthful and ripple softly as the wearer moves.

The neckline is round and finished with a narrow bias binding, while the long, close fitting sleeves are untrimmed.

The bodice must be carefully fitted before the seams are stitched. Then the seams should be bound separately and pressed open flat. Dots on the pattern show exactly how and where to lay the plaits at the left side of the bodice; and after all this work is finished turn the bottom edge of the bodice under evenly and baste d if the material doesn't crease clea A picture chart comes with this tern, showing clearly how the di ent parts are put together, and order of their joining.

Rayon printed crêpe in vivid tones with the shoulder and hip bows in the deepest shade of the pr will appeal to any girl, while na blue crêpe de chine with the bows bright red faille silk crêpe is anoth smart suggestion.

A Profitable Dream.

Our best turkey had stolen her nest away, and we looked high and low for her without success.

One night I dreamed that this turkey was dead and that we had buried her in the old abandoned church graveyard, placing great wreaths of young baby turks all over the grave.

Mother said if I walked the two miles over there and found the old hen, I could have half the money we made on her that year.

I found her and her large family of babies, hidden under two gravestones that had fallen against each other, making a natural shelter. E. C.

Warned of Accident.

One afternoon the foreman explained to my partner and me that we were to paint a large sign on a twelve story bank building. The sign was to start at the top and come down to the eighth story.

That same night I dreamed that one of our ropes weakened, and in order to save our lives we climbed in through one of the windows and lowered the stage down just before the rope broke. I awoke much excited. That very day I was to go through that same incident because the things I had dreamed came true and from my dream I knew just what to do and did it. W. E. E.

fruit is more perishable or more ptible to changes in weather than strawberry. Those who know of many things that can happen strawberries from the time they in the blossom until they are d on the table are more or less kful for them. One big rain and w cold days can wipe out a whole After they begin to ripen there thing that can do more damage wet weather. It requires sunshine a bountiful scarlet harvest.

ch hard work is connected with production of berries. I know of more arduous and back breaking one that is often performed by en and children—than the har- ing of a strawberry crop. Picking fruit is even better exercise than e back riding to bring all the little muscles into play. It is a stoop- squatting, reaching exercise.

Problems of Distribution.

aring for the fruit properly until aches the consumer presents many lems to the distributor. The con- er demands sound, fully ripened ies. Markets that are near at hand handle berries that are picked n almost ripe, but the problem es where the market is a distance the point of production. Then ies must be picked before they fully ripe.

e length of time required for sportation should be just right to op the desired color before it hes the consumer. This explains berries grown near home are lly of better flavor and color than e grown in distant states.

Washing would the fruit. This is a good point the consumer to remember. Let washing wait until you are almost ly to serve.

Preparation for Serving.

First, wash thoroughly. Turn the t into a pan of cold water. Handle efully to avoid crushing. With the ds move a portion of the berries tly up and down through the water remove all dirt and grit. Lift into colander to drain. Some cooks put berries into a coarse sieve, letting ter run over them. To my mind this less efficient method for remov- dirt because the lower part of the ry is not so well washed as the er part, and there is no more ger of crushing the berries in a of water than there is in a sieve. lling and cutting bad places out of the berry should always be done after washing. Some prefer to do this before washing but in so doing they lose valuable qualities. Both the flavoring and coloring matter of the strawberry is soluble in water, and when the flesh is exposed as it is in hulling and cutting there is much loss of beauty and food value.

After hulling, berries will keep in good condition for a few hours. However, never let them stand longer than two or three hours. If preparation requires that the fruit be crushed do this a short time before they are used. Even in the refrigerator, crushed berries do not keep many hours in prime condition. Recently I kept some crushed berries over night in an automatic refrigerator. Although they were still sweet the next morning an oxidation had taken place which took the edge off the delicious flavor.

Since wood does not affect the color or flavor of the berry, a wooden potato master is best for crushing. A potato ricer is also excellent because it does the work rapidly. In making fruited ice cream and sherbet, rub the fruit through a coarse strainer. The resulting fine pulp gives a smoother and more uniform texture. Many of us do not like to bite through a hard frozen piece of strawberry when eating an otherwise delicious strawberry ice cream. If the fruit must be sifted, the best way is to mash quickly with a wooden masher and then force rapidly through a sieve. This sifting process should be done rapidly because the action of the metal wire and the air which comes in contact with the berry affects both the flavor and color.

Strawberry Rash.

There are some who cannot eat strawberries without developing an irritating rash. The only remedy for this rash is to omit strawberries from the diet. There is something in the strawberry that is foreign to the blood of the sensitive person and the reaction is that of any other poison.

The delicious flavor and the beautiful red color of strawberries are most appealing to many, however. The nutritive value is also attractive. One and one-third cups of hulled berries supply to our bodies 100 calories, 10 of which are protein, 14 fat, and 76 carbohydrates. This quantity of berries will furnish us with about 1-7 of the daily requirements of lime and iron, and about 1-20 of the phosphorus needed.

Just now strawberries are abundant, fine in quality, and inexpensive. We want to enjoy them while they are here. But wouldn't your own strawberry sun preserves and jam be a treat for your family next winter? If you are living in metropolitan areas, where you are not assured of two or three consecutive days of brilliant sunshine do not attempt the sun preserves. It may seem to be a lot of time to make preserves, but they are worth the effort. The quick strawberry jam, however, is delicious and quickly made.

Sunshine Preserves.

2 quarts strawberries.
3 cups sugar.

Wash, then hull the berries. Leave whole. There should be 7 cups of berries. Add sugar and stir just enough to mix the sugar and berries. Cook in a flat pan over a low flame. Stir occasionally to prevent sticking, being careful not to crush.

When the boiling point is reached remove from the fire. Pour into flat pans or a platter. Cover with panes of window glass and let stand in the sunshine about two days or until the sirup is thick. Seal in sterilized glass jars. Yield: 2 pints

Strawberry Jam.

1 cup sugar.

Select firm berries of good color, wash, then hull. Crush with a wooden potato masher. There should be 2 cups of crushed fruit. Add sugar. Turn into a flat bottomed pan, preferably an aluminum one. Cook slowly for 15 minutes, stirring occasionally with a wooden spoon. Pour into a sterilized jar, and seal tightly. Yield: 1 scant pint.

The Biggest Liar

Who is the biggest liar you have ever known and what was his biggest lie? The Tribune will pay $1 for every whopper published. Write it simply and use only one side of the paper. Mail it to Biggest Liar, Sunday Tribune.

Rather Entertaining.

The biggest liar I ever knew was the smallest woman I ever knew. She came from New York and claimed to be acquainted with and related to many of the most prominent people in the social register. We afterward found she had clerked in a store and was in this way familiar with their names. She was always buying flowers for herself, French perfumes, and lovely trinkets and telling of some admirer who "simply forced them upon her." She told of a man from New York, who had recently been in town, taking a stunning diamond bracelet out of his pocket and insisted upon her having it, and she explained that the only reason she did not accept it was on her husband's account.

If her husband went to New York on a business trip she told that he had gone to Europe and would have taken her except that he was making such a flying trip. Once she went to the hospital for observation and treatment and afterward told that she had had her tonsils, appendix, and "what have you" removed. Afterward it became necessary to have her appendix out, but that didn't bother her one bit. She simply said she must have had two or the second grew in after the first was removed. MRS. J. H.

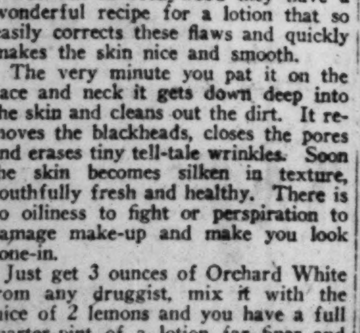
Keeping Up Her Reputation.

As we teachers sat around the dinner table discussing our experiences abroad, one who was gaining quite a reputation among us for her exaggerations spoke up and said, "When I was in England, my friends there asked me if I wouldn't wait and be presented at court." She was surprised when we laughed. A. C. D.



New Way Closes Ugly Pores

—blackheads disappear!

Whenever I see a face that would be beautiful—if it weren't for disgustingly large pores, blackheads and oily skin that spoils make-up—I feel sorry.

For out in Hollywood they have a wonderful recipe for a lotion that so easily corrects these flaws and quickly makes the skin nice and smooth.

The very minute you pat it on the face and neck it gets down deep into the skin and cleans out the dirt. It removes the blackheads, closes the pores and erases tiny tell-tale wrinkles. Soon the skin becomes silken in texture, youthfully fresh and healthy. There is no oiliness to fight or perspiration to damage make-up and make you look done-in.

Just get 3 ounces of Orchard White from any druggist, mix it with the juice of 2 lemons and you have a full quarter-pint of a lotion far finer and more effective than any special soap, cream or liquid you have ever used.

Note: In the summer this Hollywood recipe keeps the skin free of freckles and guards against that leathery look caused by wind and sun.

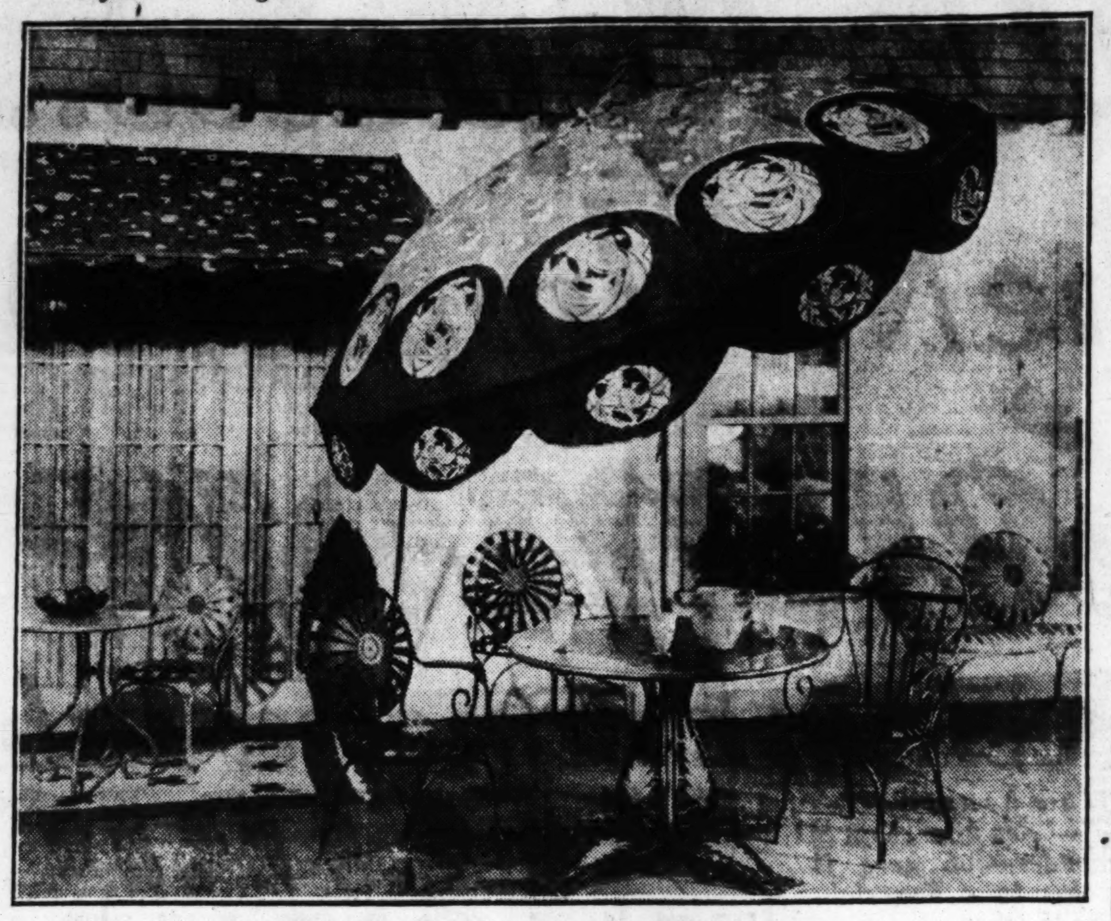
Decorative Furniture for the Garden

By Edith Weigle

This roomy, comfortable chair is of rattan.



Green painted metal furniture is trimmed in orange.

Wrought Iron and Painted Steel for the Lawn, and Wicker and Rattan for the Terrace or Porch Are Among the Favorites This Year.

THE department and furniture stores are fairly blossoming with garden accessories. Artificial grass plots are gay with silver gazing bowls, painted steel chairs and tables under brilliantly striped awnings, stone and cement bird baths, figures for fountains, and squatty tables with colored mosaic tops. And the amusing little German figures we used to see before the war are back again, ready to turn a shady nook in the shrubbery into a Hans Andersen fairy tale. You remember them—funny dwarfs with bright red tassel caps and jackets and long white beards, and phlegmatic bunnies, and toad stools to roof them over. They're only about 18 inches high.

Even prosaic faucets are becoming artistic with brass swans, squirrels and chanticleers serving as decorative handles. And weather vanes are nothing if not perches for metal birds of every variety, size and color. It's a grand and glorious day for the owner of a bit of country garden.

Some of the prettiest and most practical outdoor furniture I have seen is the springy steel variety illustrated in the largest picture. The seats of the chairs and settees are so constructed that you fairly bounce when you sit on them, they are so flexible. This furniture is extremely reasonably priced and comes in green, black, orange and in combinations of two colors to carry out your individual color scheme. Of course it can be left out in sunshine and shower.

You may remove the huge parasol from the table, if you want to, but it lends such a festive air to lawn or garden that it seems a shame to do so.

Small, glass topped iron tables with receptacles for plants underneath make delightful additions to the summer porch or terrace things. They may be had in a Florentine finish of red or green and stand 22 inches high. Wrought iron pie crust coffee tables 27 inches long and 16 inches high come in green, yellow or red.

Natural color rattan with touches of black and brown is used in the large, comfortable porch chair pictured. Made by hand and having two luxurious cushions for seat and back, it is as good looking as it is easy to sit in. The accompanying table and lamp are also of rattan.

The third picture shows a sea-going set of wicker furniture designed for the deck of a yacht and therefore rather small in scale and ever so smart in line and color. It would be quite the thing for a pent house terrace or gardenette, too. The natural tan of the wicker is trimmed in apple green, for the settee, and in orange for one of the chairs, which avoids any monotony and results in a nice contrast. Cushions are brilliant cobalt blue and are both sun and rain resisting. Donald Deskey is the designer.

Shades Create Atmosphere

Interesting Suggestions for Appropriate Lamp Shades.

SEEING a room in which the electric lights and lamps are bared brings a realization of the important part which lamp shades play in creating an atmosphere of distinctive charm. Good lighting does not necessarily connote an unmerciful glare. Light should be controlled so that, without detracting from the ensemble, it may be sufficiently strong for all reasonable purposes where needed, or so that it may be focused upon those articles or places which require accentuation. Appropriate lamp shades soften and tone down light to blend with the decorations and color schemes.

Even an amateur, by exercising a certain amount of patience, care and concentration, can make attractive shades at home—shades which will have a satisfactorily decorative and well finished appearance. Parchment or parchmentized paper shades are the easiest type to make. Undecorated parchment shades, already mounted on wire frames, may be bought in any number of shapes and sizes. However, it is not difficult to make the whole shade at home. Parchment or parchmentized paper may be bought in any quantity and can easily be mounted on wire frames. It is advisable to cut a pattern out of wrapping paper or newspaper, to make sure that it will fit the frame. This preliminary pattern then should be laid on the parchment, a line drawn around it, and the parchment then may be cut to the same size. Short lengths of thread should be run through the parchment in several places at the top and bottom edges to hold it in place on the frame until a binding has been applied to both edges. After the edges have been bound these short threads may be clipped off so that they will not show. There are many different types of bindings which may be used to finish shades of this kind. Passe-partout is one of the most effective and least expensive.

In order to tone down the shade, it may be tinted either inside and outside, or on one side only. A good neutral tone may be effected by means of a solution of burnt sienna, a little turpentine and a touch of Japan dryer, rubbed on all over with a piece of cheesecloth. This tinting may be deepened to the desired tone. Any other color, of course, may be used in place of the burnt sienna. When the shade has dried, a coat of shellac should be applied to the outside to give a nice finish.

Printed papers with tiny all-over figures, batiked papers, marbleized papers, and certain types of wall paper may be mounted on frames in the same manner in which parchment is mounted. These materials make exceptionally attractive shades and require little or no decoration when finished with a coat of shellac.

When plain parchment shades are to be decorated it is easiest and best to apply the decoration before the shade is mounted on the frame. Lines should be lightly drawn with a pencil before the color is applied. After the painted decoration is dry, the finishing coat of shellac should be put on.

Painted designs are somewhat difficult to do, except for those who have a special talent in that line. However, there are many other easier methods which may be used with equal effectiveness. Stencils offer many possibilities. Interesting patterns may be bought cut out and ready to use.

Delightful prints in floral, scenic, or fashion plate style may be used to good advantage. These should be put on with any good glue, not paste. When outlined or framed with one or two lines of India ink, drawn on with a pen and ruler, they are sure to give a neat and well finished appearance to the shade which they decorate. Shellac should not be applied until the glue has had time to dry thoroughly.

Another medium which unfolds unlimited possibilities is that of cut-outs. Many of the most attractive shades offered in the shops today are decorated in this manner. Wall paper motifs may be cut out, glued on and shellacked with excellent results. Fascinating effects may be achieved too by means of plain papers cut out in modern, geometric or conventionalized forms. These may be done in any color and may be glued on in group forms or as borders.

The first shade shown in today's illustration is pleasingly decorated in this manner. It has been tinted with Italian pink so that it gives a soft glow when lighted. The border is made of leaves, cut out of gold and black paper, effectively alternated. Several other conventionalized designs which would make good cutouts are suggested in figure 2. These, of course, may be executed in any desired size. In order to make the motifs of uniform size, it is best to cut out a pattern of heavy paper or cardboard. Then by drawing pencil lines around the pattern on the colored paper any desired number of motifs may be made and cut out.

Figures 3 and 4 show two shades which have been successfully decorated by means of straight lines. The lines were drawn on with a ruler and pencil and colors were filled in before the shade was mounted. In one the background is lemon yellow. Lines in jade green, black, and vermilion have been drawn on the shade diagonally, crossing each other to form a plaid design. In the other the background is mauve and the lines, in perpendicular groups, are in dark blue, gold and brown.

A rectangular shade, figure 5, has been decorated in an intriguing manner. Colorful little prints have been glued on to the center of each panel. The surrounding background has been lacquered black, so that the light when turned on shines only through the colorful prints. Top and bottom and seams of the shade are bound with gold paper and narrow strips of gold paper frame the prints.

Two interesting shields are shown in figures 6 and 7. The oval one is of white parchment paper, decorated with fine lines of red and blue and bound with blue braid. It is to be used in a directoire room. The other shield is made of wall paper, with white polka dots on a light green ground. Batiked paper in purple tones bound with jade green makes the side light shade, figure 8. The other little side light shade is made in three tiers, each one in a slightly deeper tone of rose color. The edges of each tier are button hole stitched with leaf green worsted.

A FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friends in need and the friends in deed may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

THE warm weather is a particularly trying time for the shut-in, the bedridden, and for those who are not blessed with vigorous bodies and good health in general. To be confined day after day within the stifling atmosphere of four drab walls, perhaps in a smoky, congested district and far from the cooling lake breezes, is an existence not to be wished for. To the patient suffering under such conditions and without the ordinary sickroom comforts the velvety green grass of the parks and the cool of shade trees take on an added splendor which grows by contrast in the imagination.

Surely there must be some compensation for this, some way to make suffering a trifle more endurable. If you are in even moderate circumstances you see that the sickroom in your home, if there be one, is equipped with every known accessory and comfort to make the patient as happy and contented as possible. But in the home of the poor, where sickrooms occur in perhaps even greater frequency, funds or lack of them do not permit expenditures for these articles, and the patient, I suppose, has to be satisfied with the barest necessities.

If you've had illness in your home at one time or another and that day is now happily in the past, it is quite likely that some of the articles which proved to be such a blessing at the time are still about in storerooms and closets. Think what their possession would mean to these unfortunate people! A wheel chair is just another way of saying fresh air, glorious sunshine, and new surroundings for the shut-in; the books and magazines you've read and do not care to keep will offer some diversion to the bedridden, and your old radio or phonograph would be a great source of pleasure for one of them.

The soothing breezes of an electric fan and the healing qualities of an ice bag or hot water bag offer relief from suffering. Lightweight pajamas, nightgowns, and fresh bed linens are aids to comfort which cannot be overestimated, and negligees and dressing gowns for those who are able to sit up are always welcome gifts.

There is a woman in one of the institutions who needs a rubber stocking and a man convalescing from a recent accident who could make use of the crutches you have discarded. Another woman, suffering with an invidious disease, would like to have the white cloths and pieces of linen which every housewife has to dispose of, and another invalid asks for donations of cotton and gauze.

With little effort on your part you can lessen the intensity of suffering in one of these cases. Which of them will you help?

Aid for Widow and Sons.

"I am afflicted with fallen arches and since I have to spend so much time on my feet it is extremely hard and uncomfortable for me. I am a widow with two boys to support and cannot buy the things we need, so I am asking you to try to get me a pair of arch supports or arch support shoes, size 7½. My eldest boy will be graduating from school next month and he will need a new suit, too. He is quite large and wears about an 18 or 38. MRS. L. D."

Despite her ill health, this most deserving woman struggles incessantly and under the most trying circumstances to rear and educate her sons and provide a home for them. I hope we can secure the arch support shoes she needs so badly and a suit for the boy who is soon to graduate. She deserves any assistance you may be able to give her.

Offers Gregg Shorthand Books.

"I have some Gregg shorthand books which I shall be glad to give to any one who can make use of them. I suppose you will be able to find some one desiring them through your column. H. A."

The student planning to enter business college will welcome this saving of expense, I am sure, or the books could be used in home study. Write me, if you can make use of them; please do not telephone.

Coincidences

Coincidences in geography, time, and persons are ever fruitful of stories and recollections. Whom from the home town did you meet in a far corner of the earth? Who of the same name looks just like you? Who called you up just as you were about to make the call? The Tribune wants to hear of these experiences, at $1 per. Address Coincidences, Sunday Tribune.

Saved from the Tornado.

Some years ago my mother planned to spend a week-end out of town. Ordinarily, I would have been left at home with an elderly great-aunt who made her home with us. But that week-end she had been invited to stay with another elderly woman whose family were to be away. The time consumed in getting my great-aunt over to her visiting place and taking me to a cousin's across town caused mother to miss her train, so she came back and stayed with me at our cousin's.

That night a terrific tornado swept the city, causing great damage, especially in the vicinity of our home. When we finally reached home, having to walk the entire distance across town, we found our home nearly wrecked, the front half of the house lying in the street, furniture scattered everywhere. What remained of the house looked like an enlarged edition of a little girl's doll house with my bed balancing precariously over on edge. My mother has never ceased to be thankful that circumstances caused us to be away that night. J. H. C.

Thirty Years' Duration.

About two months after our marriage I saw some nice looking strawberries, and as we had had none that esason, I bought a box for a surprise dessert. That was early in the afternoon. My husband came in from the office carrying strawberries. He had had the same idea I had.

About the same time I noticed he needed a new tie. I decided to buy one as a surprise, if there was any house money left on Saturday night. I bought the tie and he came in at 6 with one, also. We compared buying time, and found we had been only a few minutes apart in our purchases.

At Christmas time, I warned him to buy nothing for himself until he found out what I was giving him. Christmas morning he looked at his smoking jacket, and confessed that but for my warning, he would have purchased one for himself just a day or two before Christmas.

And we've kept right on doing things like that for nearly thirty years. W. B.

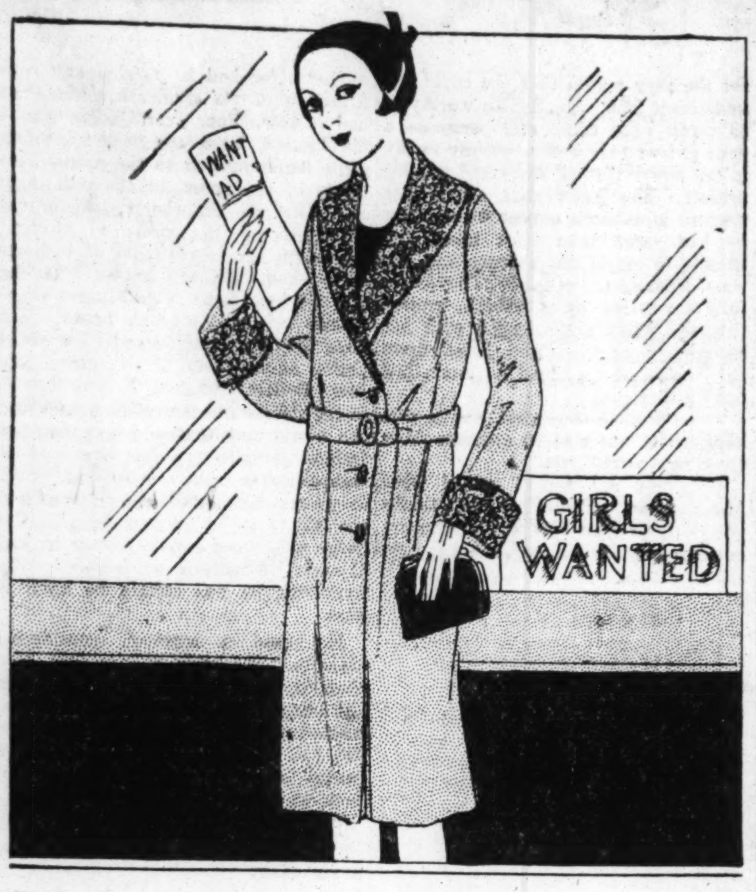
Applying for a Position

By Helen Bartlett

These Pointers Are Designed to Help the Girl Who Has Left School Behind and Is Faring Forth to Find Her First Job.



It is the aim of this department to serve as a practical guide in problems of everyday etiquette. Self-addressed, stamped envelope must accompany each request for information. Send your letters to Miss Helen Bartlett, Sunday Department, CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

It won't be long now until the fledglings from high schools and universities make their initial swoop down on big business. Reading and writing and 'rithmetic, to say nothing of the special requirements for their chosen work, are presumed to have been thoroughly assimilated and all that remains is the vantage point whereby they might grip the world by the horns. The vantage point is the job, of course.

We have a theory, which has been backed up on occasion by executives we have interviewed or who have voluntarily written to us, that good manners and a knowledge of the amenities of office life play an important part in obtaining and holding a job—and that, brethren, is our text for the day.

The girl who goes looking for a job should leave her earrings, her chiffon frocks, and her horsehair hats at home. Above all, however, she should drop cock-sureness and affectation and should be prepared to have an impersonal, businesslike discussion with her prospective employer regarding the job she seeks and her qualifications for it. Her demeanor when she applies for a job should be natural, earnest, and always, always, impersonal, particularly when she is interviewed by a man. Lots of men will presume on flippancy and obviously marketed sex-appeal, but precious few of them are so dumb as not to recognize the method when they see it, and to know that it's extremely poor secretary material.

First Five Minutes Counts.

A woman editor, who, in the course of her career on a large newspaper, had to interview thousands of young job seekers once said that nothing killed a girl's chances with her like the young thing's breezy efforts to put her at ease in her own office. She said that almost invariably the youngster looking for a job would start out by saying: "My, but yours must be interesting work," and try at once to get the conversation on a personal basis.

Nine times out of ten the fate of a job seeker is determined by the first five minutes of the interview. Appearance and manner, therefore, are of paramount importance. The golden rule should be "In business BE businesslike."

Letter of Application.

This golden rule can apply to application by letter as well as in person. In 1926 there appeared in Liberty magazine an article entitled "The Right Way to Apply for a Job," in which was reprinted one editor's impression of the perfect letter of application. The letter was typewritten on plain white paper, a model of neatness, but — most important—it contained every pertinent fact in the most condensed and orderly fashion.

In the first paragraph the young woman who wrote it stated she was looking for a new position because the firm by which she had been employed had transferred its offices to a distant city. This paragraph was exactly three lines long—the last line being the terse but polite phrase, "Kindly consider my application."

On the next line was "Name—Miss. On the next, her address and telephone number.

Then, after the word "education" she gave the degree she held from a certain university and stated that she was at present taking post-graduate work in a certain subject. This took three lines.

Next, after "business experience," she gave the length of time in which she had worked in one organization, the address of the organization and the name of her employer there, giving it for reference. Concerning her second position [the one she had just relinquished] she gave the same facts, but was specific about the salary she received and the work she did. Here she gave two persons as references.

In the final paragraph, three lines long, she said: "This may be irrelevant, but I have had fourteen months of travel in Europe."

Clipped to the letter was a small slip of paper saying: "I would be happy to have you give me an interview." Beneath it was her name and telephone number.

We quote from the article in Liberty: "In the first place, it is brief and directly to the point. Obviously the girl who wrote that letter is businesslike and practical. The facts are set forth in logical order—therefore the girl is a clear, straight forward thinker. Although she is applying for a job as a writer, she does not attempt to prove her ability by tricks of phrase or 'fine writing.' Hence, she realizes that brevity and simplicity are the surest marks of the literary craftsman.

"She does not set down a single word of self-praise, indicating that she will not prove to be conceited, temperamental or difficult to manage. The last sentence shows she has good judgment of relative values.

The final touch was the slip of paper clipped to the letter with her name and phone number. She knew that the letter might be filed in a routine way. If she included a ready made note or reminder that could easily be detached, it would increase the chances of getting further attention."

Honesty Is Vital.

Another point we think might wisely be brought to the prospective job seeker is this: Don't bluff. In the first place it shows poor sense; in the second it is an insult to the intelligence of the man you interview. If you apply for a position for which you need specific qualifications—have the qualifications, or bend your efforts in another direction. Don't take up the employer's time by trying to sell him something he doesn't want.

Once a position is obtained here are some do's and dont's that will make the path in business a smooth one: Consideration, that good old foundation of everything we term etiquette and convention and good manners, is absolutely necessary in those casual and business contacts that fill a working day. Don't scream into the telephone; don't slam doors; don't push ahead in and out of doors; don't gossip about the boss or your co-workers; don't be rude to any one in any way.

Condescension Unwarranted.

Treat the office boy with as much sensible politeness as you would the president of the firm. Only the ignorant express a feeling of superiority by arrogance to those in less exalted positions. When you can, help a fellow worker who is temporarily in a tangle, stay overtime ungrudgingly if there is a necessity for it. All business associates, bosses and others, should be treated with sensible deference. Fawning, of course, is silly and stupid and soon seen through, but the position of an employer demands courtesy and willingness at all times in the office.

Girls, in particular, should meet their male employers and co-workers with pleasant formality, even though there is little difference in their ages. Coquettishness in an office is simply despicable.

In short, behave politely, dress demurely, do your work and you'll be the perfect office worker. You'll be indispensable and appreciated

Mary Jane and I like school,
But it's heavenly to know
That tomorrow's all our own;
Not a place we have to go—

Not a thing we have to do.
We can play house all day long;
We can be late if we like;
Nobody will say it's wrong.

School is very well, of course,
But Mary Jane and I agree
That holidays are much the best
For little girls like her and me!

My 8 year old nephew, like all boys his age, is extremely fond of wild and woolly movies, so when he came in the other day with a poster showing a passionate love scene in a coming attraction and said "Mother, I've got to see this picture," my sister said, "But, Richard, I thought you didn't like kissing pictures."

"O," he said, with infinite disgust, "is he kissing her? I thought he was choking her." M. R.

It was Tommy's first party. As soon as he had arrived he rid his mind of the burden it was carrying. As his hostess greeted him at the door, Tommy timidly shook hands and murmured, "I've had a good time." A. B. P.

Mercolized Wax Keeps Skin Young

Do you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or aged complexion is one fair to look upon? Nature causes the normal skin to peel off in tiny, unseen, flour-like particles, a little each day, renewing the complexion of youth naturally, but there comes a time when this skin shedding slows up. Worry, overwork, sickness, inactivity are reasons that cause the face to be blotchy, discolored, pimply and old looking. The thing to do, if you wish to look your prettiest at all times, is to assist nature in the process of absorption by using pure Mercolized Wax. Get an ounce at any drug store or beauty counter and use as directed. It gently but surely peels away the outer scarf skin, removing freckles, pimples, blackheads or a muddy complexion. The underneath skin, now in evidence, is clear, pink, fresh and velvety, and the entire face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty.

To quickly remove wrinkles and other age lines we recommend a face lotion of unusual merit. • One ounce powdered saxolite and one-half pint witch hazel.

The Irish Beauties

By E. BARRINGTON

The Story in Resume

IN the streets of Dublin, in 1750, Mrs. Gunning and her two young daughters, Maria and Elizabeth, are accosted by Mother Corrigan, who tells their fortunes. The old hag predicts that the girls will inflame the world with their beauty; that Elizabeth will marry one of the first men in England and later the highest man in Scotland and will be addressed as a duchess, and that Maria will marry well, but not in as high a rank as that of her sister. The two girls are saved from the attentions of a bully by a young gentleman who introduces himself to them as Harry Lepel. He asks Elizabeth to marry him and she consents. His regiment is recalled to London. George Anne Bellamy, an actress, upon learning of their poverty, offers the girls jobs in the cast of the "Golden Vanity." The Gunnings become the toast of Dublin. Embarrassed by the gossip caused by Mrs. Gunning and Maria, Elizabeth induces her mother to move to London. In the big city the girls are invited to the house of Lady Caroline Petersham. Horace Walpole calls on them, and the duke of Hamilton is thrilled by their beauty. Elizabeth resents the manner of the duke's attentions. She attends a party at Walpole's home where she again meets the duke.

INSTALLMENT X.

The Duke Again.

IT is impossible to hope for belief in relating the madness which possessed the town for the Gunnings. Had nature produced only two lovely young women and broken the mold on finishing her task, there could never have been a wilder rage to see them. The fortune was made of any assembly where they appeared. Where they did not no stars of fashion cared to twinkle. And what is no less true, absurd as it may seem, the distraction spread to the lower orders. The nearest shoemaker—whom Elizabeth had chosen to make her shoes and Maria's for reasons anything but romantic, made six guineas in two days by showing them at the price of a penny a person to the crowd who came surging in to see them when he put it about that he was shoemaker to the famous Misses Gunning.

Their doorstep was never without a shabby little crowd about it waiting to see beauty and brilliance as distant from their own dull poverty as the stars from earth, and the steps being wet one day with a sudden shower as they tripped down to enter my Lord Coventry's coach for a visit to Hampton Court, a young carpenter became a second Sir Walter Raleigh by snatching off his poor coat and laying it on the steps that the lovely feet should go unhurt. Maria passed on in all the pride of beauty; Elizabeth, delaying a second, gave him the rose from her bosom and a smile he could not forget while he lived, for reasons which will presently appear. The mob, as their betters call them, are perhaps quicker to distinguish merit than those betters. Among the "mob" which lived in their neighborhood and saw them pass daily, Elizabeth gained the reputation of the princess of a fairy tale, sweet and lovely and true, Maria that of the haughty elder sister, vain of her beauty, who oppresses the younger and would push her in the shade if possible. The latter might be partly true, but not the former. Elizabeth was not oppressed. She spoke her mind with perfect freedom to Miss Maria, and though she got more than once a smart slap on her cheek for her pains, she persisted and had a part of her way if not all. The beauty might be a milkmaid but no milksop!

"I Blush for You"

Nothing could be more necessary. Their doings were watched, their sayings were often invented for them but were sometimes true—and Elizabeth knew well that Maria's good sense did not shine like those heavenly stars of blue—her eyes. Could she ever forget that very day when they went to see the sights at Hampton Court with the usual crowd following them, which Maria had considered as much a part of herself as the peacock its train. The housekeeper who showed them the spacious galleries and rooms at one point dropped an obsequious curtsey and said to Mrs. Gunning:

"And now, madam, 'tis time to see the beauties," alluding to the gallery where were displayed the collection of portraits of the fair and frail ladies who graced the court of that father of his people, King Charles I. Elizabeth moved forward, Maria unfurled her fan.

"We did not come here to be seen but to see!" she cried with a haughty little smile, and so put the fan between her face and the gazers.

"Idiot!" hissed Elizabeth when she got her at home. "To make yourself a show like that, as if you were the only well looking girl that ever was or will be. Why make yourself a greater fool than God made you? I declare I blush for you! 'Tis King Charles' beauties we were to see."

She not only blushed for her but stamped also and violently. For two pins she could have returned Maria's compliment of a slap. But there she controlled herself. Out of the miserable straits and shifts of their life a character not to be despised was forming in Elizabeth unknown to herself except by a desire to hold her mamma and Maria to some sort of dignity and wisdom. In Britain street such daring would have been impossible to her, even if she had been competent to do otherwise than drift with the current as she did. Now she was become a swimmer, aiming to reach a difficult haven—the gain of a little respect for herself and Maria from the people who made pretty toys of them and laughed behind their backs at every slip made by the adventuresses. Her mamma was hopeless. She went her indolent Irish easy way and was alternately too familiar and repelling, but Elizabeth did not wholly despair of Maria if she could enlist her self-interest on the side of decency.

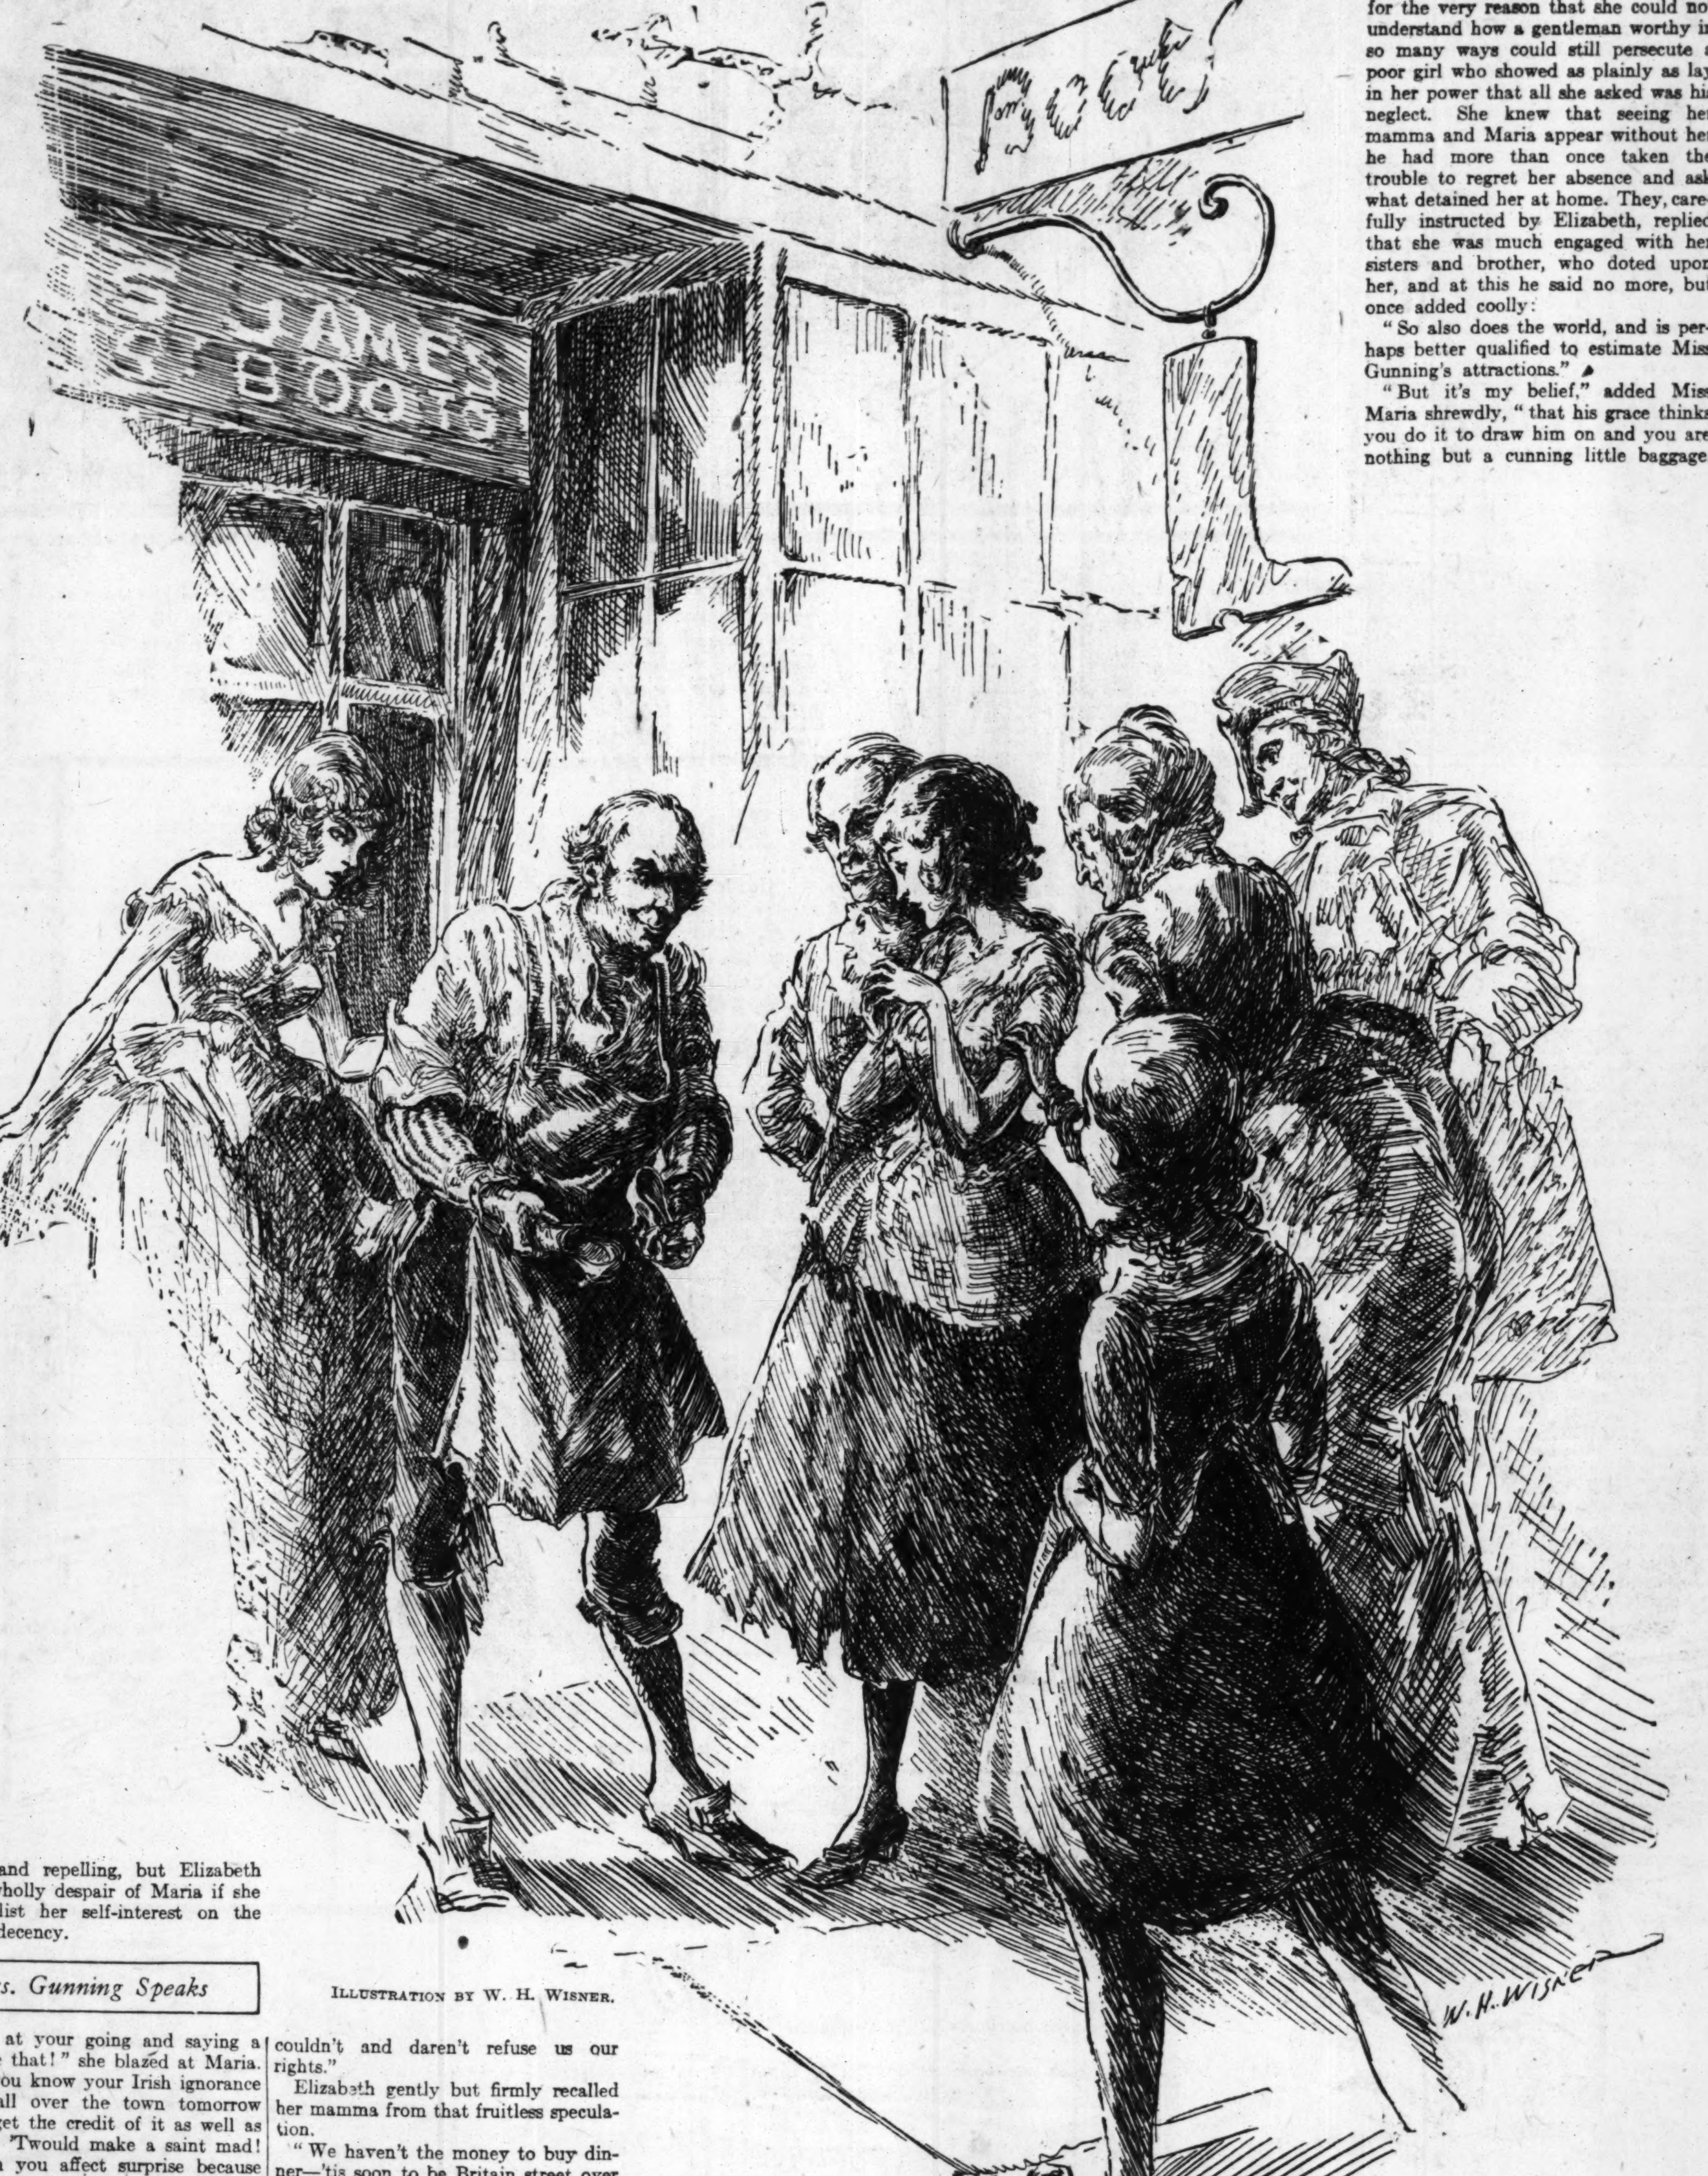

ILLUSTRATION BY W. H. WISNER.

—by showing them at the price of a penny a person to the crowd.

Mrs. Gunning Speaks

"Look at your going and saying a thing like that!" she blazed at Maria. "Don't you know your Irish ignorance will be all over the town tomorrow and I'll get the credit of it as well as yourself! 'Twould make a saint mad! And then you affect surprise because my Lord Coventry comes and gazes and languishes and never gets a step further. Why should he, I ask of you? Is he likely to think a vain, pert, ignorant girl fit to hold up his family's pride and wealth and——"

"When men fall in love," interrupted Maria, but Elizabeth flamed on:

"Very well indeed, madam! But I believe it's known they can fall out of it as quick, and my Lord Coventry is no fool. He uses his eyes and ears if he doesn't use his tongue very greatly, and if you could stop that never ceasing little clapper in yourself you might have more chance of him. You don't know——"

"And may I ask what you, ma'am, know about the duke of Hamilton!" shrieks Miss Maria. "I thought and mamma thought, you threw a mesh about him at first but though he dangles after you, what comes of it? Perhaps you offend him talking too little as I by talking too much!"

"The duke has not or never had a notion of me nor I of him!" says Elizabeth suddenly quieted. "I would not waste time prattling like this, Maria, when we have serious things to think of. What are dukes and lords to people who if they can pay for their dinner this week don't know they can next. And that's what I want to speak of!"

Mrs. Gunning seconded her with a querulous cry:

Elizabeth Makes an Offer

"Indeed and that's the truth. Girls, 'tis time I spoke plain. The pension's not due for a month and in the world I have at this moment two guineas and our own six mouths to feed and the rooms to pay for. This three months in town have reduced my purse till I am frightened to look in it, and what have we to show? Debts on the one hand and nothing on the other. Young women with not half your looks are married and settled since we came hither. Look at Miss Walpole that wasn't even born on the right side of the blanket, carrying off the great prize, my Lord Waldegrave. She that couldn't ever be presented at court, whereas if we had the money to go the king couldn't and daren't refuse us our rights."

Elizabeth gently but firmly recalled her mamma from that fruitless speculation.

"We haven't the money to buy dinner—'tis soon to be Britain street over again and——"

"Isn't that what I'm saying?" retorted Mrs. Gunning angrily, all her fine phrases laid by. "And what comes of what I've spent? We have a vast deal of froth and flutter but nothing solid. Were it possible to live on sweetmeats and dress in posies we have a noble prospect, but not else. I see naught before us but Britain street or worse."

Maria shrugged her white shoulders:

"What more can we do, mamma? Sir James Ramsden has offered marriage to me and Capt. Golightly, the gambler, and all without the means to give me so much as a coach. And as for Elizabeth, Mr. Lepel——"

"What signifies all that," cries Mrs. Gunning. "I say this—don't let them slip, but look higher. They'll serve for the future, perhaps, if all fails. Elizabeth, I command you on your duty that you please Mr. Lepel, though not more than sufficient to content him. I see him at the best houses. If we can't better him——"

"We at least cannot eat him, and that's more to be thought of at the moment!" said Elizabeth. "Mamma, let us talk sense. I have an offer to make and 'twill save you trouble and give you and Maria more time to amuse yourselves. If you permit I'll take over the management of the money and the children. Indeed the poor things are too much left with Mrs. Skinner. Kitty is picking up her pert Cockney style and I don't like it. And I'm a good housewife where money comes in. Listen to this now! I have a few guineas laid by and if you'll give me the pension money when it comes in I'll engage to make it go twice as far. Come now; there's an offer!"

She looked up with bright appealing eyes. The poor thing!—what could she do but deceive, knowing what the pair of them were—as heedless as the cuckoo that lays her egg and forgets it. Mrs. Gunning almost screamed out:

"What! and shut yourself up and lose all your chances, and half the talk is how the one of you sets off the other. Never in this world!"

Maria shook her head wisely.

"She needs not to shut herself up for good, so far as the children go. And they do want an eye over them. And Elizabeth was always prudent with money. She had her money box half full when I hadn't a half-penny to bless myself with."

Would Avoid Duke

It might be that she saw a little more liberty for herself in public if Elizabeth were attending the children in private, but at all events a talk ensued which gave Elizabeth the pursestrings and thus enabled her to make use of her hoard unknown to her mamma or Maria. Careless as a breeze they would never inquire why and how the money lasted so long as it did. That was all they troubled their heads about, and Elizabeth, calculating every penny knew they were safe for a year or more, if Maria would only make decent instead of indecent use of her opportunities, for indecent Elizabeth felt it to be to hunt men down with baits so open that they ran the faster to escape the lovely danger. Miss Walpole and she had taken a liking to one another and Mr. Walpole encouraged their meetings for it was certain he had taken a strong liking himself for Elizabeth, and from Miss Walpole's cool dignity which had no touch of arrogance Elizabeth learned how to carry herself with quiet reserve and avoid any appearance of thrusting herself forward. She often, when receiving marks of Mr. Walpole's favor, wondered very seriously whether he could be the destined elderly gentleman whose cool affection would provide generously for her family and secure peace of mind for herself. She asked no more—a humble hope for so surprising a beauty.

She had another reason for desiring to appear less in public, and that was the steady persevering attack of the duke of Hamilton. The town adorned the romance with its comments as it commented on all else, and licked its lips and swore and wagered that his grace's intentions were strictly dishonorable and Miss Elizabeth would never net that wary bird.

That was her own opinion also of his aim and she avoided, evaded, and slipped out of his company by every means in her power. She trembled with anger at his calm irresistible approach, with his air of taking possession and warning others off his ground. Elizabeth loathed his company and yet with melancholy, for when she had the chance to hear him talk with either men or women whom he respected, he was not only a very great gentleman as she had once described him, but a man full of good sense and spirit and a wistfulness now and again as something touched him. Some talk of honor or valor or the wild spaces of moor and mountains of the land he loved that drew her to consider with wonder how different a man can be from his true self when engaged on a base pursuit.

Occupies Her Thoughts

"If he would let me alone and I might sit and look and listen, I could like the duke of Hamilton very well," she thought wistfully as she sat watching the children at their play. "I could even esteem him. I could learn from him things I would very gladly learn, for he is like a king in his own country and that is a land I would gladly see. But with these is a look in his eyes, a murderous flattery in all he says and does that is like the stealing of a cat on its prey. He holds my eyes in spite of me, and if I did not know 'twas impossible, I could swear he had some inkling where the locket came from and would use it one way or another. Well, he sees little of me now, and so best."

Yet he occupied her thoughts much for the very reason that she could not understand how a gentleman worthy in so many ways could still persecute a poor girl who showed as plainly as lay in her power that all she asked was his neglect. She knew that seeing her mamma and Maria appear without her he had more than once taken the trouble to regret her absence and ask what detained her at home. They, carefully instructed by Elizabeth, replied that she was much engaged with her sisters and brother, who doted upon her, and at this he said no more, but once added coolly:

"So also does the world, and is perhaps better qualified to estimate Miss Gunning's attractions."

"But it's my belief," added Miss Maria shrewdly, "that his grace thinks you do it to draw him on and you are nothing but a cunning little baggage. So you take as little by your reserve as I by my laughter."

"He knows me very little if he believes that!" was all Elizabeth vouchsafed, and so went about her business, stung and wounded to the very core. Let him think what he would if he had such cruelty in him. And still she must partly excuse him, for the more their fashion grew the less respect attended her mamma and Maria, and if there was a mistake to be made they made it and her own reputation could only live or die with theirs.

They were not so pressed with money difficulties now that she managed their little means and that was much. But not enough if the duke should guess her part in the locket. Often she sounded George Anne on that subject, and always her friend replied:

"Gemini! If he doesn't guess it was me, child, how can he guess you, believe me. And if he did, what harm?"

Which was reassuring, though George Anne, not moving amongst the high-stepping crowd of fashion, could scarcely be a judge of the duke's intentions. It must be owned, however, that she was a great support to Elizabeth at this period. Mrs. Gunning and Maria had openly insulted her as very far beneath their notice, and it is unknown what trouble Elizabeth went through because she persisted in loving the kind woman to whom they owed their present consequence.

Demure Little Hypocrite

It had another ill effect, of which, however, she was ignorant. The duke, coming up that way for reasons of his own and giving Bran an airing, spied Elizabeth leaving George Anne's house to step into a chair, and half halting in astonishment, turned the corner as quick as he could to consider. He would not have her see him at that moment, for had he needed any confirmation of his crueler suspicions he had it now. Poor dear George Anne! He himself knew too well of many great ladies invited to the sacred precincts of the court, to the still rarer altitudes of Strawberry, themselves sanctified by the smile of royalty, bathed in the benediction of bishops, with whom had she known what he did, George Anne would have vehemently refused to break bread. But none the less, though scandal was whispering about them, if an actress like Mrs. Bellamy tripped it was roared in the streets and the coffee houses and the clubs, and that a young lady of fashion should keep her any sort of company was as hurtful to that young lady's reputation as if she had not had the felicity to be acknowledged by the ladies mentioned above. If ever he had thought Elizabeth a demure little hypocrite, he was certain he knew it now.

He stood a moment, considering steadily. He could answer that Mrs. Gunning and Maria were partaking the hospitality of one of the ladies so blessed in the smiles of the fashionable. He had seen them enter that proud portal. It was apparent also that Elizabeth was homeward bound.

He whistled merrily to Bran and they followed slowly in the track of the sedan chair.

Twenty minutes later Mr. Skinner opened the door to a gentleman whose face he knew very well, before whom and before whose very dog, he performed a deep obeisance. A smile on the visitor's countenance induced him to extend his hand. He closed it with a smile responsive on his own, and his grace went unannounced upstairs to the parlor, Bran following.

The children's voices could be heard from another room and Elizabeth sat alone in the window seat, her wide brimmed hat beside her. A book was in her lap, but unopened. She appeared to be looking out into the dusty street with a sorrowful air. So, for the first time he saw her as she looked when alone, and surely her face might have taught him something had he taken a longer time for studying it.

She was on her feet in a flash, staring at him in mingled amazement and terror. Bran, wiser than his master, stood by the door with great eyes fixed on Elizabeth, waiting permission to enter.

The duke, bowing, addressed himself to his business.

"Madam, I have come to make my obedience to Mrs. and Miss Gunning, as well as to yourself. I beg pardon if I intrude—I and my dog. Does your mamma object to people of his family. I can assure you he is a gentleman."

For a moment her eyes softened, but she said stiffly:

"I know it, your grace. But my mamma and my sister are from home." And so remained standing. Volumes could not have spoken clearer than her attitude. It was wasted, however, on the visitor.

The Insult Was Patent

"We are permitted, Bran!" he said. "Your good breeding covers my lack of it. Lie down."

The superb arrogance of his manner struck her dumb. Were all the world born to be his grace of Hamilton's subjects? Was she? But though silenced she was unbroken. She remained standing and while she did so he could not sit. Nor did Bran obey his command to lie down. The oddest scene and so James Hamilton felt it, though to her it was all tragedy.

"I have not seen you for so long, madam, and your smiles are worth so much to me that I beg for the happiness of a few moments. I may add that I saw you leaving Mrs. Bellamy's house and so hoped for the happiness of seeing you. To be honest, I followed."

The gauge was thrown down—the battle openly begun—an unequal one between a most experienced man of thirty and a girl of eighteen, who seemingly had no weapon to defend her. She stood there in great fear and perplexity, but her voice, though low, was resolute.

"Sir, your grace knows it is not the custom for young women of birth to receive gentlemen alone. I have no more to say."

He did not move—nor she. Neither would grant an inch. Presently she added in a clear, ringing voice:

"I said your dog was a gentleman, my lord duke. Shall I add——"

The end was not needed. The duke looked at her humorously, an odd smile about the corners of his lips.

"I would hinder no lady from speaking her mind. But surely one who keeps company with Mrs. Bellamy need not grudge half an hour to an adorer? I suppose you cannot be ignorant that that lady, though worshiped by many thousands of English hearts, is nevertheless not what one should choose as an instructress of youth."

The insult was patent and yet Elizabeth thanked the duke for it. It gave her ground upon which vehemence swept her beyond thought of herself. She faced him with one trembling hand on the table as if to support herself, and her voice was silver defiance:

"Sir, I will hear no word against Mrs. Bellamy. I know only that her heart is all generosity and kindness, and such as our life is—I don't love it too well—we owe it to her. We were bone-poor in Dublin. If we had enough to eat it was as much as we had. I have gone often with my feet wet along the streets because there was no money to mend my shoes. And Mrs. Bellamy came and found us so, and 'twas she lent us clothes to make a becoming appearance and dressed us with her own hands and sent us to the castle, where my mamma met her old friend, my lord lieutenant, and so received a pension. The bread I eat I owe to Mrs. Bellamy, and while I live my love and gratitude are hers. Disparage me with her if you will." And as she said the last words she walked past him to the door and was gone. Bran made a motion to follow, but the door closed.

With Gloves Off

Now, James Hamilton had heard that story told with exaggerations and deviations and variations by sneering, jealous, hinting tongues of men and women, often floated over London as such things will, and he paid it little attention—had, indeed, forgotten it. Beauty is beauty, no matter how it arrives. But it was a different matter to hear it told with generous pride, too noble for shame, with kindling eyes and lips strung to music like a harp's with tender memory and gratitude.

He stood there, left like a fool, yet did not remember to feel himself one, so divinely did she possess him for the moment. His thoughts were so mixed that even his chronicler dares not attempt to disentangle them. All that can be told is that he presently said to his dog:

"Beaten at the first round. Next time with the gloves off, Bran!"—and so went leisurely down the stairs to find the obsequious Skinner at the door, marveling under his professional gravity why the visit had been so short. The duke went out, whistling to Bran, and the hall door banged to.

Once he looked up at the upper windows, with his gaze fixed on that which happened to be Mrs. Gunning's—so does the comedy of life betray us!

Were violet eyes peeping behind the curtains to see the effect of her cannonade and take the range for next time? Eyes certainly were watching and wary ones, but they were Mrs. Skinner's—who had sped upstairs on her husband's news to catch a parting view and form her own conclusions.

Elizabeth sat in her own room, racked with fear and shame. Let her mamma and Maria be as foolish as they would—what had she done to deserve his insults? Was it some vulgarity in the man under all his fine breeding that taught him to despise poverty and think it fair game for a great nobleman's amusement? At that moment she loathed the thought of him, and yet the very terror he created in her mind drew it towards him perpetually. Ah, how much nobler the dog than the man, she thought — contrasting Bran's fidelity and love and gentle obedience with his master's insulting arrogance!

Mr. Walpole Calls

She shed no tear. She was not one who wept easily, and it may be her pain was the greater and the more so because the very voice of her soul warned her not to tell her mother and Maria of their battle. Indeed, she could not, because George Anne was involved and would meet with greater insult if she opened her mouth. But what to do—where to go? She did not even dare to reprove Skinner, for if the duke walked past him it was certainly too much to hope that Skinner would bar the way. How could the poor soul dare it?

Thus she sat dry-eyed and agonizing when wheels were heard without and a coach of sober elegance, with horses to match, drew up at the door. A knock, and presently Mrs. Skinner:

"Madam, Mr. Walpole is aware that Mrs. and Miss Gunning are absent, but he requests the favor to see you, as he is favored with a message to you from Miss Walpole. But if inconvenient, he will do himself the honor another day."

Elizabeth welcomed it and the possibility of an outlet for her own thoughts. Once and for all she would gain an opinion from him on the duke, though without revealing her secret. There were moments when it appeared to her that he must be mad, and if he were Mr. Walpole would certainly know the facts or rumors.

Let it be imagined what was her state of agitation when it is declared that she never so much as looked in the glass, but walked down as she was and so into Mr. Walpole's presence. And it is certain that if at that moment he had offered her Strawberry and his heart, for both were one, she would have accepted both on the spot and thought herself a fortunate woman.

Not even James Hamilton could be cooler nor in a more humorous way than Mr. Walpole. Yet there was real kindness in the glance he gave her when he had played his part as ambassador from his niece.

I think my charming Miss Elizabeth, whom I always regard with the same tenderness as one of my most cherished portraits at Strawberry, looks ruffled and troubled. May her faithful though ageing servitor ask why?"

She temporized:

"I am tired, sir—the day is hot. But how are you? That is of more importance to London than any other question, even than that of his majesty's fever."

Less Dangerous if Mad

"You flatter me, child. Well, since you would know, I have a touch of the gout, that ungallant disorder, and had I a mind to brag I could boast of a little nursling rheumatism in the shoulder, but I scorn to set value on such trifles and if I knew I could find Miss Elizabeth alone, would come in my coffin and four to visit her if I could find no other way. Now—to be serious. What is wrong?"

Elizabeth considered a moment. Prudence is a safe friend, but there are moments when she appears a dull old spinster to be abandoned at the earliest possible moment. Elizabeth dropped her guiding hand:

"Sir, I ask you as I would ask no other—Is the duke of Hamilton mad? You must not question why I ask!"

He looked shrewdly but sidelong at her, and then set himself to answer a difficult question.

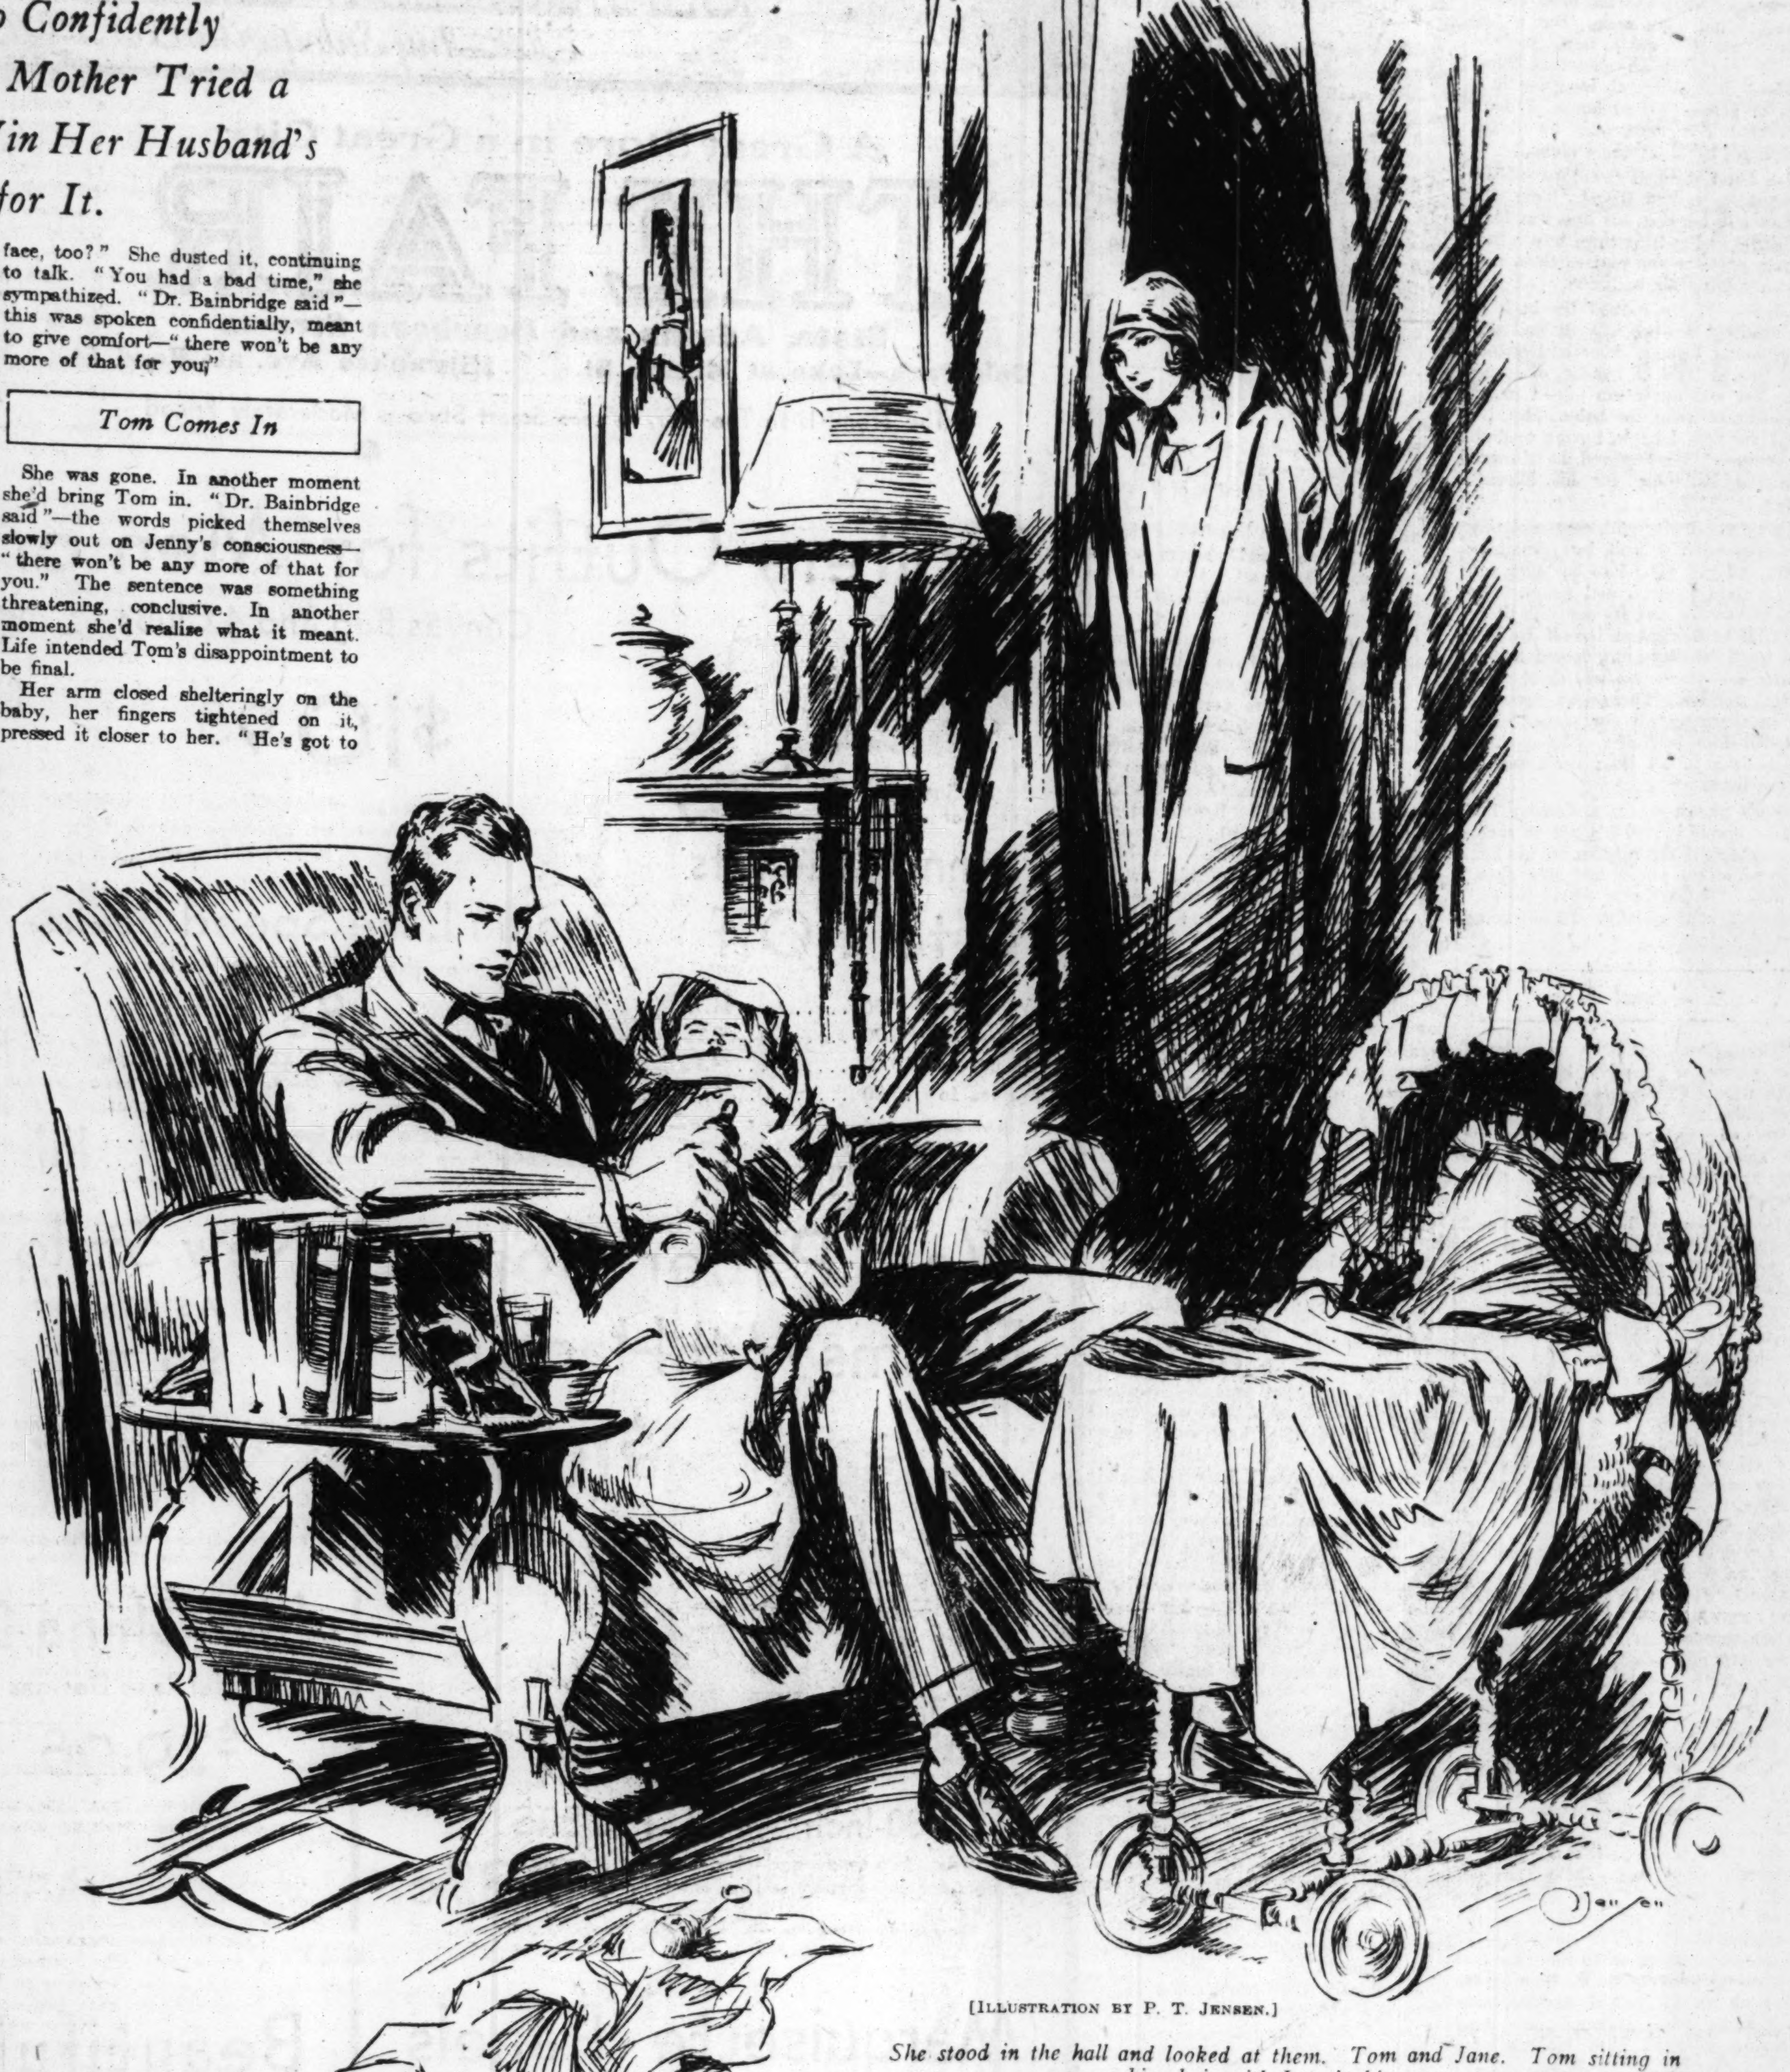
BABY GIRL PARMALEE

BY BROOKS HANLON

When Fate Sent the Parmalees a Girl, Instead of the Boy So Confidently Expected, the Young Mother Tried a Strange Device to Win Her Husband's Affection for It.



[ILLUSTRATION BY P. T. JENSEN.]

She stood in the hall and looked at them. Tom and Jane. Tom sitting in a big chair with Jane in his arms.

JENNY toiled over hill after hill. As soon as one rocky way was conquered another loomed before her and she had to fight upward again, pressing, straining, unable to see, unable to think. There was a rhythm to the hills. One after another they stretched out behind her, and one after another they rose out of the foreground, each one striking her senses with something like a physical blow.

Now fear dragged at her limbs. She was going to meet some one on the brow of one of these hills. She was going to meet and merge with some one and become a person again. She tried frantically to remember who it was she was to become, and could not. She approached the brow of each hill shrinkingly now. The meeting would be final; there would be no turning back. If she should meet and pass into some one strange in this fog, this darkness, this murmuring immensity, the wrong could never in the world be righted again. She would have lost herself.

Jenny Darr Parmalee. A label flashed tauntingly in the darkness. She was Jenny Darr Parmalee. That is, she had been Jenny Darr Parmalee and she wanted to be that person again. She took up that striving, straining to the top of the last hill. Jenny Darr Parmalee. Jenny Darr Parmalee. The peak of the hill was near now. If only it should be Jenny she met, no one else. She prayed.

A Lovely Baby Girl

Jenny opened her eyes. The sun lay in two neat rectangles on the floor and a nurse in starched white sat at the side of her bed. Jenny remembered. She remembered the pain that had taken her body and twisted it and wrung it; she remembered her nails biting into the palms of her hands and her teeth biting into her lips. The nurse had her finger on her wrist. Jenny struggled with her weakness and her mouth formed one barely audible word. "Tom?" For five years her first thought had been of Tom.

"He'll be right in." The nurse smiled. "And you have a lovely baby girl."

Her words caught Jenny back from the edge of an abyss of sleep. A mistake had been made. She had a confused sense of it and of the necessity that it be corrected at once. It was like lifting a heavy stone to the top of a wall, rolling it over. "No." Her lips moved weakly.

"Yes." The nurse's voice was smiling, too. "I'll have her brought in," she said, pressing a button.

Jenny had to lift other heavy stones. "No," she corrected again. "A boy."

"The sweetest little girl you ever saw." The nurse laughed aloud now. "Here she is!" She was taking a bundle from a probationer at the door, her voice slipping into that soft register of women the world over with a baby. "Black hair! Blue eyes! Two little fists. Open your eyes, Mrs. Parmalee."

"Tom," Jenny had been thinking, with a sudden sinking of all her faculties. Tom had wanted a boy. Why, he hadn't even considered anything else. Had they all—her fingers clutched the coverings weakly—she and the doctor, the nurses, even the little probationer, conspired to disappoint Tom? She opened her eyes slowly, denying this child. She received it into her arms, looked down at its little dark head. She forgot about Tom.

Her Recreated Self

Here was Jenny Darr Parmalee in miniature. Another little lithe, blithe creature who would coast down the hills of Forest Park winters and sing little songs in the bathroom on summer mornings! Jenny looked down at the miracle of her recreated self and a rapture flooded her heart. She feasted her eyes upon the delicate minutiæ of features, the little tucked mouth, the nose, the babyishly turned chin, the eyelashes. She put her fingers gloatingly into the hollows of its temples, into the folds of its neck. She touched its hands and sent her fingers exploring for feet.

She laughed and cried, and for three consecutive minutes didn't think at all about Tom. Then, like the stars swinging in their courses, her thoughts veered back to him. Tom—her fingers tightened in panic on the warm bundle—might shut this little stranger out. She fought against admitting it, as she had always done, but Tom was queer. Some few people he took into his heart and the rest of the world did not exist for him. Jenny had often wondered what it would be like to be shut out of Tom's world. How could those who were thus shut out bear the chill and loneliness of it? Would this little daughter have to be one of those whom Tom refused to admit?

No, no, no—Jenny fought with that overwhelming inclination to sleep. She tried to think. It began with this—Tom had wanted a son. He hadn't, emphatically, wanted a daughter. She began at that point over and over again, but her thought got nowhere. Tom had wanted a son. Tommy, he'd been calling the baby, confidently, for months. She should have prepared him, she thought. That heavy pall of sleep was pushing her down but, with an effort, she raised it again. She hadn't, herself, even conceived of life's ever daring to disappoint Tom.

"I'll bring Mr. Parmalee in," the nurse said, smoothing the coverings. "Shall I dust a little powder on your face, too?" She dusted it, continuing to talk. "You had a bad time," she sympathized. "Dr. Bainbridge said"—this was spoken confidentially, meant to give comfort—"there won't be any more of that for you."

Tom Comes In

She was gone. In another moment she'd bring Tom in. "Dr. Bainbridge said"—the words picked themselves slowly out on Jenny's consciousness—"there won't be any more of that for you." The sentence was something threatening, conclusive. In another moment she'd realise what it meant. Life intended Tom's disappointment to be final.

Her arm closed shelteringly on the baby, her fingers tightened on it, pressed it closer to her. "He's got to love her," she thought in a panic. "He's got to." But she remembered how magnificent was Tom's indifference to the things which did not touch him. She'd seen his mind set.

The neat rectangles of sunshine had moved a little on the floor. The baby had made a queer little face and yawned. Jenny lay and watched the door.

Tom came in. He was at her side in three strides. "Jen," he said, and for a moment again she remembered only him. This, after all, was the sweetest kiss, she thought, receiving it. There hadn't been one, ever, to compare with it. "Jen"—Tom's voice was queer, his lips were close to her throat.

"I'm all right, Tom. Have you seen her?"

"Yes, I've seen her. How do you feel now?"

"Just—right. Look again, dear." She moved the blanket. "Easy does it," she thought, forcing her eyes up to watch him. She saw that curtain of disappointment close down. "Dear God," she prayed, "show me how to be clever."

"Well, we seem to have got a family for ourselves, Jen." Tom's eyes were blank, indifferent—were they even a little resentful? The blanket fell back into place and Tom looked disturbed, embarrassed, as though he thought it was up to him to say something more. "It—she looks like you," he hazarded.

Clever Jenny Darr, they'd called her. She was silent for a long time and Tom was silent, too, holding her hands. The sun moved on the floor. Jenny turned her head. She permitted two tears to slip between her lids and down over her cheeks; it was easy to do. She introduced a catch into her voice; that was easy, too. "I—I wanted a boy," she faltered. "Tom, I was so sure——"

Shows No Emotion

He kissed her again, and wiped the tears from her cheeks. Two more slipped immediately to take their places. "I can't believe it, Tom." That catch again.

"Can't believe what, honey?"

"That it—she's a girl."

"Well, listen, Jen." He was disturbed, but about her. "I guess I rather figured it would be a boy, too. But—but, well, it isn't. Buck up now, honey. You're all right. That's all we need think of now."

But Jenny continued to weep quietly, abandonedly. There might be two occasions in a woman's life when it was permissible to shed tears before a man, the blithe Jenny Darr might once have conceded reluctantly. Well, perhaps this was one of them.

"Come, now, Jen." Tom, worried, had taken one of her hands and was rubbing it. "There you are, girl. It's—it's a perfect child, the doctor tells me. Strong heart and—and everything okay. We have that to think of." There was, however, no emotion in his voice. "Eight cylinders," he might have been saying. "Hydraulic four wheel brakes."

Jenny let more tears slip down as the nurse came in to take the baby. Neither parent lifted the corner of the soft blanket for a final look at their offspring, and no detaining hand was lifted as she picked the infant up.

"Wrapped up in each other, I'll say," Miss Newton murmured a little indignantly, going down the hall.

Jenny's voice broke as she received Tom's good-by kiss. "I never dreamed that—that it wouldn't be——" she began. Tom pushed her hair back once again, reluctant to leave. "Now, Jen," he chided, "don't think about that. Don't think about a thing. Just sleep and get strong."

Jenny watched the sun on the floor. Tears came to her eyes and went away again. She kept seeing the disappointment that had been in Tom's eyes. After all this fuss and illness was over that would be his dominant feeling, she knew. His resentment would clarify, fix itself. He'd want them to be a twosome again, shutting the baby out.

"He shan't," she resolved. "If I can—if I can only——"

She thought for a while, still fighting sleep. "She's too little to miss love," she decided after a while.

"Tom's fair," she thought later, and, clinging to some frail thread of hope, fell asleep.

The hum of the evening visiting hour was upon the maternity floor and Miss Newton walked slowly down one of the long corridors. The scent of spring was coming through opened windows from the clipped lawns and hedges of the hospital grounds. In every room an intrigued male person was hanging over a bed, his head close to a pillow on which a girl's head lay. Between them, in every case, was a small white clad creature propped high on the pillow.

The young parents' hands and eyes met over it, their fingers caressed its fingers, their voices blended in a murmured harmony of praise and wonder. Miss Newton was accustomed to the heart tug of all this, but tonight spring was in the air and it affected her strangely. "I won't wait for them to ask for her," she decided in a rare mood of softness. "I'll take her right in."

Eleven Boys, Three Girls

She hurried back to the nursery and picked up its lone little inhabitant, pressed its cheek close to hers for an instant and uttered a series of meaningless coos and gurgles. She walked, then, back to Jenny's room and stood for a moment at the door, holding the little visitor aloft, and looking hopefully toward Jenny and Tom. Their silence met her flatly.

"It's the baby, Tom." Jenny turned her head, at last, indifferently. "It's the new maid," she might have been saying, or "It's a package for you."

Undaunted, Miss Newton brought her burden in and propped it up on the pillow between them, arranging a tableau such as was being presented in every other room on the maternity floor that evening. In this case two of the actors didn't seem to be up on their cues, but Miss Newton didn't permit herself to be discouraged. She'd hurry out, she thought. Baby Girl would open and close her inky blue eyes lazily, she'd move her small fists aimlessly, and the hearts of these unnatural parents would be stirred. Perhaps she'd yawn, that intriguing dimple would come into view, and they'd capitulate completely.

"Eleven boy babies were born in the hospital last week," Jenny said, her fingers touching one pink fist listlessly.

"That so?" Tom asked. He was awkward, constrained, now that the baby had been brought in. He sat a little back from the bed, and looked at his watch.

"Look at her," Jenny was imploring him silently, her heart flooded with delight by the spectacle of the small eyelids, with their soft fringe of gold, rising and falling. "If you love me, Tom, say something to her, touch her. Only three girls," she added aloud. "I was so sure, Tom——" She turned her head away from him quickly.

"Now, listen, Jen—don't cry again." His tone was worried. "She—she's a perfectly healthy child. Listen to this—I had a chance to sell the Norton place today. Snapped it up, too. A fellow named Renner, in the city, bought it."

"That's fine, Tom. We'll have a new car this year, perhaps, after all." Tom had been giving up the new car for Tom Jr.

"Well, I don't know. We'll see how things shape up. I say, Jen, she's crying."

The baby, whether in protest against this treatment, or in reaction to some actual inward discomfort, had, indeed, set up a faint wailing. "Ring for the nurse," Jenny said, frowning. When Miss Newton came in she looked from one to the other of them and back to the crying baby, and set her lips in a straight line.

Indignant Glances

"Listen, Gray. Listen, Tobin"—she spread this new tale of heartlessness among the nurses. "I don't think they put a finger on her! I doubt if they even looked at her!"

"They don't deserve to have her," Gray said indignantly.

"She ought to be put out for adoption." Tobin tossed her head.

"They haven't even bothered to give her a name!" Miss Newton summed up the case against these unnatural Parmalee parents with a shake of her head. The maternity floor buzzed and buzzed again. What was the matter with the Parmalees? They didn't care about their baby. Tom was bombarded by indignant glances when he stepped down the hall. Girls moved pointedly out of his way.

Tom had worn a somewhat troubled look when the time came for him to leave the hospital that night. "What—what will they do for her, Jen?" he'd inquired, turning back at the door. "For the baby," he'd explained at her blank look.

"O, they'll let her cry," Jenny told him carelessly. "It doesn't do to spoil them, you know."

But Tom stood for a moment looking down the corridor before putting his hat on and moving toward the elevator. The expression in his eyes was questioning, a little worried.

Dr. Bainbridge tapped with his fountain pen on an official looking little book. "We may as well get the subject of this little lady's birth registration fixed up," he said. He looked expectantly from one parent to another. "What name?" he prompted. He'd happened in during one of Tom's visits.

Tom looked blank. "What name, Jen?" He referred the question to Jenny, propped up in bed now, and with a trace of pink coming back into her cheeks.

"O, I—I hadn't thought of a name for a girl," Jenny explained. "Both Tom and I thought it would be Tom Jr." Her mouth drooped.

"Now, Jen." Tom gave her a worried look. She'd cried three times in a week because the baby wasn't a boy. He hadn't known women took things like that so hard, had thought they all had some sort of a—well, a maternal instinct or something like that which took care of such situations.

Come to think of it, in the nine days since the baby had come, he hadn't heard Jen once mention the question of its name. Was that natural?

Tom Is Worried

"Look here, Jen," he said. "It—she'll have to have a name."

"I suppose so," Jenny agreed. "I hadn't thought of one, though." She was unconcerned.

"Well"—the doctor wrote busily—"I can just send it in baby girl Parmalee, of course. That will do for the present. How about going home tomorrow, Mrs. Parmalee?" he smiled.

Immediately they were like two children promised a holiday. Then a shadow fell over Jenny's eyes. She remembered that the welcome in Tom's high spirits was all for her. Not any of it was for the baby.

Tom wore a questioning look, lunching with Benner Whitson next day. "D'you know," he burst out suddenly, "I'm not sure it's a good thing for a woman to have her baby in a hospital."

"What's that, Tom?" Whitson blinked a little.

"I say there's danger of a mother growing away from a baby in a hospital," Tom said. "She sees so little of it."

"Don't you worry about that," Whitson said comfortably. He was the father of four. "A woman just naturally can't grow away from her own child," he explained. "It's against nature. Now look here, Parmalee, why don't you grab some of this copper——"

Tom looked unconvinced and not less troubled. If Jenny had been there she might have read the germ of an idea in his discomfort. It was all very well, she might have deduced from his uncertainty, for him to ignore the newcomer, but for her to be indifferent to it——.

He found Jenny up and dressed, waiting for him in the sun parlor of the hospital. He watched her fleck a little powder on her nose and pull the little blue hat down snugly. They were in the car then, Jenny sniffing the spring air hungrily, Miss Newton and the baby in the back seat. Fortunately for Tom and Jenny, their backs were turned to the nurse and they weren't in a position to read the expression in her eyes. "Never lifted the corner of the blanket," she was storming inwardly. "Never said, 'How is she?' or 'Be sure to keep her warm, Miss Newton!'"

Home Again, Jen

Ten minutes later baby girl Parmalee crossed the threshold of home. Appetizing odors from Hannah's special dinner welcomed her, but there seemed to be no other welcome.

"Home again, Jen." Tom kissed Jenny as Hannah and the nurse disappeared on the stairs. "Home again," Jenny agreed. She felt a little heavy-hearted and her eyes strayed after these two strange women going upstairs with her baby. There was a pang connected with this. She'd wanted to welcome the little one personally into that wide, perfectly ventilated, blue—blue for a boy!—nursery. She'd wanted to show off the blue wardrobe with its racks of plain—plain for a boy!—little collared dresses and skirts and robes, its trays of little white and blue boots, its hundreds of tiny accessories, its wee shirts. She attended a little absently to Tom's kiss. Well, there would be more pangs like this. "I must be careful," she thought. "I must chatter and laugh."

Half consciously she waited through the dinner and the evening for Tom to say something about the baby. "Foolish," she chided. "It's the first day. Look, Tom——" She'd found a picture of the new R——— eight.

"Um-hum." Instantly he was absorbed in it. "Some boat," he murmured. "Knocks the hills, too, they tell me."

At 9 o'clock a tiny wailing came down the stairway. After five minutes of it Tom was pacing up and down.

"Light a Red Bird," Jenny advised. "Be nonchalant." No one could have been more nonchalant than she. She lounged supine on the davenport, propped up by cushions, and looked lazily at the fire which Tom had lighted.

"By the way, Jen, have you thought of a name?" he asked, and her eyes lighted up. "People keep asking me," he explained, and the light died out.

"Why, no, I hadn't thought of one." She moved restlessly, as though irked by the question.

"Well, that's all right. You're tired, old girl." He came over and rearranged her cushions. The wailing continued and Jenny had a lot to do to keep from clutching his fingers.

"What about Jane?" She leafed her magazine languidly. After two weeks of thinking all day and dreaming all night she hadn't been able, after all, to think of anything fitter than the name which stood in stiff angular writing on the page recording the biblical record of her own birth.

Jane Darr Parmalee

"Jane? What d'you mean, Jane?"

"For the baby."

"O, sure. Jane's all right." He looked relieved. "Tip top."

"All right. Jane it'll be. Jane Darr Parmalee."

"Okay, Jenny. Sensible, too. No frills to it. Say, that's still going on up there."

"Is it?" As though she hadn't known! As though she'd been hearing anything but that plaintive, persistent cry!

"Why, I—I——" Tom stood up suddenly and tossed his cigaret into the fire. "I'll run on up and see if there's anything needed. I'll be right back." He was apologetic.

Jenny watched him bound up the stairs. She heard his feet in the hall. She lowered her head down into the welcome haven of the cushions. "Score!" she breathed.

Jane Darr Parmalee was six weeks old. Miss Newton was gone now and Jenny had taken over the care of her daughter. "I don't get a thing else done," she sometimes complained to Tom in a calculated tone. She didn't tell him why it was she got nothing else done, didn't tell him of the time she spent playing with the infant, the additional hours she spent pushing the new carriage over the smooth walks of Forest Park while small Jane slept.

A useful expenditure of energy, of course, for Jane could have slept as well on the porch, or in the well ventilated nursery. Well, she liked to pass people, to see them duck their heads for a look at the sleeping infant.

"It's too bad," Tom said, looking troubled. He looked increasingly troubled these days. When the time came for the convention in Chicago he asked Jenny to go with him for the week, as she had last year. It was merely a gesture, of course, this time, but she consented! It hadn't occurred to Tom that a woman with a seven weeks' old infant could go away for a whole week. He'd be glad to have her, naturally, but——. He grew more troubled.

"The—the baby?" He came out with it at length.

"O, we can have Miss Newton in," she said carelessly.

They got ready for the trip, and there was a line between Tom's wide-set blue eyes. "How is she?" he asked suddenly one evening.

"Who, Tom?" Jenny raised her eyebrows inquiringly. She was fingering the radio dials.

"Why, the baby, Jen." Tom stood and rubbed the back of his head.

"O, Jane. She's all right." She tuned in on a dance orchestra, touched the volume regulator. The house pulsed with sound.

Whimpering Goes On

Tom put his magazine down. He walked to a window and went on with that rubbing of his head, his gesture of uncertainty and distress. "Won't that disturb her?" he asked at length, as the radio swung into another blaring dance number.

"O, gracious no. They have to get used to noise," Jenny told him calmly.

"You keep her up there in the nursery all the time, do you, Jen?"

"Yes. It's best for a baby. Excitement isn't good for them."

"All day and all night, Jen?"

"Of course." Jenny fibbed easily. "It's well ventilated, dear."

Tom spread blue prints of the new subdivision his company was boosting out on the table, but didn't seem able to concentrate on them.

Later, when they were getting ready for bed, a small whimpering set up in the nursery. It continued. Tom looked at Jenny inquiringly. It was only on rare, almost nonexistent occasions that the small person made her presence felt in this manner.

"She'll be all right," Jenny assured him.

The whimpering went on. It was a lonely, neglected sound in the darkened nursery.

"Perhaps I had better go in and see if she's covered." Tom tied his bathrobe about him. He looked at Jenny.

"Tom—" Jenny controlled her own inclination to fly into the nursery—"I pin the covers, you know. She's all right."

"Well——" Tom looked uncertain. "It won't do any harm to go in and see."

Jenny crawled into bed and waited. It was ten minutes before he returned and when he did she watched his face in the mirror. There was the slightest suspicion of a grin about his mouth.

"She snuggled up to him," Jenny deducted, remembering how small Jane clung when lifted up in the darkness. It was because she was afraid of falling, of course, but Tom couldn't be expected to know about that. "Tom," she introduced a chill into her voice, "you didn't walk with her, did you?"

Away from Her Baby

"Just took a turn or two." His expression didn't change. By and by that puzzled look came into his eyes. "Jen," he said abruptly, "you didn't have any brothers or sisters, did you?"

"No."

"Well——" He rubbed the back of his head. "I had three younger, you know. I seem to remember my mother fussing with them—O, off and on, sort of. I guess they raise babies differently now."

"Of course they do. I was just thinking, Tom," she added deliberately, "it's a good thing the baby wasn't a boy, isn't it? We'd have spoiled a boy terribly, you know."

Tom didn't answer. "Perhaps," Jenny thought, "he's remembering how she clung. Perhaps," she thought again, "she'll grow up to be gifted. A girl is gifted when she knows just when to cling."

The Chicago train sped westward and Jenny sat through the first hundred miles with her face carefully averted from Tom. She didn't want him to see the stark misery in her eyes. At this time—she looked at her watch—she'd have been giving Jane her 10 o'clock feeding. At this time—she looked again—she'd have been taking her out for the morning ride, tying the white angora bonnet under her fat little chin, confining the fine small tendrils of hair.

Now she'd have been tucking her in for a sleep, looking gloatingly down at her. They stopped at a station and a girl with a baby got into their car. Now Jenny had to edge her chair slowly about with her foot. She had to face Tom now, but at least she needn't look at that baby. Tom was looking steadily out of the window.

They lunched. "What are you thinking about?" Tom asked, breaking a long silence.

"The joys of living in a hotel for a week," she replied promptly. In reality she had been wondering in a panic if Miss Newton might not forget and boil the baby's formula. She longed to ask Tom for reassurance on this point, but bit the question back from the tip of her tongue. If the subject of Jane Darr Parmalee was to be brought up on the trip it would not be by her mother.

Herb and Eloise Abbott came into their car then and they played bridge. "Two hearts," Jenny said automatically. "Three spades," she said. "Four clubs. Seven days," she was thinking. "Seven days away from her and I can't get through the first one. Seven days and a night. Suppose she takes sick." This supposition held her in a sort of frozen stupor for three minutes.

Heart Grows Heavier

"Spades are trump, Jen," Tom said, recalling her to the game.

She sat up with an effort. She became gay, laughing, talkative. They swept westward to a week of banqueting and theaters, shopping and sleeping late and dancing, to new foods and new faces, and new streets and shops, and she mustn't let Tom know that she had rather a thousand times be in a little house in a little town, mixing formulas and laundering dainty white garments too precious to be trusted to other hands.

"You two are so sensible," Eloise Abbott observed approvingly at the end of the second day. "New parents, and I haven't heard a word out of either of you to bear out that fact! Miracles do happen, don't they, Herb?"

"O, the baby's all right." Jenny drummed on the table carelessly. "She's with a nurse, you know." She caught Tom looking at her. "Let's dance this, Tom!" She caught his arm gayly.

That night she cried a little into her pillow before going to sleep.

In company with the Abbotts they did the convention and the city. While Herb and Tom were engaged in mysterious male convention activities Jenny and Eloise poked about the city, saw matinées, had tea in odd Russian, Czecho-Slovakian and Hawaiian places, indulged in an orgy of beauty treatments. Not for a year had Jenny been so massaged, so manicured, so faultlessly waved, so scientifically creamed and patted and iced as she was this week.

She looked upon the result indifferently, however. Her heart had grown heavier day by day. What was she doing here, dancing and shopping and being frivolous, when she had a seven weeks' old infant at home? A long week she was missing out of that precious baby life, and weeks taken now could never be replaced. The days dragged on, but Tom was never permitted to guess that they were dragging for Jenny. She put up a gay front and made no mention of small Jane.

No Cause for Alarm

Neither did Tom make any mention of her, and this situation kept thrusting itself between Jenny and her appreciation of the holiday. It could shadow the most carefree moment, constricting her heart in an agony of foreboding. Would Tom ever change? Shouldn't she, rather, be literally showering love and devotion upon their daughter every moment of its life to make up for his defection?

She slipped out one morning before Tom was up and visited the infants' departments of the stores. For two hours she was really happy, though conscience stricken. Small Jane was already oversupplied with dainty little French garments; she had no use for more. Jenny indulged in another foolish move. She slipped into a phone booth and put in a long distance call for Miss Newton. She came out of the booth actually lighthearted. Jane was thriving and content.

Jenny took a sudden and enthusiastic part in plans for the evening and for the first time was truly appreciative of her well groomed appearance, the orchid delicacy that expensive treatments had imparted to her skin. She said nothing to Tom about the phone call. I'll fight it out on this line if it takes a lifetime, she resolved.

It was the next day that Miss Newton's wire came. The baby had caught cold. "Slight temperature," the wire read. "No cause for alarm."

No cause for alarm! Jenny lay wide eyed far into the night. "It's just that we instructed her to wire if anything developed," Tom explained matter of factly. "Nothing to worry about, Jen."

Next Sunday

Jimmy was a barnstorming aviator, but he showed he was also a gambler when a Texas oil well "came in" and then burst into flames. . . . A dramatic short story by T. T. Flynn.

The Magnificent Gamble

Nothing to worry about. Hours later Jenny was pressing her fingers to her eyes frantically, listening to Tom's even breathing. The night had magnified her worry. Tom could sleep! Perhaps even now their baby was gasping in the throes of that frightful child malady, croup. Perhaps she was burning with fever. Tom! A dozen times she was on the point of starting up with this cry on her lips, but each time common sense restrained her. Common sense, and that something more potent, the knowledge that Tom didn't care. O, of course, there would have been with him a measure of conventional concern, but he might have been annoyed with her for waking him.

The Miracle Happens

"Now, Jen—" he'd have thrown the cold light of reason, the colder light of disinterest, on her fears—"there's nothing to worry about."

She was wan and tired next morning, with great dark circles under her eyes, and hands that were unsteady as she did her hair.

"What's the matter, Jenny?" Tom was smoking an early morning cigaret and watching her.

"I suppose," she equivocated, "I'm not quite strong enough yet for this sort of thing."

After lunch Miss Newton's other wire came. "Baby's cold a little worse," it read. "Giving her best of care."

Jenny read it without a word and went into the bathroom. She paced up and down in the small space and twisted her hands. "Perhaps it's our punishment," she thought. "My punishment for leaving her. If Tom didn't care I, at least——" A cold certainty took possession of her; the baby's illness would be serious, fatal. It had come because there was no love there, no care to fend it off.

She stood very still and tried to fight down the chill of this thought. "Cold a little worse"—surely that did not sound so ominous. "Giving her best of care——" that was the most Jenny, herself, could have done. But a two months' old child was so frail. Its hold on life was such an uncertain thing. "O——" Jenny's breath went out in a rush of pain—"I'll go home. I don't care what Tom says, what he thinks. She shan't be ill off there alone."

She burst through the door swiftly, stopped short, and stared. Tom, the cigaret still between his lips, was folding shirts and putting them into a bag, folding pajamas and putting them into a bag, folding his bathrobe.

"Jen——" He rubbed the back of his head. "We—we may as well tear along home, I guess. Something serious may be up. That is, I mean, of course not. Yet you never can tell—I mean, she's sort of little, the baby. Say, it's rough for you, I know, having to dash off now——" His face red, he plunged into the bathroom for his shaving things.

Jenny stood very still, contemplating the miracle. By and by something warm and wet came into her eyes and the miracle wavered and swam. She winked rapidly and it was still there.

"Tom"—she forced herself to face him when he came out, forced herself to laugh—"you're foolish, dear. It—it isn't serious. There's no necessity for breaking up all our plans." She watched him fearfully. She couldn't yet believe in all this; she'd test it to the limit.

Tom's mouth set in a decisive line and he barely parted his lips to speak as he snapped the catches on his bag. "I was afraid you'd feel like that," he said. "I don't care what you do," he went on quietly. "I'm going home."

Tom and Jane

"How—how perfectly ridiculous." She summoned another laugh. Her limbs were trembling to be about the business of packing, but she picked up a file and went carefully to work on her nails. "O, go on home if you want to be so fussy," she said. "I'm staying on."

"The Abbotts will take care of you," he said, still tight lipped. "I've got to go now." He gathered his bags together, kissed her swiftly, and was gone.

Jenny waited. She waited one hour, two hours, three hours. It was four and a half hours before she could follow Tom east, but her bags were packed and ready before he could have boarded his train. She laughed a little and cried a little, looked from her watch to the little wall clock ticking between the beds, from the clock back to her watch again.

"I won't admit it's on account of Jane I'm coming home," she planned cannily. "I'll say I was bored, lonely." She laughed aloud suddenly, ran her fingers through her hair. The baby's illness was minimized in her mind now. Tom cared! Nothing could happen to a baby for whom they both cared, toward whom they'd both be rushing as fast as trains could carry them.

"Careful, Jenny," she warned herself, putting her key into the lock of the little Forest Park house at ten o'clock that night. "Easy does it."

She stood in the hall and looked in at them. Tom and Jane. Tom sitting in a big chair with Jane in his arms. The two surrounded by all the paraphernalia of infant care, and the living room, which up to this time had known no such invasion, seeming to wear an air of hushed surprise, contemplating the phenomenon. Jane sleeping soundly, Tom looking over her head at Jenny, a somewhat unfathomable expression in his eyes.

"I gave Miss Newton the evening off," he said at length, belligerently. "So you decided to come home, after all?"

"Of course," Jenny said lightly. She walked aimlessly about the room, making those small rearranging touches the purpose and effect of which are recognized only by housewives. "You might have known I wouldn't have any fun after you deserted." She was pettish. "How—how is she?" She'd circled close to her goal and stood looking down at it, her arms aching to catch it up, her whole bearing denying that desire.

"No Thanks to You"

"Better," he said curtly. "No thanks to you."

"Why, Tom"—she was innocent. "What do you mean?"

"I mean"—the floodgates of Tom's resentment broke—"I mean I've never known a woman with less feeling than you. You're inhuman! You're cold. You're hard, that's all. I—I didn't think such a woman could exist——"

"Why, Tom——"

"For nearly two months I've watched you and I have yet to see you make one motherly gesture toward this child! You were perfectly content to go away and leave her, quite undisturbed when Miss Newton's wires came. 'Ridiculous,' you said when I suggested coming home. A good time meant more to you! Beauty shops meant more. Theaters! The only ridiculous part of it"—the baby had wakened in the course of this tirade and she whimpered and squirmed—"was for a woman like you ever to have had a child——"

Tom paused for breath. Jenny looked at him. "A woman like me," she repeated. She came yet closer, went down on her knees, and looked at small Jane hungrily. "Is—is her temperature down?" she asked.

"Lord, Jen"—Tom's voice softened—"it isn't natural. A child needs care. It needs affection, love. You can't thrust it away to sleep all day, go away and leave it for weeks. You can't give it over to nurses and maids. Why, I simply couldn't believe, Jen——"

"Careful, Jenny." She stood up and turned away from him, distrustful of her control. She laughed. "That old hand that rocks the cradle idea has gone out, Tom," she said. "Why, you old fashioned thing. You—you"—she lighted a cigaret and snatched another stolen glance at Jane. She was yawning! That dimple had come into view!

"Jen, come here," Tom said, and she crossed to him slowly. "Sit down here," he commanded, pushing her into a chair. She sat obediently and received the sleeping morsel he put into her arms. "Sit there and hold her," he urged her gently. "I—I want to sit over here and watch you."

"Gracious, Tom, you're funny." Jenny let her arms close cautiously on the baby. "You're awfully funny." Delight leaped into her eyes and she had to lower her head to hide it. "Her temperature is down, isn't it?" she observed matter of factly. "Go slow, Jenny. Go slow——"

"Yes, it's down." Tom was looking at her anxiously. He came back and, taking one of the sleeping infant's hands, placed it in Jenny's, closed her fingers about it. "Jenny," he pleaded, "look at her. Don't you feel a little bit that she's yours—ours? Jenny, be—be yourself."

Jenny gave the little hand a slight, ever so slight, pressure. "She is—sort of cute," she conceded reluctantly.

The Irish Beauties

"Indeed I shall not question—I shall not even suppose. I will answer your question as sincerely as if a man had asked it. No—the duke is not mad. He is as clear headed, resolute a man as walks the earth. But, notwithstanding, a man a young woman should beware of. If he were mad I assure you he would be less dangerous."

He caught at the opportunity to warn her, for no one knew better than he how busy was the twittle-twattle of the town over his grace's attentions to Elizabeth Gunning. It was certain he had never looked at another since her sweet star rose on the horizon and if the injured and deserted ladies headed the scandalous chorus, who could wonder? She answered him with perfect composure:

"Sir, I thank you very sincerely for your candor. May I ask you, still without questioning me, to give a sketch of the gentleman's character? You did once before."

Horace Walpole looked at her through the network of fine wrinkles which already surrounded his eyes and gave a look of suffering, very well hidden in sarcasm, to his delicate intellectual face.

"I'll do my best, child, and honestly. The duke is in his way a great prince and spoiled from the cradle. He was taught to consider men his subjects as indeed in Scotland they mostly are, and all women his lawful prey if he so pleases. A prouder man does not live though he disguises it under good breeding. He is brave and generous to a fault but somewhat of cynic and believes in the seven deadly sins far more readily than in the seven deadly virtues. He will take nothing on trust, yet once trusting will not waver. A stern foe and a steadfast friend. But in the virtue of women he has no belief and I who never dare pose as a prophet venture the prophecy that he will not risk marriage and that his princedoms and dukedoms will pass to his cousin. There is my sketch and true to life, so far as I know."

He would not offend her delicacy by hinting that gossip was afoot, but he knew her quick enough to read between the lines. She sighed a patient little sigh that touched him and with a word of thanks turned the subject. But the thought in her heart was—

"That is a man I could have liked, had he been another man, or I a woman he could have respected. As it is—I loathe and must forever loathe him."

"I Am Moonlight"

But Mr. Walpole was already off and away on his gay talk of the town. She must come with him—sure her mamma would permit—to be introduced to the famous actress, now retired, Mrs. Kitty Clive, who had a house not far from Strawberry.

"You shall come and visit my niece at Strawberry. Enchanting spot! Dowagers as plenty as flounders all about; and the famous poet, Mr. Pope's ghost skimming under the windows by a most poetical moonlight. And yet another advantage—the Thames flows between the famous duchess of Queensberry and me—a virago who terrifies me and would frighten Miss Elizabeth into fits. Will you come?"

She promised. It was balm to her heart that the great Mr. Walpole should so distinguish her—and at that moment. He added whimsically:

"Twill confirm the rumor that I am in love with the lovely Miss Gunning, though rumor, blind as a bat, has not yet distinguished which. I heard a verse on it t'other day."

Elizabeth laughed outright. His grace of wit was such that it could not wound any sensitiveness.

He quoted with an air:

When Mr. Walpole designs to praise
And serenade a casement,
Then we who know his loveless days
Are smit with deep amazement.
For if his icy heart grows warm,
The nymphs to whom 'tis given,
Now they have ta'en the world by storm
Will later conquer heaven.

"Sufficiently bad for two fashionable misses, but they did not know the truth which only one ear shall ever hear, that 'tis to Miss Elizabeth my heart is given! Did you know, child, that you two beauties are called Moonlight and Sunlight by a part of the town. Guess which is which!"

"I may guess. I am Moonlight. I never had Maria's brilliance—her hair like gold and azure eyes and lovely bloom. Well—I'm content. I think I am happier in moonlight."

"You have guessed. Well, I must go on my way. I am fraid of protesting what delight I take in your society lest I should seem gallant. 'Tis hard to rend myself away."

He was about to rise. Desperation seized Elizabeth—madness, she thought afterwards, mastered her. Mr. Walpole's was the only disinterested kindness she owned. Should it escape her?

"Mr. Walpole," she began, her teeth chattering with fright, "is it only manners or do you truly take delight in my society?"

"Why, child, I have done nothing else since first my eyes rested on your lovely face. Let me be honest—all the world must admire Miss Gunning, and yet——"

Done With the World

"I know, I know," she interrupted in an agony. "Then, Mr. Walpole, when your beautiful niece marries, could I be helpful—not that she lives with you—but I know the delight she takes in your society, and sure so must I—and——"

And Mr. Walpole rose nimbly in spite of the gout. Could he have had the least notion that Miss Elizabeth Gunning was making him an offer of marriage he would doubtless have leaped out of the window for safety. Happily even his delicate vanity did not suspect the incredible.

But there were tears and emotion in her voice. There was a departure from the pretty fancy, which was all he desired from young women, and sentiment was detestable in his eyes. The young Walpole, who in a fine flush of sentiment had offered half his fortune to his cousin, Harry Conway, to smooth his way to a fortuneless marriage, was long since dead. He was now neither man nor woman, vibrating between the tastes of either in so far as they had literary or artistic value, and no more.

"If Miss Elizabeth does not know that Strawberry always opens its arms to receive her, she knows very little!" he said elegantly, "and I will order an express provision of sunshine. Lord! how it rained t'other day. I caught up two dogs, a couple of sheep, a pair of bantams, and a couple of goldfish—forgetting that the goldfish would not drown—and so away with us into the ark. My friend Mrs. Clive opened the skylight as it came down the Thames, and there found many of her Strawberry acquaintance! But you shall have sunshine, I vow! The deluge is overpast."

He was bowing at the door. He was gone.

As to Elizabeth—she was torn by alternate thankfulness and terror. Good God, had he guessed her intention? Would it figure in one of the brilliant letters handed about by the favored few that she had offered her hand and heart and he had escaped on the wings of a witticism. And supposing Providence had saved her—which appeared even beyond the practiced skill of Providence—what was she to do with her own madness that led her into such scrapes and then fled together with her courage—left her high and dry?

"I am an adventuress—I forgive the duke all his contempt. To think I could be so unwomanly—so mistook—so disgraceful. But 'tis my last adventure. Thank God, I know myself at last. To mend the children's stockings, to safeguard our means—that's me. I have done with the world."

But the world had not done with Elizabeth.

GOOD Morning!

You will find this a lively and colorful romance, spiced with melodious songs and some droll humor.

Novarro fans will love "In Gay Madrid!" The piece shows their brown eyed idol up to the best possible advantage. It permits him to sing—and Ramon CAN sing! He makes love—and with what joyous abandon! He fights a duel—wurra, wurra or the equivalent in Spanish, with which I am unfamiliar!—and the manner in which he says "Fader" when speaking to his papa, the Marques de Castelar, is well nigh irresistible. Yes, the Novarro fans should clap their hands and be glad over "In Gay Madrid."

A Gay Young Blade

The story's action starts in Madrid where Ramon is being so much TOO gay—witness his affair with the cabaret dancer—that his "Fader" sends him off to a school in Santiago. Here Ricardo—as he is known in the film—meets the sister of the youth who becomes his best friend. Though she is engaged to another she is not proof against the wiles of the loving, serenading, laughing, irrepressible young man from Madrid whose father is her father's best friend. True, she puts him in his place at the start of their acquaintance. She thinks he's conceited and tells him so. She doesn't approve of his morals—lack of them, rather—and leaves him not at all in the dark regarding her ideas on that score. A very frank young lady, whose directness is softened and sweetened by the comehitherliness [now THERE'S a word!] of her liquid glance. She scolds—and succumbs.

"Fader" comes to town—O, at a most unpropitious moment!—and arrangements are well under way for a marriage which shall unite the two proud old familes of Castelar and Rivas when, at the family dinner where those concerned sit so happily, a bomb—so to speak—is cast. Enter a faithful retainer stating that the former and discarded fiancé of the fair Carmina is without and would have words with Papa Rivas.

"But I am at dinner!" the host says freezingly.

The Matter Won't Wait.

He is, surely enough, at dinner, but the matter the ex-fiancé would discuss with him will not wait, it seems, until he is not at dinner. Papa Rivas excuses himself and stalks forth. Comes then the retainer and asks the prospective bridegroom to please step outside. Those left look mystified and find hunger deserting them.

Loud voices! "He lies!" one hears in the ringing voice of Ricardo . . . but, no, no, I mus' not tell you more!

Mr. Novarro is fortunate in his leading ladies and supporting cast. The latter features the inimitable Beryl Mercer, who played the old lady in "Seven Days' Leave," Nanci Price, who is the best "slavey" in the business, and Claude King and William V. Mong, both sterling actors.

Direction, sound, photography, sets and scenery please.

An hour spent watching "In Gay Madrid" will not be a wasted hour.

Critics Laud and Condemn "Lost Sheep"

Hot Controversy Helps the Box Office Receipts.

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK, June 7.—[Special.]—There is a play in this town, as I previously have written you, called "Lost Sheep."

It tells the story of a harmless little Methodist minister, (played by Ferdinand Gottschalk) who moves his family from one London suburb to another and who, by mistake, quarters them temporarily in a house that formerly had been run by a woman known as the duchess.

During the duchess' tenancy the house was one of red shades and rouged tenants, and most of the comedy disclosed by the play is a little laboriously builded on the mistakes of certain gay young men in the neighborhood who conclude, not unreasonably, that the place, having been reopened, either the duchess herself is again in trade or has sold out to a successor.

These gay young men call frequently over the phone to inquire the whereabouts of one Mabel, who apparently was immensely popular in her day. Or they come to the door in slightly bibulous state and seek to become chatty, not to say familiar, with the minister's wife (played by Cissy Loftus), in the belief that, while she is new to the neighborhood, her most natural desire will be to build up a following as large and informal as that commanded by her immediate predecessor.

The fact that the minister's wife, a kindly and a simple soul, has a habit of referring with maternal pride to her girls and their attractions, and the further fact that the girls themselves are naively curious and a little flattered by the apparent neighborliness of the strange young men, adds to the snickering in the audience and the success of the bolder scenes in the play.

Public Had Fair Warning.

The printed reviews of "Lost Sheep" were pretty generally depressing. That is, they gave neither aid nor comfort to the producers of the play and, most of them, frankly warned any prospective seat purchaser of the type of play he would be paying to see and, perhaps, asking his young and innocent family or playmates to join him in seeing.

As a result the first few days's business at the Selwyn theater, in which "Lost Sheep" is playing, was not promising. The janitors were all ready to dust off the shutters and summon Mr. Cain, the moving man.

Also there were some complaints made to the police, and to the drama editors. [illegible] Franklin Ford, who is president of an organization known as defenders of the truth, wrote letters saying that the play, he understood, ridiculed the clergy and was both salacious and damnable in content.

Man[illegible] Is "Called Down."

In answer to this attack the producer, a showman named George Choos, and the comedian, Jack Donohue, promptly replied in large advertisements that "Lost Sheep" did not ridicule the clergy; that it was not salacious; that it was not damnable; that Percy Hammond had written of it that, if he had a daughter, he would shift his parental responsibility to the play and let her and her boy friends learn at the matinées that there is something more in life than kissing; that Robert Benchly found its richest vein of humor contained in the conclusion of the Rev. Wampus that his troubles are due to the fact that he is a lowly Methodist minister in a high church community, and that others and equally moral young men of the press had been moved to great mirth and were not shocked. Immediately, as often happens, business began to pick up at the performance of "Lost Sheep."

At this point I enter the scene as an interested bystander. Having an open night and an open column on my hands, and being drawn into the theater sector in search of news and gossip, I stepped into the Selwyn theater to see what was happening. The theater was filled, the laughter fairly riotous, though rough, and the company was playing up to the applause with spirit.

The day following I printed a report commenting on this situation and calling attention again to the play's history and the fact that, so far as the local critics of plays are concerned, they certainly had tried to do their part in telling their readers exactly what to expect of this particular piece. The day after that I received, among others, this letter:

"Madison Avenue, New York City,
May 26.

"Dear Mr. Mantle:

Muster Roll of Plays Promised for New Season

Forecast of Stage Affairs for Next Half-Year.

By Charles Collins.

SEVEN theaters out of a possible sixteen are open in Chicago. Thirty-two theaters out of a possible ninety-odd are open in New York. These figures for the week-end may be taken to represent the status of the stage as a going concern at the start of the summer. The shrinkage in operation—56 per cent in Chicago; 65 per cent in New York—is enormous; but it represents nothing more sinister than the usual seasonal slump, which extends from Memorial day to Labor day.

There is, however, in Chicago an unusual vagueness about plans for next season. In years past the managers of our playhouses were generally able to name in June the title that would flare up in lights over their portals early in September. According to tradition most of them should be happily promising some notable hit of the last nine months on Broadway. But this June "Nothing to announce" is their slogan. There will be shows for Chicago, of course, and one optimist among the veterans of the box office has even gone so far as to assert that they will be plentiful. But there is a fog of uncertainty over the schedule.

This condition relates, of course, to the so-called "commercial" stage—which might better be called the "regular" or "old line" stage. But the "art theaters" [to use another popular label] are in a different category. They have definite ideas about what they are going to do and how they are going to do it.

The Theater Guild has outlined its program for next season at the Blackstone, opening in October, with some precision. The Dramatic League of Chicago has listed a dozen or more plays from which it will select six for representation at the Princess, starting in October. The Chicago Civic Shakespeare society will again lend its auspices to Fritz Leiber in twelve weeks of Shakespeare at the Civic, opening in November. Of this "art theater" group only the Goodman has made no announcement about the plays it will offer, and its recent change of administration—Hubert Osborne succeeding Thomas Wood Stevens, resigned—explains its silence.

Broadway Catalog.

In New York, however, the promises of new plays are numerous. They will increase rapidly, of course, as the summer weeks flit by. A survey of Broadway productions, pending or contemplated, at this week-end reveals a handful of titles for June and July and great clusters of them for August, September, and October. Here is a compilation of the data, which should be read in a "when, as, and if issued" frame of mind:

Opening in June:

"Artists and Models": So-called "Paris edition" of this series of 'revues, which is a revised version of the London musical comedy "Dear Love." Its entertainers will be Phil Baker, George Hassell, Vera Pearce, Harry Welch, Aileen Stanley, Halfred Young, Dolores De Monde, Wesley Pierce, Hazel Harris, and Rosemary Deeping. Its première is fixed for this week.

"The Song and Dance Man": George M. Cohan's revival of his old comedy.

"Find the Fox": A mystery play by Frank Martins.

"Mystery Moon": A musical comedy, with Frank Shannon, Frances Shelley, Franker Woods, Kitty Kelly, and Maude Brooks in the cast.

Opening in July:

Earl Carroll's "Vanities": Among the performers will be Jack Benny, Jimmy Savo, Patsy Kelly, Herbert

Appreciation of Music Is Reward of Earnestness

Less Personal Feeling, More Love of Art.

By Edward Moore.

ONE of the most pessimistic remarks yet recorded on the theory and practice of choral societies was printed in Vox Pop about ten days ago. Miss Helen Doman wrote to inquire whether there were any nonprofessional choirs or singing organizations in Chicago which a girl interested in music could join and profit thereby.

"I mean," she explained, "a society where all members attend rehearsals without being begged to come to them by the director; a society where the members can give a concert or play without making fools of themselves.

"I am anxious to join such a society, but as yet none have I found that are not a complete waste of time."

This is not entirely in a vein to promote serenity and good feeling among choristers. It would seem, however, to accord in part with the opinion of a choral conductor some time ago when he was in a less exalted mood. He said then that choral societies do not rehearse in order to give public performances. They give public performances in order to earn money enough to keep on rehearsing.

Earnestness Is Needed.

A certain degree of earnestness would seem to be advisable where music is concerned, a certain willingness to let music be the important thing and personal considerations less important. It applies to all organizations, all individuals, even to all listeners. In this connection William Lymon Phelps evolved some uncommonly helpful remarks on the subject of listening not long ago. They were printed in the Delineator.

Dr. Phelps is one of the best known men in the country in his own line. He is an educator, a professor of English literature at Yale. His great service to his classes, and so to the country, is the enthusiasm that he puts into his subject, an enthusiasm that frequently touches the imagination of those sitting under him. With him the reading of a book is an adventure, and he has devoted his life to encouraging like adventurings among others. There are those who disagree with some of his opinions, but no one, disagreeing or not, has ever approached him in the ability to make people like reading for its own sake.

Wherefore, music to him is an adventure, too. But to be an adventurer one must give something on his own account, not merely be carried along by the current. Unfortunately, his article is too long to be quoted completely, for it is all worth the reading.

Speaks to the Bored.

"I am writing this article exclusively for the unconverted," he says. "I am talking to men and boys who are bored by symphony concerts or who are afraid they will be bored. I am addressing those male members of the household who believe they are not musical. Why do they hate good music? The answer is simple: It is because they do not listen."

He tells of his own first symphony concert, one by Theodore Thomas, and how bored and unhappy he was. Looking about the audience he saw many other men likewise looking depressed.

"Continuing to look attentively at the faces of the audience," he goes on, "I observed here and there persons enjoying this occasion. They were obviously very happy. Now, they had paid no more for their seats than I had. They had paid a dollar and I had paid a dollar. Yet they were getting everything. I was getting nothing. I am a Yankee, and I like to get the worth of my money. I could not endure the idea that something splendid was going on and I was missing it. And I began to believe that it was not the fault of Beethoven and Wagner.

Acquired Liking for Music.

"Another concert and more boredom, though not so intense. Still others, and there began to be 'rifts in the clouds, mountains in the fog, a suggestion of something splendid.' After repeated listenings I reached the state where I would rather hear a competent orchestra play Beethoven and Wagner than hear anything else.

"And I reached this state of bliss not by study, not by reading books, but simply listening—listening with all my might. . . .

"Suppose a business man receives a visitor in whose judgment he has confidence. The visitor sets forth a scheme by which the business man will make a million dollars in three months. While this scheme is being explained, the business man listens. He gives the matter his entire attention. He is not absentminded. He is not thinking of women, or golf, or of any other matters. He gives the visitor his attention because there is 'money in it.'

"Well, that is the way a man should listen to the music of Beethoven and Wagner. He should concentrate his entire listening power. Listening in that way is not passive, it is active. It is the outpouring of the energy of the mind. I believe that any one who is not deaf can become a lover of music simply by listening. The music itself will do the rest. But one must listen, listen as though it were the only means of salvation."

How to Reach Ravinia.

On behalf of those who would listen to opera there is an annual duty and privilege of publishing something about how to reach Ravinia. This morning would seem to be the time for that explanation.

Ravinia is located twenty-one miles north of Chicago on the Chicago and North Western railway and the North Shore line. It is likewise a paradise for motorists, being reached either by

Sheridan road or Green Bay road. The Green Bay road has been vastly improved during the year and is now a perfect boulevard both to the north and south of Ravinia. Sheridan road is always in perfect condition, and this is the first time that both roads have measured up to motoristic standards. For the benefit of motorists the Ravinia management maintains two extensive parking spaces, situated at both the Sheridan road and the Green Bay road entrances to the grounds. These will accommodate 1,000 cars.

Those who prefer to make the trip to Ravinia by train will find that the Chicago and North Western railway and the North Shore line have arranged their schedules in such a way that they will meet every demand of Ravinia patrons. The Chicago and North Western railway will operate a regular schedule of suburban trains daily and Sunday at frequent intervals, and in addition to these regular trains there will be a Ravinia opera special which will leave from the North Western terminal at Madison and Canal streets at 7:25 p. m., Chicago daylight saving time, and will arrive at Ravinia at 8:12 p. m. This train will leave Ravinia immediately after the performance and will make a rapid run back to Chicago.

The North Shore line offers wide choice of trains throughout the day, leaving Adams and Wabash avenues every fifteen minutes. In addition there will be an opera special starting at Woodlawn, leaving the Dorchester avenue station at 6:48 p. m., daylight saving time, and stopping as follows: 63d and University, 6:49 p. m.; 63d and Cottage Grove, 6:50 p. m.; 63d and South Park, 6:51 p. m.; 43d street, 7 p. m.; Roosevelt road, 7:11 p. m.; Adams and Wabash, 7:15 p. m.; Madison and Wabash, 7:16 p. m.; Randolph and Wabash, 7:17 p. m.; Clark and Lake, 7:18 p. m.; Grand avenue, 7:19 p. m.; Belmont avenue, 7:30 p. m.; Wilson avenue, 7:35 p. m.; Howard street, 7:42 p. m.; Church street, Evanston, 7:47 p. m.; Central street, Evanston, 7:50 p. m. It arrives at Ravinia at 8:05 p. m. This special leaves Ravinia in two sections, the first of which makes the trip to Chicago without stopping until Howard street is reached. The second section makes the stops at the suburbs between Ravinia and Evanston inclusive.

Transportation Cost Is Low.

The cost of reaching Ravinia has been reduced to a minimum. The Chicago and North Western railway has instituted a special round trip excursion rate which will be good for one day only. These tickets sell for $1 the round trip. The North Shore line has put into effect an excursion rate which includes the general admission ticket to Ravinia. This combination, good for one day, sells for $2.25. Those who have purchased Ravinia coupon admission books may turn in a coupon at the value of $1.25, thus making the round trip fare $1.

Commutation rates are much lower than those given on the one day tickets. For example, one can purchase from the Chicago and North Western a twenty-five ride bearer ticket for $8.06, which makes the cost of each ride something less than 33 cents. A ten ride bearer book sells for $3.83. A twenty-five ride bearer ticket may be had from the North Shore line for $9. This road likewise offers a ten ride bearer book at $4.16.

The general admission at the gate is $1.25, but coupon books are sold at $22 for twenty admissions, which reduces the admission to $1.10. The reserved seat prices for the opening night, according to location, will be $4.50 and $3.50. For all other opera nights, except closing night, the prices will be $1.50, $2, $2.50, $3, and $3.50. For the regular concerts on Sunday afternoons and the children's concerts on Thursday afternoons there is no charge for reserved seats. Children, 12 years of age and under, are admitted free to the children's concerts.

Ravinia Box Office Open Soon.

The box office at Ravinia will open for the sale of tickets on Saturday morning, June 14, at 10 o'clock. Mail orders will be received up to the morning of June 13 by the Ravinia company, 36 South State street, Chicago. It is necessary to advise the public that for the opening performances of the season, Saturday night, June 21, and Sunday night, June 22, the subscribers to the guarantee fund have the first call for tickets, and until these have been served it is impossible to determine what seats will be available for general use. If mail orders cannot be filled the money will be refunded.

A special telephone line from Chicago, Hollycourt 2000, provides telephone service for patrons ordering seats from Chicago, without toll charge. It will be available with the opening of the box office on June 14. Residents of the north shore towns, Evanston to Waukegan, will call Highland Park 2727. Seats reserved by telephone must be taken up by 11 o'clock the following morning, or check sent so as to reach the box office at that time, and tickets will be mailed or held as may be requested. If reservations are made by telephone on the day of the performance, tickets must be paid for at the box office before 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Money can be telegraphed by Western Union, addressed to the Ravinia company, Highland Park, Ill.

A service charge system has been inaugurated whereby patrons desiring to reserve tickets in advance and to have them held until called for may be granted this accommodation on the payment of a fee of $20 per annum. There can be no cancellations or exchanges, nor may patrons enjoying this privilege transfer their rights under this system for the use of others. Violation of these conditions or failure to pay for seats thus ordered will be regarded as a notice to discontinue the service and the service charge will be forfeited. It should be understood that this is a charge made for the service rendered, and the $20 is not returnable.

This service fee may be paid at the Ravinia box office on or after Saturday, June 14, or before that date addressed to the Ravinia company, 36 South State street, Chicago.

Concerts for School Children.

"My dear Mr. Moore: Would you be good enough to give space in your publication to the following information regarding the new working agreement between the Chicago schools and the young people's concerts of the Chicago Symphony orchestra?

"Last season, the music department of the Chicago school system outlined with Dr. Frederick Stock a four year course of young people's concerts to follow studies in music appreciation given in the city schools. Further steps have been taken to develop this course and bring the symphony orchestra in still closer contact with the music of the Chicago schools.

"During the coming 1930-'31 season twelve concerts will again be given in two series, A and B. This year, series A concerts will be prepared especially for the elementary schools, while series B will be reserved for senior and junior high school audiences. Special program notes for each of these groups are in preparation, and through the coöperation of the schools will be placed in the hands of each concert attendant in advance of every program.

"Through a series of conferences between Charles H. Hamill [president of the Orchestral association], William J. Bogan [superintendent of schools], Dr. Stock, and the writer, it has been arranged that the entire management of the subscription and ticket sale for both groups of young people's concerts will be taken over by the superintendent's office and placed in the hands of a special committee, headed by Hobart Sommers, principal of the Chase school. It is also planned to have a symphony concert chairman in each of the schools of the city, which will give every interested student an opportunity of easily obtaining tickets for these concerts.

"Tickets will be sold only for the entire series course of six concerts. These have been priced at an exceptionally low figure through the generosity of the Orchestral association. Series tickets, which include admission to all six concerts, may be had at four prices, viz: 90 cents, $1.50, $2.10, and $3, according to the location of desired seats. Thus, a season of the Chicago Symphony orchestra has been placed within the reach of every school student in the city of Chicago. Opportunity will also be given to all private and parochial schools to obtain tickets up to the capacity of Orchestra hall.

"Concerts of series A for the children of elementary school age will be given the first Thursday afternoon of the months of November, December, January, February, March, and April. Concerts of series B for the senior and junior high schools will be presented the third Thursdays of those months. Concerts will begin promptly at 3:45 p. m.

"Many interesting features are planned for next year's concerts, with exceptional programs being prepared by Dr. Stock. At each concert a chorus or a glee club from the Chicago schools will participate in a special vocal section to be a part of every program. Other novelties are in preparation, which will make the young people's concerts one of the high lights of the season of the Chicago Symphony orchestra. Further information regarding these concerts may be obtained from Mr. Sommers, at the music department of the board of education. Reservations of seat locations will be accepted after Monday, June 9.

"Yours very truly,
"J. LEWIS BROWNE,
"Director of Music."

Last Week of Light Opera.

The season of light opera at the Civic theater sponsored by the Chicago Civic Opera company goes into its last week tomorrow with performances of three works from the season's répertoire. "The Bohemian Girl" will be sung Monday, Tuesday, and Saturday evenings and Saturday matinée with the original cast, Margery Maxwell singing the rôle of Arline and Herbert Gould that of Devilshoof on Monday and Saturday evenings. Lois Johnston and Bertram Peacock have the rôles on Tuesday evening and Saturday matinée. The other assignments in all four performances include Lorna Doone Jackson as the gypsy queen, Charles Kullman as Thaddeus, Mark Daniels as Count Arnheim, and Giuseppe Cavadore as Florestein.

Wednesday and Thursday evenings "The Gondoliers" will be sung, with Hilda Burke as Gianetta on Wednesday and Lois Johnston in the same rôle on Thursday. Margery Maxwell as Casilda, Lorna Doone Jackson as Tessa, Constance Eberhart as the duchess of Plaza Toro, Charles Kullman and Bertram Peacock as the two gondoliers, Marco and Giuseppe; Barre Hills as Luiz, Mark Daniels as the grand inquisitor, and William Scholtz as the duke of Plaza Toro. One performance of "The Yeomen of the Guard," with Burke, Jackson, Eberhart, Kullman, Peacock, Daniels, Gould, and Hill, is scheduled for Friday evening.

The light opera season, which opened in April, has scored a decided artistic success. Most popular of all works from the box office standpoint has been "The Bohemian Girl," which did capacity business for nearly every performance. The other works were received enthusiastically, but did not score so heavily with the public as did the old Balfe opera.

The chorus of young Chicago voices has been an unqualified pleasure. At the outset the direction of the company decided it would be better to use untrained youngsters with fine voices rather than rely on a stage-wise chorus with lesser vocal equipment. The argument advanced was that young singers with the intelligence to "make the grade" musically and satisfy the difficult standards set up for selection of the chorus would quickly become a routined group who would be available for future work in light and grand opera. All who saw the works from week to week marked the progress of these young people. They were good on the opening night despite the fact that all but two of them were making their first appearances on any stage. By the end of the season they were as successful in the dramatic phases of the performance as any group with much wider experience, and vocally they were all that could be asked in grand or light opera.

The training of this chorus should in itself more than repay the time, effort, and money spent.

Haydn Music at Goodman.

"An Evening with Papa Haydn" at the Goodman theater next Thursday and Saturday nights is not only an interesting experiment in itself but the forerunner of more of the same kind next season. Andre Skalski and his orchestra have put it into being, and as the title would seem to indicate, the program is all by Haydn.

The "Farewell Symphony" is first on the program, that work whose final movement has incidents wherein the players, one by one, finish playing, blow out their lights, and leave the stage. It was a plot contrived by Haydn when his orchestra was threatened with dismissal, and it led to a reinstatement. In this performance the orchestra will wear costumes of the 18th century period.

This will be followed by two vocal ensembles, "Harmonious Wedlock" and "Eloquence," to be done by seventeen Chicago singers. In detail, they are Mildred Boberg, Marie Bronarzyk, Jane La Boda, and Berenice Taylor, sopranos; Hilda Bryant, Ruth Heizer, Anne Post, and Esther Rehberg, contraltos; Pedro Espino, Paul Harman, Frederick K. Mueller, and Terry Rivett, tenors; Leslie Arnold, Kenneth Dunnick, Jack Homier, Charles L. Hutzler, and George Weber, basses.

St. Olaf's Choir Here.

St. Olaf's choir of Northfield, Minn., directed by Dr. F. Melius Christiansen, who is doing his bit and more than his bit to put choral singing on the map again, will be at Orchestra hall tomorrow night. They are on their way to Europe, seeking with more than ordinary reason to show some of the Scandinavian and German cities what is being done chorally in this country.

They will be guests tomorrow night of another fine singing organization, the Chicago A Cappella choir whose director is Noble Cain. A special concert in their honor will be staged solely for the Minnesotans, in Orchestra hall, just after their own program. No word as to details of their program, by the way, has as yet been received, but presumably it will consist, as in the past, of fine old religious works.

A BROADWAY MOTH

MURIEL OWEN.

"SISTERS OF THE CHORUS," which continues to run at the Apollo, is a play about chorus girls when they are naughty as well as when they are nice. The role of a fledgling dancer, who has to be protected from the dangers of the Broadway life, is demurely acted by Miss Owen. She is the plot of the piece.

Talkies a Big Moral Factor? Pettey Smiles

List Giving Spicy Themes Proves His Point.

By Tom Pettey.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK, June 7.—[Special.]—There has been considerable discussion of late concerning the talkies as a moral factor in this wicked but highly interesting age. There are those who see the reformation of the world as the ultimate accomplishment of the shadows that talk and sing.

Glowing tributes have also been paid to the talkies as a master teacher of the young. All of this is highly interesting to folks who go around peering into crystal globes and, no doubt, is of pecuniary importance to those men of vision who plan and plot and pay for our screen "epics." But before we reform the world we first must take a fleeting look at the morals of that great educator, Mr. Talkie.

To one who goes to the movies with any degree of regularity it must be apparent that Mr. Talkie, so far as the censors will permit, thumbs his nose at the code of morals laid down for him by the far seeing and all important Mr. Will H. Hays. The talkies of today trade on sex, crime, booze and lurid high society cutups for a living just as do most of the other major industries. But the talkies always sugarcoats its pills.

These Innocent Talkies!

Right now in this city we have films portraying: A drunk in the wrong house poking sarcastic fun at a lot of innocent old nitwits.

A lady who quits her cheating husband to go in for cheating in a wholesale manner and who does heavy drinking in a fashion that does not tend to convince the audience that all alcohol is poison.

An equally beautiful lady of equally easy virtue who decides to be a good girl soon after she meets an attractive man with several million dollars. She eventually has to jump into the ocean to wash her sins away, but she gets her man.

A short feature that holds the audience to its collective chairs as if they [the chairs] were filled with glue. The dancing of the buxom lassie in the picture and a couple of songs she sings raises the temperature of the house to summer heat.

A picture in which a man kills another and then takes his place by fraud in the home and affections of the bereaved mother. All is made well by the injection of scriptural quotations from the mouth of a blacksmith, sheriff, preacher.

Florodora Girl Returns.

The Florodora Girl has made the screen at last and, in a way, she is a curiosity. New Yorkers are seeing her at the Capitol theater amid gasps and "lookits," for the queen of the horseless carriage days is playing in a costume production that has leg-o-mutton sleeves, full length bathing suits, bustles, hansome cabs, and bicycles built for two. Marion Davies, who owns the biggest beach bungalow in the Hollywood vicinity, plays the leading rôle in a very, very thin plot, but if you want a good laugh at the girls of yesterday see "The Florodora Girl."

There is another mystery play in town. They call this one "Midnight Mystery" over at the Globe. Betty Compson, Lowell Sherman, and Hugh Trevor have the leading rôles. It is another one of those jigsaw puzzles in which the bits fit nicely. Almost any one can guess the murderer ten minutes after the crime, which makes it a standard thriller.

Premier Mussolini and babe Ruth are fighting for honors this week at the News Reel theater. Mussolini is shown reviewing his forces and speaking as only Mussolini can speak. Babe Ruth tells a story and it is a fairly good one.

The Notre Dame football team is shown in spring practice with their coach, Kunte Rockne, who appears to have recovered from his long illness. Then George W. Wickersham gets away from prohibition to talk about the world court and gives every one an opportunity to snooze a bit. All in all, the News Reel is a swell place to pass a half hour.

News of Film Luminaries.

This week's travelogue includes a lot of popular names. Nancy Carroll and her husband, Jack Kirkland, somewhat frightened by their recent escape from that old debbill sea, are back in town. Nancy will return in a few days to her work in "Laughter."

Claire Luce left this week for Fox Movietone lots in Hollywood. Mary Lewis, whose first talkie, "The Siren Song," soon is to be filmed, is on her way to California and the Pathé studios.

Julian Johnson has completed the cutting of 100,000 feet of "With Byrd at the South Pole" and will not be here when the flying explorer returns from his present base in Panama. He returned to Hollywood a couple of days ago.

Lloyd Corrigan, one of the latest recruits in the director's field, is here on a holiday. Hope Hampton, who goes in for the opera now instead of the movies, will sail next week for France.

Jack Buchanan spent one night in town and left for a business trip to London. Jack has just completed a talkie for Paramount entitled "Monte Carlo."

More about Schnectady and the big magic house next week.

Dramatic League

THEATERGOERS returning to Chicago from London in recent months have been warm in praise of a play called "The Last Enemy," shown there through a long run. The play was some time ago taken on option for the Dramatic League of Chicago by George McLellan, who represents the league in London. A copy of the manuscript was sent to the organization's play reading committee, which passed favorably on the piece, with the result that Mr. McLellan was instructed to close his option.

This has been done; and "The Last Enemy" is now the property of the Dramatic League of Chicago. The likelihood is that it will first be acted in this country in either Philadelphia or Boston, under the auspices of the Professional Players, an organization affiliated with the Chicago venture, although its sponsors steadfastly refuse to change their name from Professional Players to Dramatic League.

The name of the author of "The Last Enemy," Frank Harvey, is one not well known to present day playgoers in the United States, although it is what may be regarded as staple in the British isles, where he has been writing plays and having them staged through many years. However, at least one of his early plays caused American theatergoers to know his name. That was called "Woman Against Woman," and was so popular that it was acted the length and breadth of the United States for not fewer than six seasons. It afterward served for many years as sure fire with the weekly change stock companies of the time. It was also popular in London and the provinces, where, as a matter of fact, it is still "live" entertainment.

Playgoers in the "provinces" of Britain have a famous loyalty for certain plays, and stand by them through the decades. Touring there in the season now ending have been "Woman Against Woman," "The Belle of New York," "Charley's Aunt," "When Knights Were Bold," and "The Private Secretary." The youngest of these, "When Knights Were Bold," was popular fare in this country in 1907-'08.

"Hell's Angels" in Spectacular First Showing

Hollywood Planes Hover Over Crowds.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—Hollywood's Arabian night, the last of the thousand and one nights that it took to make "Hell's Angels" and get it to the palpitating public, is now over, and what a night it was! Never since the days of Bagdad was there such a grand vizier as Sid Grauman, who staged the affair at the Hollywood Chinese theater which he built and who helped Howard Hughes, the film's producer, put his picture on with a bang.

Hollywood is really a compact town, with things fairly close together on the Main stem, and this is what makes such celebrations as that of this special opening possible. Soon after 6 in the evening the boulevard was thronged with folks getting points of vantage to see the big doings. Huge sun arcs lined the curbs for several blocks; large cardboard airplanes were suspended over the street, banners fluttered from every building and everything was all set.

A Sky Carnival.

As dusk fell the mountain tops back of the Chinese theater were lighted up with huge bonfires. Eager crowds scaled the heights to get a close-up of parachute jumpers who descended from planes flying through the rays of light which were shot into the sky from the fires and were augmented by rainbow lights directed on the planes by the arcs from the boulevard.

Extra police reserves, Boy Scouts, a hundred marines and American Legion squads all worked valiantly to keep the overflow crowds out of narrow traffic lanes needed to allow the limousines of the audience to pass up the streets. Elsewhere the crowd thronged from curb to curb.

The stunting planes laid smoke screens over the heads of the people. Millions of white moths, attracted by the lights, gave the effect of flowers scattered from the planes. It was 10:45 p. m. before the picture was started, after a most elaborate prologue of dancers, clowns, acrobats, trained animals, singers, and whatnot which marked the return to the prologue business which has been thought of as passé since the first coming of sound pictures.

Sensational Air Scenes.

The showing of "Hell's Angels" proved a sensation, due mainly to the remarkable air scenes photographed by Hughes at an expense that no one would ever again care to underwrite. Probably no one will ever equal these air scenes. But the story they illustrate unfortunately must have partly fallen on the cutting room floor, for by the time the heroine, Jean Harlow (another cute Chicago divorcée who has made the grade in films), goes wrong, nobody cares.

There is excellent acting by Ben Lyon and Jimmie Hall, but the story is not built to endure terrific jolts and brutalities injected into it. Men throw their lives away jumping out of a Zeppelin to lighten its load; a man shoots his brother in the back, and other incidents jolt one's sensibilities without really achieving dramatic sympathy at any point.

News of Films and Players.

Winfield Sheehan, in a public address here, asserted that one reason why the Fox Film company, of which he is head, makes money and popular pictures, is because it has a special staff which does nothing but watch page one of the big American newspapers for plot suggestions. Mr. Sheehan said this staff makes a daily digest of interesting and novel items from the newspapers and that copies of its digest are furnished to the film company executives, directors and story writers.

Muster Roll of Plays Promised for New Season

Forecast of Stage Affairs for Next Half-Year.

By Charles Collins.

Williams, Harry Stockwell, Joe Penner, and the Condos Brothers.

"Jungle Love": A play by Fred Herendeen, with India as its locale. Agnes Ayres, Herbert Rawlinson, Nina Bunyea, and Boyd Davis will be in it.

Opening in August:

A play adapted from the Hungarian by the Hattons, to be staged by David Belasco, with Lynne Overman as star.

"Hello, Paris": The musical comedy which just ended an engagement in Chicago with "Chic" Sale as its star.

"Corned Beef and Roses": An intimate revue, with Fannie Brice as its star.

New "Little Show."

The second "Little Show": A successor to the entertainment now at the Selwyn of Chicago, with these players among others: Al Trahan, Ruth Tester, Carl Randall, Joey Ray, Davey Jones, and Helen Gray.

"Suspense": A war play from London [staged there April 8] with the English cast.

Opening in September:

"Mr. Gilhooley": A dramatization of Liam O'Flaherty's novel, to be staged by Jed Harris, with a cast including Helen Hayes, Arthur Sinclair, Walter Connolly, and Ralph Cullinan. [The latter is the author of "Loggerheads," staged at the Goodman theater not long ago by Whitford Kane.]

"The Bird of Paradise": A musical version of Richard Walton Tully's play, highly popular some fifteen years ago, with a score by Rudolf Friml.

"Nina Rosa": The operetta which ran for sixteen weeks in Chicago. Ethelind Terry will be the prima donna, in place of Berna Dean.

"Canaries Sometimes Sing": A comedy by Frederick Lonsdale, with Athole Stewart in the leading rôle.

"High C": A play by Gladys Unger, with Leyla Georgie featured.

"One, Two, Three": A comedy from the Hungarian of Franz Molnar, with Arthur Byron in the leading rôle.

"Blackbirds of 1930": Second edition of the Negro revue, with Miller and Lyles as principal entertainers.

"Borned in Texas": A play by Lynn Riggs, with Walter Huston featured.

"Tom, Dick, and Harry": A musical comedy under Ziegfeld's auspices, with a score by Vincent Youmans. The leading players will be Marilyn Miller, Fred and Adele Astaire, and Eddie Foy Jr.

Max Pallenberg: One of the leading actors of Berlin, with his wife, Fritzi Massary, in repertory.

"Who Are You?": A play by Franklin Russell.

"Another Language": A comedy by Rose Franken.

"The Cult": A play by Barry Conners.

"A Roamin' Gentleman": A musical comedy by Martin Brown, with Hal Skelly featured.

"Reunion": A play by S. K. Lauren.

Opening in October:

"Solid South": The play in which Richard Bennett is now appearing at the Harris theater of Chicago.

"Elizabeth the Queen": A production by the Theater Guild of Maxwell Anderson's stage version of the love affair between Queen Elizabeth and the Earl of Essex. Alfred Lunt and Lynne Fontanne will have the leading rôles. [It is likely that this première will take place in Chicago instead of New York.]

"The Red General": A play about revolutionary Russia by Hellmuth Unger, the German dramatist, who wrote "Kolpak Must Dance," recently staged at the Goodman theater here.

For Miss Barrymore.

"Scarlet Sister Mary": The long-expected dramatization of Julia Peterkin's novel, with Ethel Barrymore as star.

"Frankenstein": A play based on Mary Shelley's famous story, with Lyn Harding as star. It will be imported from London, where it was staged last February.

"Marius": A play from the French of Marcel Pagnol, author of "Topaze," which was an international hit of the past season.

"The Big Charade": A musical comedy, for which Irving Berlin will probably supply the score.

An unnamed play by William Bolitho, the Englishman of letters, with Colvin Clive as star.

"The New Yorker": A revue, announced as a Broadway summer show, but postponed. Clayton, Jackson, and Durante, and Frances Williams will be in it, among others.

"Princess Charming": A musical comedy based on the Hungarian play called "Alexandra," with a score by Albert Szirmai, which was staged in London in 1927. Its cast will include Victor Moore, Daniella Bregis, and Bartlett Simmons.

"Ziegfeld Follies": A revival of the revues that glorified the American girl.

Opening in November:

"The Devil's Moon": A play by William Ford Manley, with Margaret Perry in the leading rôle. She is the young actress who played in "Strictly Dishonorable" through most of its run here.

"The Dreyfus Affair": A drama from the German of Rehfisch and Herzog, adapted by William Bolitho.

"Rome Haul": A play by Frank Elser, from the novel of the same title, dealing with life along the Erie canal in the 1840s.

We'll See It First.

"Dr. Harmer's Holiday": A new play by Sir Arthur Wing Pinero. Chicago will have an earlier view of it, for the piece will serve the Dramatic league as its first offering of the new season.

All of which sounds like an interesting prospectus for the new season. The list will be expanded, of course, when the game of follow-the-leader begins; and it is subject to change at any minute, for the promises of theatrical managers are like those of politicians. But as a bird's-eye view of the future of the stage for the next six months or so, it will serve.

OF THE DEEP SOUTH

ELIZABETH PATTERSON.

SHE doesn't look like this on the stage in "Solid South," at the Harris theater, in support of Richard Bennett. There she is a fading spinster of acid temperament—Aunt Geneva, who supports the family by working in the library, and who feels insulted when a "damned Yankee" asks her for a copy of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Miss Patterson has contributed many fine character studies to the American stage; and she has also acted in many motion pictures.

"Lost Sheep" Praised and Condemned by N. Y. Critics

By Burns Mantle.

Sheep' in today's news, I saw it the other night and not being able to see anything in it but dirt, without wit, I decided to leave when the second act was over. Leaving the balcony (where there was absolutely no high blood pressure laughing) I had the company of about fifteen others in the march down. I may add I felt much decenter (if there is such a word) in their company. Wishing you the best, I am, K. THELAN."

Now, then, what interests me is this: Why did Miss Thelan (the handwriting is feminine) go to see "Lost Sheep" in the first place? Why do people go see the play they have been warned against after the warning? Even though that warning take the negative form of being no more than a description of the play?

Having been told its character and every review of "Lost Sheep" that I read stressed the fact that it was a purely artificial comedy that made bold fun of an obviously implausible situation, that of a minister's family innocently thrust into an alleged haunt of sin and there mistaken for sinners—having been told that this was the kind of play "Lost Sheep" is, why did the Miss Thelans promptly rally to it, knowing as they did that it was the kind of play which they most heartily dissaprove?

Anxious to Be Shocked.

They cannot dodge the question, as so many try to do, by saying "O, these critics! They make me tired!" or, "I never go by what the critics say. Really, they're awful. Either they're over-praising something or they're roasting it!" Because, whatever your opinion may be of the judgment of the men or women who write the play reviews in your town and in your favorite newspapers, you must admit that they do try to tell you at least what character of play it is they have seen first, what type of people figure in it and the general nature of the story the play tells.

If you say, "O, I never read the newspapers. Haven't time," or "Once I went to a show a critic liked and, believe me, once was enough!" I will say that you have no case against either theater or newspaper when you are cheated or when you are disgusted with what you buy in the theater.

It is an old problem. I don't suppose it ever will be settled. There will always be play reviewers with whom you do not agree. And always plays that critics like that give others severely localized pains.

But whenever and wherever I meet the K. Thelans, and whenever they say, "Really, I think it's terrible the plays they are producing these days. We went the other night and walked out after the second act," I make it a rule to be as snippy as possible by demanding to know why they went in the first place. And if they tell me they went because they did not know what they were going to see, I ask them why would they pay six or eight or ten dollars for anything else without knowing something about what it was they were buying? And if they answer that one by saying, "O, well——" I quickly shrug my shoulders as one who would say, "O, well, what's the use!"

Must Prove He Was Born.

Meantime I am trying to find some one who has known me twenty years and will swear to it. It is going to run into money if I have to go back to a couple of old home towns and bring on one or more members of the older generation to take oath that I am I. I have a couple of comparatively old friends around here, but I don't like to ask them to lie.

It seems there are two things that you have to produce before you can leave the country: A certificate proving that you were born and a receipt showing that you have paid your income taxes. I can take care of the tax installments all right, though it will take practically all I had saved to tip the stewards.

As for lectures. It seems some one has written the Drama league demanding to know whether or not I am going to lecture on this proposed trip. There need be no alarm on that score. I am not.

I may have a few lectures put on phonograph records so that any member of our party who wants to spend a nice quiet evening in his or her cabin considering the drama in its finer and higher phases can do so. At least it can be done if the purser or the barber or whoever it is has charge of the ship's phonograph will move it into the designated cabin. I suspect the rest of us will be studying art in the lounge.

Dick Bennett Tells All

HAPPY in the idea that "Solid South" is a hit, Richard Bennett gives out the following shirt sleeves interview with himself:

"This play is going to create some commotion. It's going to stir up a hornets' nest, 'cause it sure shows up some of those old southern majors, colonels, or what have you, for a lot of lazy, good for nothing, begging old hypocrites, and boy! how it smashes into that revered tradition about protecting womenfolk. And it gets in a few hot shots at prohibition, prohibitionists, college youths, and political fanaticism.

"I just happened to think it's nine and thirty years this month since I started acting. Yes, sir, it was on May 10, 1891, that I gave one gosh-awful performance as Tombstone Jake in 'The Limited Mail' in Chicago.

"Money? I have no money. I have earned from $18 a week to $6.000 a week [with 'Damaged Goods'], but I have spent it all in the theater.

"Fame? I have none. All I have is ambition. Don't laugh. I am as stage struck as I ever was. I love to act, and I feel I am living at a great time—a time that marks the decadence of talking pictures and the time of the renaissance of the theater and the ambitious actor back into his own.

"My daughters? No, I am not proud of them, but I am satisfied with them, all three of them—Joan, Barbara, and Constance. They are all doing well out in Hollywood. They had stage discipline drilled into them from the time they were born, and between my efforts to see that they could earn their own living and their mother's efforts to put them into society they've turned out pretty darn well.

"Now what do you want to talk about? Maude Adams? There was a great woman, you know. Or do you know? The longer I played with her the less I knew of her. She was Trilby and Charles Frohman was, without knowing it, Svengali. C. F. was like Napoleon, only without the arrogance of the emperor."

Snapshots of Chicago Stage at Season's End

THEY tell this about Sonia Karlov, the pretty blonde actress who plays the chaste dancer in "Sisters of the Chorus," at the Apollo:

She was a chorus girl in the "Ziegfeld Follies" about four years ago, and her name was Alma Jeanne Williams. She went to Hollywood to make her fortune, and changed her name to Sonia Karlov, adding the title of "countess" to impress the Californians. She told the picture-producers that she was a member of the Danish nobility, and used a Scandinavian accent to prove it. So she was immediately signed up by Cecil De Mille.

One day a DeMille executive took her to a football game, and spent two hours explaining to her the technical details of this popular American pastime. With two minutes to play, the score was tied, and in the excitement of the battle Countess Sonia forgot her Danish origin. She arose in her seat, waving the flag for old U. S. C., and shrieking at her favorite half back: "Hit that line, big boy, and hit it hard!"

So Mr. DeMille, his feelings slightly hurt, sent her back to New York. But they also say that he paid her a handsome sum of money for his breach of contract.

One of the plays staged by the Dramatic League of Chicago last fall—"The First Mrs. Fraser"—is appearing on nearly every dramatic critic's list of "ten best plays." But the management of the league believes that its "Thunder in the Air" also rates position on these lists, and places it in nomination. Says its spokesman: "The Dramatic league insists that 'Thunder in the Air,' although not a box office success, was the finest play given in any theater of Chicago or London in the season of 1929-'30."

The Heigh Ho club, composed of young Chicagoans who have had stage experience, either amateur or semi-professional, will make its debut at the Goodman theater tomorrow night. It will present a revue of the "Little Show" type, containing comedy skits, musical numbers, and dances. The production will be given under the direction of Edgar J. Schooley. Among the participants in the program will be: Virginia Hall, Benny Watson, Fred Von Ammon, Dorothy Reiner, Nancy Poole, Ruth Norwood, Virginia Melody, Jean Adams, Walter Johnson, Orvis Hinkle, Jack Stambaugh, Paul Faust, Evelyn Duerler, Everett W. Walker, Marguerite Fernhotz, and Louise Garrett.

John A. Willarde, leading man with the Dudley Players for the last three seasons, has replaced Stanly Ridges in "Nancy's Private Affair," at the Playhouse. His career is extensive. He was associated with B. Iden Payne and William Poel [director of the Elizabethan Stage society of England] in a season of Shakespearean repertory. He toured the country for thirty weeks with "The Bat." He was with Mrs. Fiske in "Helena's Boys" on tour and in New York. He played with Madge Kennedy, Sidney Blackmer, and Tom Powers in "Love in a Mist"—four months at the Gaiety theater, New York. In Mrs. Insull's repertory season at the Studebaker two years ago he played Brian Strange in "Mr. Pim Passes By." He has played leads in "Three Wise Fools," "Honor Be Damned," "Rain," "Seventh Heaven," "The Monster," "The Show Off," "My Son," "Laff That Off," "The Last of Mrs. Cheney," "The Springboard," "39 East," "Quarantine," "Mrs. Dane's Defense," "Fair and Warmer," and many other plays in "stock" in Buffalo, Detroit, Pittsburgh, and Chicago.

Charlotte Greenwood is in the throes of authorship. The star of "Mebbe" at the Studebaker is devoting every spare moment between performances writing a comedy, which she is designing as a vehicle for herself. The play, as yet unnamed, will contain three songs, for which Miss Greenwood is writing the lyrics, and her husband, Martin Broones, head of the Metro-Goldwyn studio in Hollywood, the melodies. They collaborated on "Campus Capers," one of the entr'acte numbers at the Studebaker.

Vox Playgoer

To the Dramatic Editor:

CHICAGO, June 3.—With all this talk of "saving" the drama, the stage, the Goodman theater; it might interest you to know what we are attempting after a four year survey and experiment.

We have found out that nothing ever did or ever will come out of that mythical thing called "Bohemia." The alley theaters deal only in smut except when they pirate some one's works. "Bohemia" we have found out to be nothing but a racket and run by a bunch of psychopaths.

Our big asset—as yet undeveloped—are the high schools, the colleges, the commercial and industrial houses and the fraternal and social organizations that "stage shows" once or more each year.

To get a little sanity in the "little theater" movement, the following organizations have banded together and formed the Stylus club, one of the objects of the club being to foster the little theater by encouraging unknown authors and nonprofessional actors by given both a chance to be heard and seen.

The organizations of which the Stylus club is an outgrowth are: The Illinois Philosophical league, Midwest Folklore league, Inter Fraternity Players, Nonprofessional Drama league, Industrial Arts society, Pottery and Ceramic Designers guild, Landscape Art guild, Sane Dress league, House Furnishing Design guild, Mural Painters and Interior Designers guild, Chicago Veterans council, Wenchetaunquah Art colony, Artistic Models and Mannequins society, and others.

The attitude of all these affiliated societies can be seen in the decorations selected for their theater at 1358 North Clark street.

Besides forming the Stylus club, these associations have formed a society incorporated under the name of The Civic Arts Society of Chicago. This latter society holds the lease and allots the nights each society affiliated may use the theater or any of the other rooms in the building.

JOHN J. RILEY,
President, Stylus club.

The Goodman Argument

[The following letter, sent to a member of the Art institute's committee on the Goodman theater, was released for publication by its writer.]

CHICAGO, May 31.—The newspaper accounts of the changes at the Goodman theater are disturbing. I do not set myself up as a dramatic critic, but I am convinced that the work done at the Goodman has been noteworthy, two instances being the productions of "Six Characters in Search of an Author," and "Juno and the Paycock." At the opening night of "Six Characters," I took with me Mr. and Mrs. Francis Brett Young [the English novelist], personal friends of Pirandello. They had seen the play done in London under the direction of the author, and they assured me the Chicago performance was quite equal to it. In the case of "Juno," I regarded the Goodman production as even better than that of the Irish players.

The Goodman has had the services of three directors of international fame—Mr. Payne, Mr. Stevens, and Mr. Kane. All have done work here that would be praised in any city. The Goodman company as a whole has been a good one. The accomplishments far exceed the failures.

You need money, of course; and so far your public support has not been adequate. It is a duty to be patient until the right sort of audience can be assembled. If you cannot wait until you have an endowment or a subscription list to support the theater, it would be better to close your doors. It is absurd that there should not be a sustaining fund for an institution like the Goodman theater.

I do not wish to be impertinent, but I strongly suspect that the greatest enemy of the Goodman theater is your committee. Not intentionally, of course. The worst blunderers are well intentioned. Art cannot be produced by committees. It comes from an individual. If your committee does not recognize that principle and adopt it, your theater will fail, and deserve failure.

You probably remember, as I do, the failures of other attempts to form a repertory theater in Chicago. I refer especially to the splendid work done by Iden Payne for the Chicago Theater society. Why didn't that organization survive? It had a capable director and actors like Walter Hampden and Whitford Kane; but it failed because of the meddling of people who gave little money and much advice. Do the trustees of the orchestra build the program for Mr. Stock? It takes more than appreciation of music or the drama to direct a theater or an orchestra. The root of the trouble seems to be that you have not given Mr. Stevens enough autocratic power.

The Goodman theater is successful. It has a fine record of worthwhile plays painted on the walls of its lounge room and in the minds of the Chicago public. It has splendid producers and actors who may resign but whose records cannot be obliterated. Thomas Wood Stevens, Whitford Kane, Iden Payne, Mary Agnes Doyle, Roman Bohnen and others have created portraits as vivid as the paintings hung on the walls of the Art institute. I hope they will not be discarded for the reason that, unlike the paintings, they cannot be appraised and sold for dollars.

If the Goodman is to remain an art theater, it will need artists even more than money. If it is not to remain an art theater, you may find the easiest way out of your difficulties is to lease it to the Shuberts.

ALEXANDER GREENE.

Civic Theater In New York

EVA LE GALLIENNE has closed her fourth season at the Fourteenth Street theater, New York, and a successful season it seems to have been, too. Miss Le Gallienne and her company will take a well deserved rest until the fall, though as usual the directress herself will be busily engaged, even while resting, with plans for the season to come.

The fourth season brought to Miss Le Gallienne's Civic Repertory theater five new productions, and eleven plays from past seasons were presented from time to time as well. The new offerings added to the repertory since last fall were: "The Sea Gull," "The Living Corpse," "Mlle. Bourrat," "The Women Have Their Way" [with a curtain raiser, "The Open Door"] and "Romeo and Juliet." Only in one of these—the last named—did Miss Le Gallienne figure in a leading rôle.

Of the old numbers in the repertory "Peter Pan," "The Would-Be Gentleman" and "The Cradle Song" seem to have been the most popular, with the emphasis, perhaps, upon "The Cradle Song," which dates from the first season and which has seventeen performances to its credit during the fourth. In addition to directing the plays and supervising the management of the entire organization, Miss Le Gallienne herself played fifteen rôles this season, including such exacting parts as Peter Pan, Hedda Gabler and Juliet.

B'way Openings

BROADWAY will have only one premiere this week, as follows: "Artists and Models," Tuesday night at the Majestic theater. Although you might never guess it from the title and the subtitle, which is "Paric-Riviera Editon of 1930," this is the new summer revue from the workshops of the Shuberts. The show started out, sedately enough, as an English musical comedy, "Dear Love," but somewhere along the way to New York Phil Baker found himself in it, and from then on it became a revue. Besides Mr. Baker, others working for the greater glorification of Paris and the Riviera will include the familiar George Hassell, Vera Pearce, a comedienne newly arrived from England; Harry Welch, recently of "A Wonderful Night"; Aileen Stanley, and Halfred Young.

"Equity" Members.

The membership of the Actors' Equity association was announced at its recent annual meeting to be 9,857, which is 1,500 less than a year ago. One thousand and sixty-nine members honorably withdrew, there were 1,098 suspensions for nonpayment of dues, and 1,865 persons joined the organization.

SULTRY SINGER

LIBBY HOLMAN.

EVERY ONE knows about this exotic and picturesque young actress—she's the "Moanin' Low" girl in "The Little Show" who specializes in sobbing ballads about broken hearts in the underworld. But it is difficult to trace Miss Holman's career back of this revue, which is now at the Selwyn. Apparently she just stepped out and became a star over night in New York about a year ago.

THE ARMCHAIR PLAYGOER

By Fanny Butcher.

IN NEW YORK.

The Players' club for their ninth annual revival this week chose "Milestones," by Arnold Bennett and Edward Knoblock, a play of the generations which Chicagoans saw some years ago—twenty odd, perhaps. It was successful in the days of B.L.T., who had quips and quips about the "Greek play, Miles-to-nes." It was certainly the most charming play that Arnold Bennett ever turned his hand to, as any one may readily discover who reads it. It had the aroma of a rare old vintage, although it was in no sense an "old fashioned" play.

EDWARD KNOBLOCK.

The one of its authors who has previously devoted himself to playwriting, Edward Knoblock, has recently published his first novel, "The Ant Heap" [Minton Balch], a story about modern England and a dozen men and women whose lives are woven into the fabric of a great experiment. Although Mr. Knoblock writes of London, and himself lives there, and is believed by many to be an Englishman, he is one of our own products, born in New York in 1874.

"Lysistrata," adapted from Aristophanes' famous farce by Gilbert Seldes and staged by Norman Bel-Geddes, arrived in New York after five weeks which were unquestionably a triumph in Philadelphia, which went to be shocked and got its electricity. Some years ago the Moscow Art Theater Musical studio presented it to likewise vociferously amused audiences in Chicago. It has long been a sure fire hit.

In 1905 it was done in Madrid as an operetta-bouffe. Maurice Donnay did an adaptation of it which was produced in Paris in 1892 and has been revived three times since then, in 1896, 1909, and 1919. M. Donnay's version had an interpolated scene among the Athenian courtesans which gave the boulevardiers a moment.

Laurence Housman did another translation and adaptation which gave the lord chamberlain a bad quarter of an hour before he licensed its production in London in 1919, and when the Women's Political union produced it in New York the year before the war the audience gasped. B. B. Rogers, I believe, has done the accepted collegiate version, which is safe for the undergraduate.

It was Gilbert Seldes and his brother who made the English translation of the Russian translation which was presented by the Moscow Art Theater Musical studio. They did it for a libretto which was sold at the performance. Now Gilbert Seldes has further adapted the play, but how further we shall not know for a few days, at least, when the playing version is published by Farrar & Rinehart. Meanwhile the text of that original libretto is available at the public library.

Lysistrata had the brilliant idea that the way to prevent war was for the wives of Greece to bring their husbands to a state of complete subjection by a passive revolution and thus make them vow to keep peace. The play is lusty if one ever was.

Smolin, the author of the Russian version of the play, once said of it: "Our age of supreme activity rather than meditation, of creation rather than philosophy, is the age of farce and tragedy rather than of comedy and drama."

Two Years of Gene O'Neill's Dinner Drama

THE two companies of Eugene O'Neill's "Strange Interlude" which have been playing on tour throughout the last season, closed a week ago, the one headed by Judith Anderson concluding its tour in Newark and the other headed by Elizabeth Risdon winding up in Brooklyn. Miss Risdon's company, which was originally headed by Pauline Lord, has been touring for 75 weeks continuously save for a three week layoff last summer on the Pacific coast. The other company began its tour Sept. 30 at Quincy, Mass., [Boston having barred it], and has been playing continuously.

This play, able to give but six performances weekly because of its length, has been given for a total of 1,068 performances during the last two years, inclusive of its New York engagement. The first company to go on tour began playing in Buffalo Dec. 14, 1928, and since that time has traveled more than 19,000 miles and has played engagements of six weeks in Los Angeles, six weeks in San Francisco, three weeks in Pittsburgh, and one night engagements in such places as Walla Walla, Missoula, Fargo, etc. Both companies achieved some of the most remarkable business that "the road" has ever yielded.

Nor has "Interlude" finished with its tours. The Theater Guild some time ago planned to send another company on tour next year, since some 400 cities have sought the play next season. Because one company will be unable to cover so many places, two companies will be organized for next year. One of them will tour the south, which was not touched in the present tours, and the other will play repeat engagements in most of the cities where the play has already been seen, and then tour through the west in cities where the play has not been seen.

Elizabeth Risdon will head one company. The actress who will head the other has not been selected.

Riverview

RIVERVIEW PARK will have one of the largest picnics of the year today. In the large grove the Socialist party of Cook county will hold its annual get-together meeting. There will be prominent speakers and appropriate music. In the smaller grove the First Hungarian Social and Sick Benefit association will have its annual picnic.

Bounded by Belmont, Western, Clybourn avenues and Roscoe boulevard, Riverview is directly approached by more street car lines than any one other single point in Chicago outside of the loop. The Chicago river is the western boundary of the park for nearly half a mile. The trip from the Clark street bridge has been made in a motor boat in a little less than twelve minutes. Motor bus line number 52 takes you to Western and Addison, only one block away. Riverview has within its enclosure five auto parking fields, accommodating over 5,000 cars.

Yiddish Drama.

Jacob Ben-Ami, his season with Eva Le Gallienne's Civic Repertory theater in New York ended, has returned to the Yiddish stage for a brief tour. He is a member of the Yiddish Art theater company now at the Lawndale theater. The repertory, which began last Friday night and extends to Wednesday night of this week, includes "Out of the Beyond," by L. D. Berkowitch; "Green Fields," by Peretz Hirschbein; and "Power" [also known as "Jew Suss"] by Lion Feuchtwanger.

The Jack and Jill Players began their summer season in their playhouse on the roof of 40 East Oak street with Massinger's comedy, "A New Way to Pay Old Debts," last Friday night.

Now — the smartest faces wear Primrose Beige

BECAUSE it is as much "this season" as the nipped-in jacket, as newly chic as the flare-and-flatter brim, beautifully groomed women everywhere are now using the new Primrose Beige Powder. So undeniably smart, so correct, Primrose Beige is far and away the most fashionable shade of powder you now can wear. It is a warm, delicate tone that is especially charming for medium blondes and brunettes.

And like all Primrose Chiffon Powder, this lovely new Primrose Beige is so fine in texture that it actually becomes part of your skin, so gently clinging that your loveliness endures.

Primrose Chiffon Powder comes in seven shades that blend with the natural skin tones.

For the mid-summer complexion, or the darker complexion, Primrose Tan is the season's smart shade.

At all better class drug and department stores, in boxes, $1 and $3—or send direct to Primrose House, 595 Fifth Ave., New York.

PRIMROSE HOUSE
"HERE DWELLS YOUTH"

THE VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

Praise for "Caught Short."

Mae Tinée: Why short change "Caught Short" of two of its rightly earned stars? It was a splendid comedy. Both comedians in the picture were good, especially Marie Dressler, who should rightly be called the queen of comedy.

I believe you said some of the situations were too forced to inspire spontaneous laughter. I don't know where your ears were, but I heard the audience laugh in hearty accord, and they were not a feeble minded lot, either.

You have been rather lavish of your four star pictures, and many, like "Ladies of Leisure," are not worth the price of admission. I suppose this letter will not see print; it is hardly the kind you care to receive. C. K.

Editors note: We don't seem to think alike, do we?

If you would like your letters printed in this column please write on ONE side of the paper ONLY. If you want a personal answer send stamped, self-addressed envelope—PLEASE!

LAKE FOREST WOMEN PLAN FLOWER SHOW

MRS. T. CLIFFORD RODMAN.

MRS. WALTER S. BREWSTER.

MRS. WILLIAM H. MITCHELL.

LAKE FOREST women who are active in preparations for the annual flower show of the Lake Forest Garden club to take place next Saturday and Sunday in the service buildings of Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick's estate, Villa Turicum, include Mrs. Walter S. Brewster, Mrs. Lester Armour, Mrs. Farwell Winston, Mrs. William H. Mitchell, and Mrs. T. Clifford Rodman.

Horse Show at South Shore Country Club

Gala Gathering Planned Tuesday Evening.

By Mildred Jaklon.

THE summer schedule of outdoor events is now in full swing, and sports of all kinds are receiving enthusiastic and absorbed attention. The South Shore Country club opens the long series of horse shows that will be given hereabouts within the next month or so with their 21st annual show, beginning Tuesday evening. Performances will be given on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday afternoon and evening, and there is to be a Saturday morning performance especially for children of the club and their friends.

The show proper closes Saturday afternoon, and the gala horse show ball will conclude the festivities on Saturday evening. Joseph E. Hitt is chairman of the arrangements and C. Groverman Ellis is secretary. Mrs. C. A. Dunbar is in charge of a women's auxiliary committee, with Mrs. E. J. Stevens, wife of the president of the club, assisting ex officio.

Much special entertainment for club members, guests, exhibitors and other out of town visitors has been planned to take place between the show sessions. The horse show reception party is to take place on Tuesday night, and on Thursday evening there will be a "midweek" party.

All those interested in the South Shore show are hoping hard for pleasant weather for the opening, as the weather man has proved false the last several years. Last year there was a deluge of rain on the opening night and the performance had to be postponed until next day. Sometimes the atmosphere has been clear, but so chilly that all the lovely sports clothes had to be veiled from view by heavy coats.

Flower Show at Lake Forest.

Good weather will add and lack of it will detract some from the Lake Forest Garden club's annual flower show on Saturday and Sunday at Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick's estate, but of course unpleasant behavior of the elements can't stop the show, as all of it except the sale of cut flowers and plants is under cover. Elaborate arrangements are being made with the Lake Forest traffic department to cope with the streams of automobiles that will be winding their way in and out of the quite narrow lanes from the beginning until the close of the show.

Mrs. Walter S. Brewster and Mrs. Robert A. Gardner are co-chairmen of the show, and the committee includes also Mrs. Lester Armour, Mrs. P. D. Armour, Mrs. Farwell Winston, Mrs. Edward Welles, who is president of the Junior Lake Forest Garden club, Mrs. J. Andrews King, Mrs. Billy Mitchell, and Mrs. John Coleman.

WHEN CHICAGO WAS YOUNG

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, Oct. 12, 1873.

DEAR Julia:

These are glorious October days in Chicago. This is our loveliest month in Illinois, I think, and this has been a beautiful day.

We have just celebrated the first anniversary of the fire, not in sackcloth and ashes, but with a review of the year and a thankfulness that so much has been accomplished toward the rebuilding of the city. Every one had an experience to relate of the fire. So it will always be, probably, until the last one of us who witnessed the most tragic sight of the century has passed away.

Where a year ago were only smoking ruins now stand great buildings as monuments to Chicago's enterprise and energy. Yesterday the Board of Trade abandoned its temporary quarters near the river and took formal possession of its new home, which has risen more beautiful than it was before the fire. The members of the board and invited guests, headed by the officers of the Board of Trade, marched from the old building to the new. Mayor Medill, Judges Drummond, Tree, and Cary; G. C. Walker, Daniel A. Jones [he is president of the Chamber of Commerce], Gen. Sheridan and staff—these are some of the men we saw as the procession wended its way to the new building.

I was interested in an item from the New York World about our city—perhaps you saw it in the New York edition. "Wonderful as was the rise of Chicago, and wonderful as was its fall, the rebuilding of it has been more wonderful still. We must own that the Chicago boaster is entitled to his boast, however untuneful it may be."

Last night we attended the Thomas concert at Aiken's theater, corner of Wabash avenue and Congress street. These concerts have drawn out all the musical people of Chicago, and the atmosphere must be gratifying to the artists. I think it must be easier to play before music lovers.

I do wish you could have heard Mr. Thomas' men as they played the opening number, Schumann's First Symphony in B. The freshness and originality of Schumann are especially shown, it seems to me, in this work. The tempo which Mr. Thomas gave to it was rapid, but with such players as follow his baton no tempo is too rapid.

Mr. Upton, our excellent music critic, whom we saw at the concert, said such a pace would have wrecked the ordinary orchestra, but not a particle of clearness or shade of expression was lost in this performance. The second number on the program was the "Ritt der Walkueren." Have you heard this? I suppose so. The music is just matchless, to my mind, a perfect picture of the terrible rush of Odin's maidens through the clouds. Words are not needed to tell the story. At last the world has a composer who has found the secret of music and placed it in its proper relation to poetry.

I saw many old friends—the Chauncey Blairs, the Lyman Blairs, the Blatchfords, the Otises, the Hibbards, the Spencers, the Marshall Fields, the Dunhams, and other music lovers. It was really a treat.

There were many quite elegant gowns, too. I had wondered whether Chicago merchants would be bringing on handsome clothes such as used to be displayed before the fire. But now that we have had our autumn openings, the question is settled. All our stores have shown elegant and costly dresses.

Don't you love the new shades of brown and blue, and "London smoke"? My dressmaker tells me that no bright colors will be used in a strictly en regle toilette. I am having a new moire antique in "London smoke," but could not afford any of the new silks in the lovely evening shades—blush rose, peach, and yellow, overlaid with clusters of superb brocaded flowers. I have a great weakness for light silks, but Chicago dirt does not permit me to indulge it.

Mrs. Hopson tells me that hats are to be worn back on the head this year, not jammed down over the face as we have been doing. Well, times change, and our ideas change with them.

As we are so near, on Wabash avenue, I have just been in to see the new St. Mary's Roman Catholic church, which used to be Plymouth Congregational. It was dedicated yesterday to the uses of the Catholic church, taking the place of the structure which, before the fire, stood at the corner of Madison street and Wabash avenue.

Your old friend,
MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

P. S. I wonder if I have told you of a group of young people who have a dancing class known as "The Cinders." They do have such gay times. The parties are managed by the young men, who pay, of course, for the refreshments.

The affairs are simple and informal, with coffee, lemonade, and sandwiches served. I hope such pleasant, informal dances will be the fashion when young Martha comes on the scene, which will be soon. Cyrus Adams, George Rumsey, Bryan Lathrop, and other fine young men are in this little group. Florence Arnold, Fay Calhoun, and other lovely young ladies are the partners of these young fellows. We have a particularly fine set of young people in Chicago now.

Foot Notes.

Most of the names in this letter have been mentioned before.

Daniel A. Jones was grandfather of Mrs. Frederick C. Aldrich, and Mrs. C. Frederick Childs and Miss Madeline Newell of Lake Forest.

Mrs. Bryan Lathrop has been Chicago this winter. She spends much time abroad.

Fay Calhoun became Mrs. Henry Mason. Florence Arnold became Mrs. Frederick Greeley.

People Stay Well; Hospitals Do Suffering

Financial Depression Acts Like Tonic.

By Mme. X.

PARDON a preamble touching on a few observations of life as seen from a bed at the Passavant Memorial hospital. In the first place, one of the unexpected phases of the present hard times is to be found in hospitals. They are not nearly so full as usual. In fact, they are, if one can use the term, distressingly empty. Does poverty or financial depression improve the health? If so, wouldn't it be better if we could preserve a modicum of this uncomfortable condition of financial worry so as to establish our physical well being?

Hospitals are much less full than before the debacle last October and November. Trained nurses are looking for other jobs. The demand for drugs has diminished and the whole face of the therapeutic world has become clouded. So much is this the case that when from my sick bed I suggested joining with the nurses in an attempt to set going a nice epidemic, promoting the spread of some pleasant, non disfiguring, temporary disease, it was met with favor. Only the fact that I should have to forego this pillar of polite piffle deters me from entering on such an enterprise, so interested have I become in hospitals, especially the one where I had such an agreeable sojourn.

That splendid gray building with its utterly up to date equipment, and its fine staff of doctors, internes, and nurses, is designed to take as much as possible of the horror out of illness. There has been carried out to a hitherto untried extent the curative powers of attractive surroundings. The walls are of charming colors. Each floor is decorated throughout in a special tint. The appurtenances are all in harmony, nor need this scheme cost any more than that old, drab unloveliness that used to make the mere thought of such an institution fearful.

Part of Our Daily Lives.

The modern hospital is a remarkable institution, as new and as much a part of our daily lives as automobiles and airplanes. In the days of my youth hospitals were almost unknown and those that did exist were, as in England today, designed only for the poor. No one of the well-to-do ever went to such a place when overtaken by illness. People were born at home. There they went through the many illnesses incident to the span of man's existence, and there they died when the whole business was over.

Trained nurses did not exist, only the monthly nurses who were much more important than the doctor, himself, in the business of ushering a new life into this mundane sphere. That busy little organ, the appendix, had not yet been discovered. A pain in the tummy was called inflammation of the bowels. Operations were few and far between. The folk of those days usually died what you might call "bodily intact." Even tonsils and adenoids

Changing Policy at Art Institute

New Management of the Goodman Theater Indicates a Lowering of Artistic Ideals for Increased Receipts.

By Eleanor Jewett.

SINCE when has money become the most important thing in the eyes of the Art institute? First we have a change in policy about the issuing of invitations to the annual Chicago Artists' exhibitions, a change that saves the vast sum of $150 for the museum, and now we have a much greater change with, in view, the probable crowding of shekels into the gaping crevices which apparently is all the credit the institute presents to the world. The greater change is in regard to the management of the Goodman theater.

For a number of years that little theater has built up a reputation second to none. It has become, through perseverance and hard work and a constant keeping to the highest artistic ideals, a theater in which one could always expect to be interested, often amused and generally inspired. Plays that at the moment affected one unfavorably on retrospect fell into their proper perspective and became part and parcel of the consistent plan which the Goodman was faithfully following. That plan fundamentally meant the salvation of the drama from the money grabbers. It meant putting the theater where it belongs in the forefront of the arts. It meant giving Chicago something peculiarly intimate and intrinsically individual.

Thomas Wood Stevens with the help of the same group of ardent workers from season to season has built up a splendid project. Out of the dreams dreamt by Kenneth Sawyer Goodman he has drawn reality. Over the stage are the words: "You yourselves must kindle the fagots you have brought," words taken from a pageant written by Mr. Goodman. Up to now the players and the management have fulfilled his words. They have turned all things into gold. Not, to be sure, the gold that chinks in the vaults of the miser, but the gold that stands for the furtherance of ideals, the intangible gold with which great things are wrought.

Entering a New Epoch.

Now we enter into a new epoch. We see Mr. Harshe hounded by bills. We see the Art institute plunging into financial ruin. We see the trustees running around with their hats in their hands seeking the dollars of the masses. When did the masses ever support anything in a big way, anything, that is, that had an appeal greater than their stomachs or their senses?

What utter nonsense to think that today the Goodman can be supported by popular appeal. Of course it can't. Unless, a brilliant idea has just flashed upon us, the director and trustees of the institute will put on talkies at the Goodman! The Palace, up to now a legitimate vaudeville enterprise, has swung over to the talkies with, naturally, the commendable aim of pleasing its patrons and increasing its bank balance. Let us follow the Palace, and open the Goodman with a talkie every two or three weeks. No, a new talkie twice a week and a girl show the rest of the evening. Watch how the crowds flock in! It will not be long now before we can put uniformed ushers in every aisle to rival the Chicago theater. It will not be long before the credit side of the Goodman bank books is swelling with little numbers, each one standing for a dollar.

What sort of plays are commercially successful? Has any theater manager solved that riddle yet? What does Broadway do every year but try out and put in the discard innumerable plays with the ambition of finding one which will be a success—financial success, mind you, is what they are looking for. It is common knowledge that the Follies is generally successful, from the box office point of view. They relieve innumerable tired business men of innumerable dollars every year. A good comedy or a good drama may fail but pretty girls go on forever. Are pretty girls the "fagots" which Kenneth Sawyer Goodman had in mind?

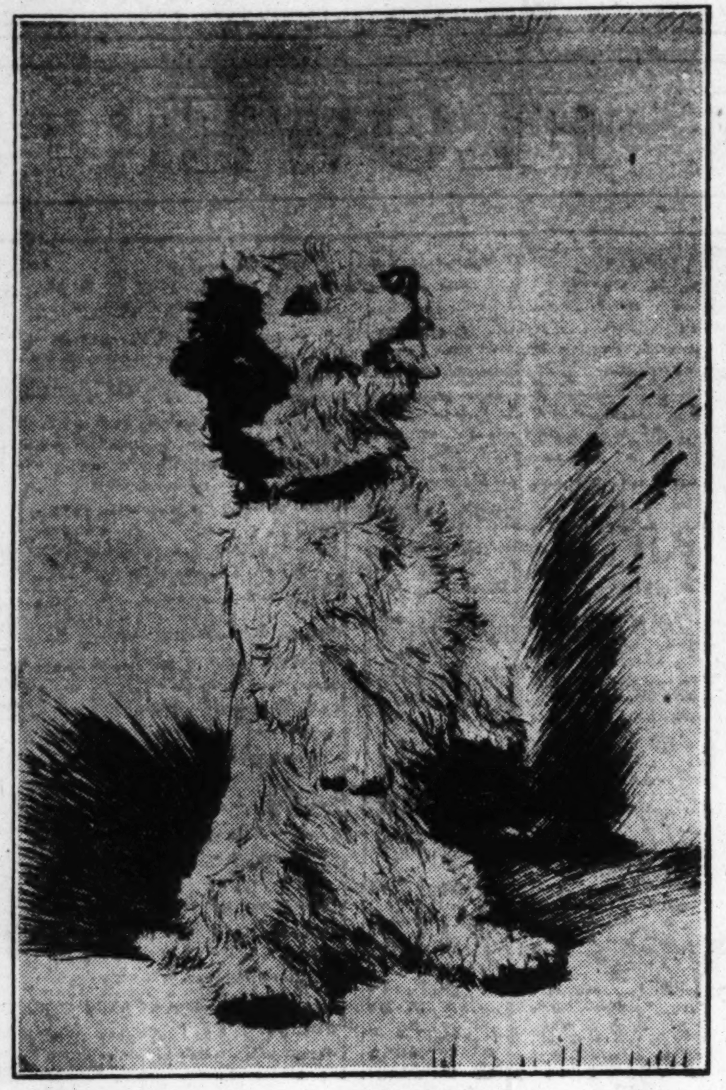
A Testing Place for Drama.

The Goodman Memorial theater, so far as is known, is an endowed theater. It is a school of acting as well as an acting body. It was not established with a view to commercial success. It was established in honor of a man who was a dreamer and a poet as well as a business man. It was planned in every detail for the fulfilling of a great ambition. It was to be a testing place of drama. All kinds of plays were to be tried. If those of you who have given the Goodman a fair trial in the past several years will look back over what that company has done under Mr. Stevens, you cannot fail but be impressed and a little awe struck. They have accomplished the impossible. From the most tentative beginnings they have constructed a fine working body of inspired artists. They have provided the public with an infinite number of new sensations.

In lighting, in scenery, in costume, even in the plays selected, in the manner of presenting those plays, in the acting, the Goodman theater has become unique because of its unfailing success in putting over the ideas which dominated each particular incident. There is no little theater in the world that equals it. It ranks with the best on both sides of the Atlantic. It can only have reached this position and it can only maintain this position through a total disregard of the box office.

The Art institute, through its director and certain of its trustees, if the newspapers are to be believed, is endangering its success. They are imperiling its possibilities. They are driving coffin nails into the enthusiasm which inspires it. And all for the sake of that fickle and impossible jade public approval as seen through the distorting glasses of box office receipts! It does not seem credible that a group of thoughtful men could imagine that running after the dollars is the way to bring them in. The commercial stage has proved the fallacy of that again and again. Over and over box office successes have become so despite the most direful prognostications that "this is too highbrow" or "that is over the heads of the average people." Successes, as any theatrical manager will tell you, are generally accidental. The Goodman has had as many successes in the course of its life as any theater.



"JERRY" by Diana Thorne, a portrait of her own dog is to be found in the exhibition of etchings and portraits in oil of dogs by Miss Thorne in the O'Brien Art Galleries, 673 North Michigan avenue. The exhibition is one of the most charming in town and for those who are fond of dogs it is irresistible. Miss Thorne has a marvelous knack at portraying "just a dog, pedigree unknown" in the most amusing poses. She is a skilled craftsman and her work ranks high among artists. The exhibit will continue into June.

Staged Delightful Plays.

Just look back over this one winter. The children's Saturday matinées were invariably crowded. All right; increase your receipts there by giving a morning as well as an afternoon performance on Saturday. During the holidays put on a Wednesday matinée. The box office will chuckle at several extra hundreds of dollars.

Now, for the evening performances and the Friday matinée. As you skim the plays which have been given this winter does not each stand out in your memory? Even the unfortunate clown play was gorgeously staged. The circus scene will be a joy to look back upon always. Admitted that the theme was forced and the acting overdone, it was an experience and quite as good a way to spend an evening as a talkie would have afforded.

Consider "Holliday," and "Ariadne," and "The Escape"—there was fine acting. Roman Bohnen was superb and the rest of the cast played up to him magnificently. Look at the amusing "Tour of the World in Eighty Days." You won't see that kind of entertaining farce on a stage run for money, for it is too delightfully uncertain of approval. Consider the "Markropolis Secret," well staged, well played; the charmingly presented "Romeo and Juliet," and the revival of the "School for Scandal." In that list are plays for every type of mind. Of course, the girl show has been left out, the vaudeville stunt has been overlooked, and the detective story is missing, but do the trustees and the director of the Art institute intend to plan a series of plays based upon limbs, laughs, and murder?

Bank Note Progression.

Do we have to see the present band of players disbanded? Do we have to be nursed along in our attendance at the Goodman by a lullaby of bank notes? Will every empty seat thrust up a grasping claw minus its $1.75? Will the atmosphere, so beautifully installed by the architect, Howard Shaw, have to give way to the driven feel of those places run for profit? Can't Chicago support one artistic project either through the consensus of opinion of those persons who consider themselves in the forefront of thought and artistic pursuits or by means of the Art institute, which surely should be the last concern to throw the first stone at the ideals on which the Goodman was originally founded? Are we so poor in spirit that we can see this venture go to the wall and keep silent about it?

What about the drive for money under the impression that the same policy hitherto in force would be continued? Speaking as one person, I subscribed to the First Night club last year and again for the coming year, but I do not care for financial grubbing. With a change in policy the box office will not need my subscription, so I shall withdraw it. How many other supporters of Mr. Stevens and his actors will withdraw their approval? The Goodman will not need its old supporters in view of the crowds that will flock under the anticipated new régime. We can expect almost anything. Yet it is difficult to foresee a great increase in receipts unless Mr. Aldis, Mr. Eckart, Mr. Harshe, and the others who have been mentioned as being back of the project introduce talkies. That would turn the trick! But if they do, I hope the words of Mr. Goodman will be erased from the wall. The talkies are fine fagots; they burn well; they leave a rich ash; but to kindle them is needed the breed of soul to which the words were not addressed.

Exhibits, Medals, Prizes.

The first medal to be issued in bronze by the Society of Medalists, to which organization any one may belong by a payment of yearly dues of $8, is by Laura Gardin Fraser, the well known American sculptress. This medal shows on one side a hunter and his dog. On the reverse is a ruffed grouse. The medal is distinctive, interesting and beautifully done. As the first of an anticipated series of important medals it sets a high standard. Paul Manship, so it is understood, has been entrusted with the design and execution of the second medal. Two medals are issued each year to the members of the society. The medals are in bronze.

The National Academy of Art opened its annual exhibit of students' work consisting of drawings, paintings, sculpture, illustrations, advertising designs, and interior decoration last Monday to run to June 30.

The Corcoran Gallery of art in Washington has recently announced the twelfth biennial exhibition of contemporary American oil paintings. It will open Sunday, Nov. 30, 1930, and close Jan. 11, 1931. The exhibition will be confined to original oil paintings by living American artists, not before publicly exhibited in Washington. It is the hope of the trustees of the Corcoran that the exhibition will cover comprehensively the field of oil painting as practiced today by American painters; that, in its scope and quality, it will stand as high as any similar exhibition which has ever been presented; and that the American painters will keep it in mind with a view to offering their strongest and most recent work.

The "William A. Clark prize awards," established through Senator Clark's endowment of $100,000 in the year 1921, will again be made. The first prize is $2,000 and the Corcoran gold medal; the second, $1,500 and the Corcoran silver medal; the third, $1,000 and the Corcoran bronze medal; the fourth, $500 and the Corcoran honorable mention certificate.

Notes on Art and Artists.

An exhibition of paintings by Frederic M. Grant opened June 2 in the Anderson galleries and will continue through the month. The paintings are decorative, colorful, beautifully composed and afford one of the most stunning shows to be found in town at the moment.

An exhibition of paintings, pastels, and drawings by Seymour De Koven opened last Monday in the Knoedler galleries and will continue to June 14. Mr. De Koven is a Chicagoan who has lived abroad and has met with much and great success in Paris. He is still in his twenties, very young to have made as deep an impression as he has upon artists, public, and critics alike. The exhibition is well worth while, if you enjoy modernist painting.

The annual exhibition of work by students in the Art institute art school will open June 12 and continue to Aug. 13, after which the summer shows will be hung in the east wing galleries of the museum. There will be six one man shows including work by Jean Crawford Adams, Frank J. Gavencky, Charles E. Mullin, Rudolph Ingerle, Roy H. Collins, and Enrico Glicenstein.

Cuts Face Powder Bill.

When there is a sale on face powder I always buy a large box because it contains more powder and lasts longer and so it is cheaper. I divide the box with my sister. In this way we get more for our money and the powder does not get stale as it would if we bought separate boxes. R. M. M.

Home Made Paste.

Any store dealing in wall paper will sell a pound of powder used by paper hangers to make paste. A pound of powder costs but seven cents. I use only three tablespoonfuls at a time mixed with a little water and have a paste equal in quantity and quality to library pastes that sell for ten cents. I am proud of my economy, for three creative children consume quantities of paste! H. M.

House Cleaning Hint.

Matting may be inexpensively and well cleaned by sweeping thoroughly or, better yet, using the vacuum cleaner, if you have one. It is not at all necessary to wash it, in fact, soaps and soap powder tend to discolor matting and the excessive use of water hastens wear on the fabric. Stubborn spots may be removed by rubbing with a cloth wrung out of hot water. A. B. M.

Lemon Cleans Coffee Pot.

Slice a lemon and put the slices in an aluminum coffee pot with plenty of cold water. Let it come to a boil and keep it boiling for a few minutes. Then the inside surface of the pot may be cleaned with a cloth and made to look like new. E. K.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

were in their infancy and we wheezed and snuffled in undisturbed endlessness.

Not so today. What serious ailments come to us are quickly transferred from the home to the nearest hospital. This is much better all around, as there one gets more expert care and the home is left undisturbed.

The latest and most up to date north side hospital is on East Superior street and bears the name of one of the first doctors in Chicago, Dr. W. A. Passavant. The then head of the city, Mayor Ogden, in 1865 persuaded Dr. Passavant to come here from Pittsburgh, Pa. Soon after his arrival he founded the first Protestant hospital in the United States; yes, the very first. Doesn't it seem amazing that so many people before that lived and died, especially the latter, with no hospital to give them scientific, up to date care?

This pioneer institution of the countless thousands that are today to be found all over the country, was started on Dearborn and Ontario streets in July, 1865, with a capacity of fifteen beds. The equipment was, of course, in the light of today's knowledge, extremely limited, but it was one of the wonders of that day.

Aided by Ezra B. McCagg.

A prominent citizen of that time, Ezra B. McCagg, was deeply interested in the young undertaking and gave it help, both financial and moral. The Chicago fire of 1871 swept it away together with most of the rest of that district. It was not until fourteen years later that its supporters were able to achieve a new building. This was on West Superior street, on the edge of the slum districts. It was of great assistance to the police of the near-by Chicago avenue station and to it they took most of their cases of ill and wounded.

It was first called the Emergency hospital, but after the death of Dr. Passavant it was given his name. In 1896 the Women's Aid society was founded, with the late Mrs. John S. Runnells at its head. From that day to this, this fine body of women has given great assistance to the board of directors in every way, especially in raising money to make possible its third and most up to date home, recently erected. The older building had been condemned five or six years ago.

Since the death of Mrs. Runnells, Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman has been the president of this board. Mrs. Clive Runnells is first vice president; Mrs. Louisa Johnson is second vice president [she did wonderful work in directing the furnishing of the new hospital]; Mrs. Orville Babcock is secretary; Mrs. Matthias Pittman is corresponding secretary; Mrs. Mark Trude is treasurer, with Mrs. John F. Jelke Jr. assistant treasurer. Forty other well known women make up the board, which did great work in helping raise $1,200,000 of the $2,000,000 required for the hospital, and also in getting it started in the community as a great institution.

The board of directors of the Passavant is headed by Russell Tyson, president with Eames MacVeagh vice president; Loring Coleman, treasurer; Henry P. Isham, secretary, and twenty-three other well known Chicago men as members of the board, all actively interested in the welfare of the institution, so that it shall keep its place at the top of its kind here and elsewhere.

Praised by Foreign Visitors.

Visitors from other lands marvel at its complete and modern equipment. Among its recent visitors was Prof. Ian Grant. He is chief of the Medical Service of the Royal Infirmary of Glasgow. At about the same time Prof. Zweifel, of the University Hospital at Munich also visited the Passavant. Both of these authorities were deeply interested in the hospital and its machinery for modern surgery and diagnosis, and said that it was far ahead of anything in Europe. Nowhere else in the world today do they have hospitals that fill the place in daily life that our American hospitals do for us. In England, large hospitals are all dedicated entirely to the poor. For the well-to-do they have what they call Nursing Homes, generally in done-over private houses and but poorly equipped with any of the modern requirements.

Another odd thing about medical science in England is that it is "very bad form" to call a medical man "doctor." You must speak of and to him as "Mr." This may be a relic of the times when barbers did the blood letting that was the only form of surgery known to the folk of olden days. Whatever the malady, whether it was a cold in the head, a belly ache or a fit, blood letting done by barbers was the favorite cure, and the patient either lived or died according to the life force bequeathed him by his ancestors. Twenty-five years was the average life length then.

Surrounded by Youth.

Dr. Irving S. Cutter, dean of Northwestern medical school, is superintendent of the Passavant and has working with him a corps that includes some of the best known specialists in the city. So, when an institution like this comes to the public asking help to complete its original plans, as the Passavant plans to do soon, it is up to the farseeing and generous men and women of Chicago to give it all possible aid.

A sojourn in such a hospital gives one an entirely different point of view from any other adventure in our everyday life. In the first place, the patient is struck by the delightful fact that he or she is surrounded by and entirely dependent on a numerous band of ardent youth. Young internes, clad in white, mere lads some of them seem, who are dedicating themselves to the profession of medicine, pop in on one at all hours of the day and night, while even more frequent visits from the always youthful graduate or student nurses give one a sense of gentle care that is most comforting.

A man does not take up the career of a doctor without a strong inclination towards and natural gift for it. For him it is no money making profession, and it certainly means a great sacrifice of time, strength, and nerve force. A doctor's time is never his own. Day and night he is liable to call, often in a life and death matter.

Nurses, too, do not choose their calling without some imperative impulse and natural talent for it. It demands of those who take it up infinite care, patience and courage. Its rewards are not to be measured in dollars and cents. They are the fruit of victory over disease, suffering and fear. The graduate nurses at the Passavant wear white uniforms; the student nurses are clad in violet frocks. All wear dainty white caps. How immaculate and beautiful they look when they come smiling into a sickroom!

One of the pleasant incidents during my recent sojourn there were the martial strains from the nearby Chicago Riding club when, late in the afternoon, or in the early evening, the new Black Horse troop practiced its mounted band, getting it ready for the Memorial day parade. Almost daily those prancing black horses are exercised on the streets outside.

Off to the east a glimpse of the sparkling lake made at least one invalid long to be out and part of the rushing world. Looking at life from the point of view of those lying ill in the hospital it is to be hoped that the red street cars trundling along that strip of lake shore will never come nearer the hospital.

Incorporated Aunts.

It is a good thing for him that 12 year old Jackie McCutcheon, eldest son of that popular couple, the John T. McCutcheons, has a good head set square on his sturdy young shoulders, for he had a few weeks ago an honor never before accorded an American. He went with his parents on their recent trip to England to visit Ambassador and Mrs. Dawes in London. As his parents had many social engagements, Jackie was frequently put in charge of that unique and wonderful institution, to be found only in London, the Incorporated Aunts.

This is composed of elderly and trustworthy women of education and good standing who can be hired to take the young around London to show them the sights and historical monuments and explain their significance. Now, Jackie is an extra intelligent youngster, and found fault with one of these Incorporated Aunts because she didn't know how many boroughs there were in London nor what were their boundaries. Nor did she know enough about numismatics, or the science of coins and their origins. An Incorporated Aunt hadn't known what he meant when he said that two coins that he had in his home collection were missing from the collection in the British museum.

This entertained the ambassadorial household, and when she met and danced with the lord mayor of London the following evening Mrs. McCutcheon, in answer to some of his queries as to her family, told him of her eldest and his interest in London. Evidently he was sufficiently struck with the incident to want to see the lad. So he said to the parents that if they would bring him to the lord mayor's palace the next day, which was Lord Mayor's day, when he was to ride through the city of London in the great gold coach in which lord mayors have ridden for I don't know how many eras, he would take Jackie with him and show him what could be seen of London in that parade.

Riding with the Lord Mayor.

So, the next day the three went to the palace and the parents delivered their son to what will certainly be one of the great experiences of his life. Now, Jackie had a smart new suit and a snappy new cap, but his overcoat had seen much service and his parents suggested to Jackie that, even if he found it rather chilly, he should sacrifice his feelings and refrain from donning it. Proudly they watched the parade start with Jackie sitting beside the lord mayor, his only companion in the great gold coach and the first American ever to ride with the lord mayor on such an occasion. The elder McCutcheons have had a great many thrilling experiences in all parts of the world, but I doubt if any ever was quite so stirring as to see Jackie, in embodiment of tranquillity, sitting up beside London's lord mayor in that splendid gold coach.

The parade began with a handsome old carriage drawn by one pair of prancing horses, followed by an even grander one drawn by two pairs of even more prancing steeds, with that majestic old coach drawn by three pairs of still more spirited horses, bringing up the rear of the parade. The waysides of those narrow streets in old London were thronged with crowds to see this procession, an annual affair since the times of the Georges. The proud parents took a taxi to Guild hall, where they joined the sidewalk crowds and soon saw the procession approach. As soon as the lord mayor's coach came abreast of Jackie's parents he called the attention of the lord mayor to them. The coach stopped; Jackie got out and hurried to join them. Their first glance showed that Jackie had decided to yield to British breezes and had donned the aged overcoat. But he had had a grand ride.

The lord mayor invited the trio into Guild hall and told them that he, too, had enjoyed the ride and, incidentally, had told Jackie all about London boroughs. The Incorporated Aunts will have to add something to their intellectual equipment as guides to young America, won't they? However, if that particular I. A. had been able to answer Jackie's questions, perhaps he'd never have taken that historic ride in the gold coach with the lord mayor, who, by the way, was all dressed up in the voluminous robes dedicated to such great occasions.

Mr. McCutcheon returned to Chicago and his studio in the top of the Tribune Tower last week. Mrs. McCutcheon and Jackie were expected here yesterday. The McCutcheons have rented their Lake Forest house to Mr. and Mrs. Silas Strawn, as they are to spend the summer at Ragdale, the country residence of Mrs. McCutcheon's mother, Mrs. Howard Shaw.

George A. McKinlock Here.

George A. McKinlock looked in on Chicago for a few days last week. He did not give any promise that Mrs. McKinlock or Miss Muriel McCormick, who makes her home with them, would visit this part of the country before settling down in the house they have leased in Bar Harbor, Maine's fashionable summer resort. They are, or were until a few days ago, in Millbrook, Conn. Mr. and Mrs. McKinlock spent some time lately in Washington, D. C., where they met many notabilities.

Washington is one of the most interesting world capitals. This is partly because we have become such an important country that other nations send their most able and distinguished diplomats to us, and partly because Washington is the only world capital entirely devoted to the business of running a continent. There is no commerce, no industrial life, no great financial institution to add to social life a quota of men not connected with the government. Therefore, whenever and wherever one goes out to any society function or meeting place for the large crowds that compose society, the talk, sooner or later, always drifts into politics, local, national and international. Once in contact with this life any other, even in large cities, seems provincial and far from the great current.

An interesting and well worth while interest in Mrs. McKinlock's life in Palm Beach, where she and her husband have a beautiful house and garden, is the new city plan commission which was largely started and carried through by her and other members of the Palm Beach Garden club, of which she is president. She is also head of this directing board. The plans for developing and beautifying the nation's greatest rendezvous for wealth and power promise to make it a splendid background for the gay and costly life there.

ALLIANCE FRANCAISE FOSTERS GOOD WILL

Members Aid Mutual Respect and Understanding Between Citizens of France and United States.

By Roberta Nangle.

MOST of the federated women's clubs of the country have pledged themselves to foster the preservation of friendly international relations. Whether or not their efforts will accomplish permanent world peace is debatable and beyond the scope of this department. It is permissible to be hopeful, however, and to venture to say that the world peace program of women's organizations springs from an edifying ideal of brotherly love.

The Alliance Française, whose membership includes both men and women, works sanely and regularly toward the establishment of friendship and understanding between French and Americans. Its aims are embodied in a recent statement by its president: "While not in any way subscribing to pacifism or unpreparedness, one may still recognize that war is stupid and that a genuine knowledge [not hearsay] of other peoples may go far to prevent it.

"The Alliance Française has as its main object this end and desire—to promote mutual acquaintance between French and Americans. In no sense may it be considered a political society; in every sense it is a patriotic society—patriotic for Americans, who prefer to judge situations intelligently for themselves; and patriotic for the French, who if in France, take real pleasure in extending the inspiration and attainments of an older culture to their young friends, or who, if in America, struggle so often to express to their American friends just what America means to them. Sometimes an inadequate command of our language interferes; sometimes an inability to crystallize one's ideas into speech. But the entirely human urge to explain his native France to his adopted America persists."

Members All Over the World.

These are the reasons for the Alliance Française. It does its bit to meet existing conditions by seeking international culture and friendship. The society circles the globe, with branches in all the principal cities and many of the smaller towns of the world.

The Chicago branch was founded immediately after the World's Fair, but was not chartered until 1900. The taste of the outside world brought to Chicago by the exposition led a group of citizens to realize the city's need of an organization to represent her intellectually, particularly with distinguished visitors.

Since that time the society has founded a library which is reputed to be one of the best collections of French works in America. New books are added constantly and older purchases are rebound as required.

During the club season the Alliance members are offered lectures on Saturdays at 12 o'clock. These talks are always given in French by local teachers and university professors and by visiting official lecturers sent from Paris by the Alliance. Besides the lectures, a number of social programs are given during the season and French classes are held, free to members.

Notables Entertained.

Visitors from France know the society and look to it for information and entertainments. Marshall Foch, Marshall Joffre, Sarah Bernhardt, all of the ambassadors, the bishop of Verdun and scores of other well known personages have enjoyed its hospitality. Its members also find employment for persons of French birth and speech and help them to establish themselves as good citizens.

Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis is the newly elected president of the woman's board, which constitutes the active officers of the society, and Mrs. Potter Palmer is vice president. Edward H. Bennett is president of the board of directors.

MRS. ROBERT H. RADTKE of 1260 North Dearborn street was recently elected treasurer of the Renaissance club. Mrs. Sophia Delavan Cowles is to serve a second year as presiding officer of the Woman's Association of Commerce.

Miss Elizabeth K. Eckert succeeds Miss Jane A. Magan as president of the Alliance of Business and Professional Women.

CLUB ETHICS

By Maude Swalm Evans

THE committee chairman showed signs of irritation as she took her place at the club table and gave her order for luncheon during the noon recess of the business session. She was rather young for a committee chairman, and a little impetuous.

"If we didn't have so many 'standpatters' in our membership this club might get somewhere!" she declared. "As it is, we can't do this, and we can't do that, just because we've never done so before."

"I take it you feel disappointed over the Bradford street center affair," observed the long time member. "It wasn't so much the departure from precedent that killed it as it was the fact that this is an unfavorable time for starting a project of that sort. If you bring up the matter again in the fall it may go through without a murmur."

"Yes, it may—if the 'stand-patters' don't know it's coming up," persisted the committee chairman. "I'm beginning to think they're against progress of any kind."

"We sometimes think our counselor is that way, too," spoke up the junior member who had kept demurely in the background up to the present. "She frowns on so many things we want to do!"

"Goodness, child, I didn't know you were here!" ejaculated the committee chairman, contritely. "Your counselor's all right. She's the most liberal minded and progressive person I know. You mustn't pay any attention to what I said. I was just put out because I didn't get my way—a poor loser, you juniors would say. I was all wrong and you know it."

"A club, to be a success—and we are——" claimed the long time member, "must have both progressives and conservatives—those who see opportunities and want to grasp them, and those who want to know the why and wherefore of the matter. Both are necessary to keep a balance."

> A number of inquiries have been received asking why notices for the classified church announcements on this page were omitted. Did you send your announcements on postal cards? Several requests have been made in this column asking that all classified notices be written on postal cards to reach the religious editor by Wednesday noon of each week. The response to the request was so indifferent that a rule was announced two weeks ago that no announcement would be published in the classified column unless it was received in the form requested. The Tribune gladly contributes the space for those announcements to those who adhere to the simple directions.

By the Rev. John Evans.

ANNOUNCEMENT in the New World, official newspaper of the Catholic archdiocese of Chicago, states that 38,313 persons were aided during the year ending April 1 by Catholic charities. The report states that $223,859.48 out of a total of $584,900.60 was spent for food, shelter, fuel, clothing, and medical care to the members of 9,433 families, of whom 24,581 were children and 13,732 were adults.

"The relief given by the Catholic charities to the poor in their own homes is particularly important," the report states, "since timely relief will often save a family from being broken up. The Catholic church has always been the advocate of family life, and it is therefore peculiarly fitting that so large a part of the charity administered by the church should be devoted to the preservation of what is, after all, the strongest bulwark not only of religion but also of the social order—the home."

According to the Very Rev. Msgr. William A. Cummings, head of the charities, each applicant for aid is carefully investigated. The annual report gives a list of some of the causes of dependency in the following proportion:

"Nature Sunday" is being observed today at the Third Unitarian church, 5521 West Lake street. "The Religion of John Burroughs, Nature Lover," will be the subject of the Rev. Walton E. Cole's sermon for the occasion.

More than 150 persons representing 20 states will gather in Chicago June 30 at the Shrine of the Little Flower, 64th and Woodlawn, prepared to leave for Lisieux, France, for the annual pilgrimage to the tomb of the Little Flower. The pilgrims will be given an audience with Pope Pius XI. and will attend the Passion play at Oberammergau.

The Rogers Park Daily Vacation Church school opens its sessions on June 30 and will continue until July 25. The school will be enlarged this year to provide for two sections. The west section, for children in grades 1 to 6, will be held at the Rogers Park Baptist church, and the east section, including kindergarten work in addition to the six grades, will convene at the Rogers Park Congregational church.

The new Park View Lutheran church, Monticello and Elston avenues, will be opened this morning with a confirmation service. The Rev. M. E. Fretheim, pastor, organized the Park View church twenty-two years ago. This morning he presents the largest class in the history of the congregation and next Sunday the new edifice will be dedicated.

Robert La Mar, tenor soloist and former pupil of Lombardi, teacher to Enrico Caruso, will be the soloist tonight at the Thoburn Methodist Episcopal church, West 64th street and South Paulina street. News of the Churches

THE VERY REV. MSGR. WILLIAM A. CUMMINGS.

Catholic charities under the direction of Msgr. Cummings aided Chicago's poor during the last year by the expenditure of more than half a million dollars. He has been in charge of Catholic charities since early in 1926.

Churches Will Observe Feast of Pentecost

Commemorates Descent of Holy Ghost.

THE 1900th anniversary of what many regard as the founding of the Christian church will be observed by churches of many faiths and communions today. The day is known as Pentecost, or Whitsunday, in the ecclesiastical calendar, and commemorates the occasion on which, according to biblical history, the Holy Spirit visited the apostles and disciples in the upper room at Jerusalem and empowered them to go forth into the world and spread the gospel of Christ.

Young people of the Episcopal church throughout the world will join this morning in a corporate communion service commemorating the anniversary, and dedicating their efforts to larger Christian service. Special communion services and sermons on the occasion will be general among Episcopal churches.

Children of the Episcopal, Methodist, Baptist, Congregational, and Presbyterian churches will observe Pentecost in connection with their annual Children's day services. In the Methodist Episcopal church the district superintendents and individual pastors are working out special programs for the occasion.

In Episcopal Sunday schools children will present their birthday thank offerings, which they have saved during the last year for some missionary project. This year the fund will go toward the erection of a children's unit at St. Luke's International hospital, Tokio, Japan. In many churches pageants and plays will be staged in recognition of the occasion.

His Eminence George Cardinal Mundelein, archbishop of Chicago, will pontificate at the solemn mass at 11 o'clock this morning in the Holy Name cathedral, in recognition of Pentecost. Following the mass his eminence will give a plenary indulgence to all those present who, having worthily received the sacraments of penance and the Holy Eucharist, pray for the pope, for the welfare of the church, and for the cardinal.

The North Austin Lutheran church, Mason avenue and Le Moyne street, will observe the 1900th anniversary of Pentecost with special services at 8:30, 9:45 and 11 today. Four choirs will combine for the celebration.

The Lutheran Woman's league of Chicago and vicinity will meet Tuesday morning at 11 at the Children's Receiving home, Madison street and 8th avenue, Maywood. The Woman's league, composed of 1,500 members from seventy churches, maintains the home.

Christian Endeavorers and members of other young people's church organizations will hold an annual outing June 14. The steamship City of Grand Rapids has been chartered for the occasion and will take the group, expected to number 1,500, to Kenosha. The ship will sail at 1:15 p. m.

Chicago lodges of the Modern Woodmen of America will conduct memorial services this afternoon at Fairmont cemetery at 2 o'clock. The Hon. E. J. Hesse will deliver the address and the Rev. Clinton C. Cox will offer the prayer.

The Rev. Richard D. Hughes, pastor of the Emerald Avenue Presbyterian church, sailed yesterday for Europe. His itinerary includes Oberammergau. The Rev. Arthur O. Knapp will supply the pulpit of Emerald church during Mr. Hughes' absence.

China Leads Nations in Number of Gods

PEIPING.—[U. P.]—The Chinese have more gods than any other nation in the world, according to Newton Hayes, F. R. G. S. They have more than 30,000 gods, one for practically every species of animal and object in the world, such as gods of mountains, cows, snakes and insects, according to Hayes, as well as for many abstract ideas, like wealth, mercy, and disease. Strangely enough, however, Hayes says, they have no central, all powerful deity as nearly every other nation has and they are not so reverent toward their gods.

PROTECTING THEIR HEALTH AND HAPPINESS

ANNOUNCEMENT
This advertisement has been submitted to and been approved by the Medical Advisory Board which has been formed at the invitation of the Trustees. It is published by a health agency established for public service to inform the public of the dangers of "social diseases," of the importance of securing good medical care, and of the facilities whereby this can be obtained.

SERIOUS SICKNESS and disability are often caused by "social diseases." Why are they called "social diseases"? Because they strike directly at the basis of society—the family. They are no respecters of color, creed, age or sex. Their prey is the unborn child, the promising youth and the mature man and woman, married or single. The "social disease" we shall deal with in this educational series is syphilis. In attacking the home this disease attacks the nation. Dr. Osler, the wisest physician of modern times, called syphilis "the greatest killing disease."

Like many other foes of mankind among diseases, the tiny germs responsible for this menace to health and happiness are too small to be seen without the use of the microscope. But they can destroy the strong and the weak, the trained athlete and the helpless infant. Nor are their damages confined to any single part of the body. Every part and tissue is subject to damage, particularly the heart, brain, eyes, skin and bones.

Fortunately science, through years of research and practice, has discovered methods of detection and treatment which will prevent these disastrous results if given a chance. But even the best trained doctors are powerless unless the infected person is brought to their attention. The discovery of syphilis must precede its cure. The soundest advice that can be given to anyone who has reason to think himself infected is "Seek Competent Medical Advice Immediately."

Syphilis often exists without the knowledge of the individual and no health examination can be thorough and complete without blood and other laboratory tests for its presence.

First rate treatment and care of syphilis can be secured within your means from an experienced family physician or from the Public Health Institute. Treatment is available also through the Institute and many free clinics, for those without funds.

The Institute was organized more than ten years ago to combat "social diseases" in Chicago. Its medical staff are experienced and are registered by the state. All treatment and advice is given by these men and women physicians.

The fees are within the reach of all. Treatment is available to those without immediate funds—no one is turned away because of inability to pay.

Napkin Holders from Clothes Pins.

Two years ago I made considerable money at home, making napkin-holders out of clothes pins. I'd take six pins and paint each a different color, inside and out and paint little flowers and faces on them.

I made my first set for a bazaar and from then on, I had all the orders I could take care of from friends and others, especially around Christmas time as they made a lovely gift packed in a pretty box. I sold them for 50 and 75 cents a box. C. E. F.

Irons Men's Shirts.

I have many women acquaintances who detest ironing men's shirts, and as I am quite an expert at this and have plenty of time, I do this work for them, making a nominal charge, and in this way saving a substantial amount of pin money for myself.

Saved from a Crow.

When I was married we lived on a farm for a few months. This was a great pleasure to me as I had always lived in the city. One day while my husband was away, I was lonely and decided to take a walk through the woods to our nearest neighbors.

I stopped to gather some flowers when suddenly a crow flew down from a tree and perched on my shoulder I was much frightened and tried to push it off, but it settled on my head and I could not drive it away. I became so thoroughly frightened that I ran to the neighbors screaming, "Save me! Save me!"

They had a good laugh about it, and told me that their children had two pet crows who always perched on their heads when they went to the woods for the cows. Even now when in the country I hear the caw, caw of a crow I am ready to run. M. C.

Gotham Ready for Its Annual Summer Drowse

Town Abandoned for Resorts and Term Abroad.

By Nancy Randolph.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK, June 7.—[Special.]—You can readily understand that town and its ancient watering places is in the throes of what is known as "settling down." Lares and penates have been shifted for the heated term and we are all taking time out to discover just who among our friends in society is with us and who has abandoned Newport or Southampton for a summer abroad.

Belmont is drawing its spring season to a close and within a few weeks New York will once again go into its annual summer drowse and become, as I claim, the most romantic of places when the sun is setting. Already the notables are taking to flying down from Newport and dining at the St. Regis, dashing out between courses and dances to stand on the balcony and look out over lovely Central park, which amazingly enough, can never be appreciated when one is in it, but most certainly charms the eye from a distance.

Lady Camoys at Newport.

Town was host this week to an Anglo-American fashionable who has decided to desert London for Newport this summer. Lady Camoys and her uniquely named daughters, Nadeen and Noreen, were among the arrivals from the English capital and the former Mildred Sherman made a bee line for Rhode Island and the cool of Bailey's beach, for I must tell you that it has been hotter in town this week than at any other time of the year thus far.

Lady Camoys and her husband, Lord Camoys, will occupy the Lawrence Lewis Gillespie villa on Bellevue avenue. Mrs. Gillespie, the one time Irene Sherman, is Lady Comoy's sister, and both are daughters of the distinguished Mrs. W. Watts Sherman. The latter was born a Brown of Providence and her daughters will inherit more millions than they can possibly spend.

Like her mother, Lady Camoys does not care too much for the social whirl, which is one reason why she has deserted London at the beginning of its season. She likes the quiet life, with a few dinners for friends of the family. It is more for the sake of her daughters that Lady Camoys has removed to Newport. She wants Nadeen and Noreen to become well acquainted with the girls who will make their debuts at the time the Hon. Nadine and the Hon. Noreen Stoner make their debuts, though Nadine is several years the elder of the two. It was at Newport that Lady Camoys made her debut, and she is determined that her daughters will be international debutantes in every sense of the word.

Lindberghs Change Plans.

New York long ago gave up the idea of making social lions of the Charles Lindberghs. The great Lindy is too unreliable a person to count on socially, and Anne Morrow Lindbergh has even less of a social yearning than her famous husband.

The Sutton place colony was quite enthusiastic at learning that the Lindberghs had taken an apartment on 57th street, but they are now equally cast down to learn that the air minded family has decided not to go through with the matter. I do hear that the reason for their latest decision is the colonel's annoyance over the publicity that attended the drawing of the lease. When Lindy discovered that all the town had been told of the apartment he and Anne had taken and that crowds were assembling hourly to look the building over, he refused to sign the lease and called the whole matter off. Now society is wondering where the Lindberghs will finally nest in town.

The guest of the week was undoubtedly Sir Josiah Stamp, who with Lady Stamp arrived on the Berengaria. Early in the week a reception and tea were given on board the ship in Sir Josiah's honor and every one in town drove down to the pier to attend.

Among the guests were Lamont Du Pont, Patrick E. Crowley, Sir Ashley and Lady Sparks, Mr. and Mrs. Philip A. S. Franklin, Sir Harry and Lady Armstrong, Mr. and Mrs. Leroy W. Baldwin, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Carpenter, and Julian Mason.

The Stamps will be in town this week and early next week will drop in upon you in Chicago.

On the Way to England.

The Berengaria incidentally took out a slew of society folk when she departed for England in the middle of the week, and the middle of the night. Many members of Washington's diplomatic colony sailed for their annual visits to their home countries.

Among the notables was Mrs. A. Ronald Tree, kinswoman of our Lady Astor and of Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson. Also Princess Karageorgevitch, F. H. McCormick-Goodheart of the British embassy; Prince Ivan Obolensky, Col. L. H. R. Pope-Hennessy, military attaché of the British embassy; Prince Ivan Obolensky, Andoor de Hertelendy of the Hungarian legation, Mary Cass Canfield, Mary Hoyt Wiborg, Nathalie and Josephine Laimbeer, Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Voss and Mrs. Casimir de Rham.

Also sailing were Baroness Bernemisza, Baroness Lipthay, the Viscomtesse de Jognhe, Sir Newton Moore, and Lady Moore, Sir Edward Luytens, the famous Royal Academician; Edmund Du Pont, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Scott.

Second Appeal for Freedom.

It's rather warm for divorces but town is mildly interested to learn that Mrs. Nathaniel Ayer of New York and Boston, is in Reno waiting for her freedom to come through the mill.

Mrs. Ayer is another of society's notables who find matrimony difficult for this is the second time Helen has appealed to the courts to sever the tie that binds.

Born Draper, daughter of the late George Draper, she inherited many, many millions and first became the wife of Walbridge S. Taft, son of the Henry Waters Tafts of New York.

However, Helen and the nephew of the late chief justice did not make a go of their union, and after their divorce Walbridge married Elizabeth Clark, with whom he is too happy for words. Helen as her second choice, chose Nat Ayer of Boston and after a period none too long has decided that she prefers to go her way alone. She is still a young woman and blessed with bags of gold—and I doubt not that she will try matrimony a third time. Observation of society here in town leads one to believe that either marrying becomes a habit, or else that hope just won't stop springing eternally.

Chicago Artist Shows Pictures at Paris Studio

By May Birkhead.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special.]—A Chicago portrait painter and landscapist known beyond the confines of his city finds his principal French subjects both in Paris and Brittany. Alfred Partridge Klots recently showed here a portrait of a friend and fellow Chicagoan, Mrs. Carlton Holdredge, who has lived for some years in Paris, where she is a notable figure in the American colony.

Mr. Klots did not execute this portrait for lucre, but as a gift to Mrs. Holdredge's charming daughter, Betty, who will soon return to her Swiss school.

The portrait's color is particularly striking, the rose brocade and gold dress matching the subject's golden hair and the general luminous quality of the picture. Mr. Klots, who with his wife gave a studio tea to display the Holdredge portrait, also showed an interesting study of Ruth Donaldson of Washington.

Have Chateau in Brittany.

During much of the year the Klotses inhabit a historic château on the southwest coast of Brittany, at Rochefort en Terre, near Vannes. Here they encourage the maintenance of old customs, such as giving a prize for the best decorated village home. A curious lingering tradition is the horse fair, which is held there each summer, where girls and young women come to sell their hair for pin money.

Mr. Klots, who finds many landscape subjects in this region, has just left for a few weeks of painting in Venice before opening his château for the summer. Other Chicagoans at the Klotses' tea were Herman Gade and wife, who are now occupying a historic chateau near Versailles; Gen Williams Harts, military attaché at the embassy, and his wife, and also Mrs. Paul Healy. The next day Mrs. Holdredge with Mrs. Healy entertained 200 guests at a reception with music, which was by way of a housewarming garden party for the Holdredge's new home; an attractive little eighteenth century house in the Grenner-Passy quarter.

Chicagoans in Paris.

Another hostess this week who is well known in Chicago was Mrs. Gustave Baumann, whose house is one of the celebrated old properties in the Faubourg Saint Germain quarter. Its fine old woodwork has caused it to be preserved as a national monument.

Other Chicagoans now visiting Paris are Richard Crane Jr. and his wife and daughter, Florence, who are stopping at the Hotel George V. after touring Germany. Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Owen of Lake Forest are now traveling in Italy and Switzerland after a visit to Vienna and Budapest. They will reach Paris on June 14 and expect to spend several weeks at the Hotel Crilion.

Charles Shepherd Reed has been motoring through Spain and southern France, and is here for two weeks before sailing to spend the summer at his home at Ottawa.

OBERAMMERGAU.—(AP)—Visitors to the Passion Play this year find that the village telephone system has been modernized. It uses automatic instruments and gives direct connection with metropolitan exchanges.

Horse Show at South Shore Country Club

Ward Ambergs, which is to take place on Tuesday in Madison. Miss Marjorie Little, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alden H. Little, and Henry K. Gilbert Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry K. Gilbert of the Ambassador, are to be married on Wednesday at St. Chrysostom's with a reception at the Littles' apartment at 227 East Delaware place following. The Littles are former residents of St. Louis and the Gilberts are an old Chicago family.

The wedding of Miss Lois Healy to Robert Morrisson Atwater is to take place at the residence of Miss Healy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Jay Healy of Evanston, on Thursday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock.

Still another interesting nuptial is that of Miss Alice Washburn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Murray Washburn, and Howard Bosworth Churchill of Albany, N. Y., which is to be solemnized Saturday afternoon at St. Chrysostom's.

Two Notable Events Already Scheduled for Newport Season

NEWPORT, R. I., June 7.—[Special.]—The social schedule is fast lengthening here, with two debuts already listed for the summer. Doris Duke, daughter of Mrs. James B. Duke and one of the wealthiest girls in the world, will make her bow at a party her mother will give at Rough Point. The other debutante listed thus far will be Natalie Kountze, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman D. Kountze, who will be presented at Greystone, the former Wysong villa, which her parents are occupying this season.

A wedding has been listed for the fall, when Jane Foster, daughter of Mrs. Seton Porter and Barclay Douglas, son of J. Gordon Douglas and Mrs. Grafton W. Minot, will be married, most probably at Rockry hall, which the Porters are occupying at present.

Many notables continue to arrive and the season seems to be well under way. Mrs. T. Suffern Tailer arrived this week at Honeysuckle lodge, while her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Brown of Baltimore, are at Midcliff. Edith and Maude Wetmore motored here from New York and are at Chateau Sur Mer, while Mrs. Robert Gardiner has settled down at the De Rahm cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. Snowden A. Fahnestock, who are at the Train estate this summer, have started construction on their new summer home opposite the country club. They expect to have it ready by the end of the summer.

NO NEED TO TRAVEL ALONE; JOIN AN ESCORTED TOUR

Do you remember—not "away back when," but even a few years ago—when people didn't travel unless they "knew their way about"? How different it is today with care free Burlington escorted tours!

Now you can travel far and wide to the most scenic places of the West, Magic Yellowstone Park, Rainier National Park, the Colorado Rockies, even far-off Alaska, seeing them all just as completely, just as comfortably, with the same ease of mind as you would cross your own dooryard!

It's so easy to travel when you go with a care free Burlington escorted tour! Before you start, everything is arranged. Tickets, bills, baggage, strange hotels, meal checks, reservations, train connections cease to haunt you. Your experienced travel escort manages everything, even does the worrying.

Some more big mental comforts: You pay all expenses in one lump sum at the start and the cost of the vacation does not exceed the sum intended. Where you have an allotted time of two or more weeks, you can select a trip to fit into that period. If you receive short notice and haven't time to plan your vacation, a Burlington Escorted tour is ready and has everything planned in advance.

Lonely travel is banished, for you are a member of a congenial party. On your way to new and delightful places there is no apprehension, either—no worry about what to do when you arrive there.

—And, while there, you can fully enjoy every moment of sight-seeing. There is no anxiety lest you are missing something you should see, nor fretting because you may be wasting time at the least interesting places.

Burlington personally escorted tours (anywhere West) cover one to four weeks, ranging in price $155.23 to $407.21, all expenses, from Chicago.

Let us tell you the itineraries and schedules of these traveling house parties. We invite you to call at our office and we will help you select a tour to suit. Or if you can't come personally, a phone call or letter will receive the same careful attention.

......Time halts...Age vanishes... Romance lingers at the Log Lodge Hotel

LUCERNE IN QUEBEC

SPONSORED BY THE CANADIAN PACIFIC

Weeks seem like days. Young and old are of an age—gay, carefree happy. The romance of a chivalrous yesteryear lingers within the rustic cedar walls of hospitable Log Lodge.

Here is a unique hospitality indeed, an ideal blending of rusticity and luxury. From your suite overlooking the storied waters of the silvery Ottawa River or from your room almost set in the dense evergreen, you will awaken each morning with the fragrant scent of pine and cedar in your nostrils—after a night of sound, refreshing sleep.

A flowered terrace garden provides a teatime, dancetime, or bridgetime setting of unusual charm. A magnificent balconied dining room and fountain Grill will provide meals to delight the most fastidious epicure. There is a breath of old England in the quaint Tavern with its rubble stone pillars and adzed beams. And a huge six-hearthed fireplace lends added rustic charm to the genial informality of the lounge. These are only a few of the many highlights of Log Lodge hospitality.

Make your reservations now. Roads of romance—motor, rail or air—lead to the Log Lodge (opens July 1st) and to Lucerne-in-Quebec—the enchanting, new 80,000 acre Laurentian vacationland that forms its setting. 75 miles west of Montreal, 40 miles east of Ottawa, this rustic Hotel is in the very center of the grandest sports environment in the world. You and every member of your family will find your favorite recreation whether it be golf, tennis, riding, fishing, swimming, canoeing, badminton or for that matter, almost anything.

But write for the Log Lodge booklet. The illustrated story told in this fascinating brochure takes you through this rustic Hotel from top to bottom and vividly portrays the many delights awaiting you. Write for it today!

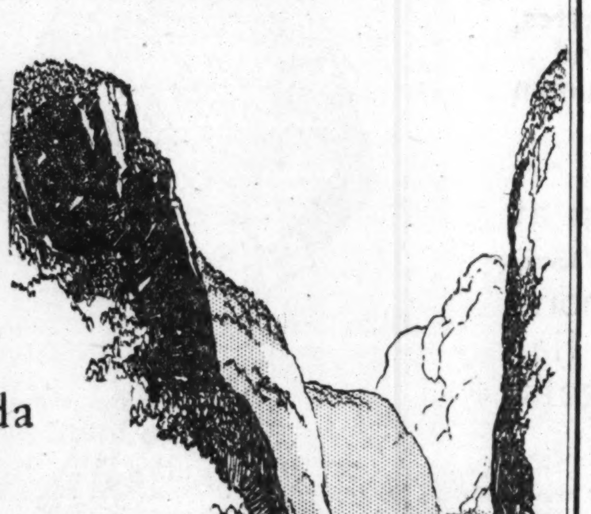
SEE the Glory of the SAGUENAY RIVER in Old F*rench* Canada



PERSONALLY CONDUCTED, ALL-EXPENSE CRUISE

$110.00

FROM Toronto your ship sails the length of Lake Ontario and noses in among the jewelled Thousand Islands. It is beautiful among these castle-crowned isles, whose owners go visiting by motor boat and canoe. You shoot in perfect safety a series of eight roaring rapids to Montreal. Here you sightsee for a day with hotel accommodation.

On to Quebec by night, down the best lighted waterway in the world. Dawn finds you beneath the mist-wreathed ramparts of this fortress city. A day is allowed for sightseeing here on the return trip. You visit the celebrated Shrine of Ste. Anne de Beaupré. Miraculous cures are here reported and pilgrims journey from the farthest corners of the earth to worship at this hallowed spot.

Fashionable Murray Bay is the next port of call and then Tadoussac. Here the St. Lawrence is eighteen miles wide. The historic Saguenay River looms black beneath its towering guardian capes, Trinity and Eternity!

You sail up the mysterious Canyon before heading for home. See this corner of an old, historic world before it becomes part of all that is modern. Accommodation, both ship and hotel, is on the most luxurious scale.

MEN ARE NOW LAYING THE FOUNDATION OF THEIR FORTUNES

Selling the World's Greatest Specialty

$30,000.00 A YEAR MINIMUM

Men who answer this Ad can meet state managers in the field who have contracts with distributors, now in successful operation, which will make four state managers as much as $36,000.00 each when carried out for the year.

Last month we started a national campaign to sell what we consider the world's greatest specialty. Our success has been phenomenal. Already state distributors have come to us and entered into huge contracts as a result of the operations of other distributors. The article we are selling is a marvelous automotive specialty, brand new, which has a field even bigger than the automobile.

Mechanical men of broad experience have predicted that it will be on 90 per cent of the cars in operation within the next few years. This specialty is of vital economic importance, paying for itself several times over during the year, but has several other still greater features. Distributors have already placed big reorders within five days apart. We are perfecting a national organization to sell this specialty through exclusive distributors.

We want a few more state managers who are qualified by ability and experience to secure these distributors and to get them into highly successful production. In order to hold his territory the state manager must earn a minimum of $30,000.00 per year. The maximum earning possibilities are still greater. Men to qualify must have earned $10,000.00 per year or more and be ready and willing to make sales themselves in their territory in securing and developing distributors. Men who do not wish to travel can have equal opportunity as distributors, in developing a local territory.

CAN YOU ANSWER THESE TWO QUESTIONS?

1. Have you had at least four seasons' experience selling men's tailoring direct to wearer? Not as a clerk in a retail store, but as a salesman calling upon his own clientele.

2. Have you, for the last two seasons, averaged at least 200 orders per season?

CHICAGOANS FIND TENANTS THROUGH TRIBUNE

Chicago landlords and rental agents, experienced in finding tenants, point the way to renting success. They buy advertising where they know it will bring answers. Wanting maximum results from Want Ads, they buy more space from the Tribune than from all the other Chicago newspapers combined.

You can use these results. You can fill your own apartments, now or at any other time of the year. Every month is rental month when you use the Tribune.

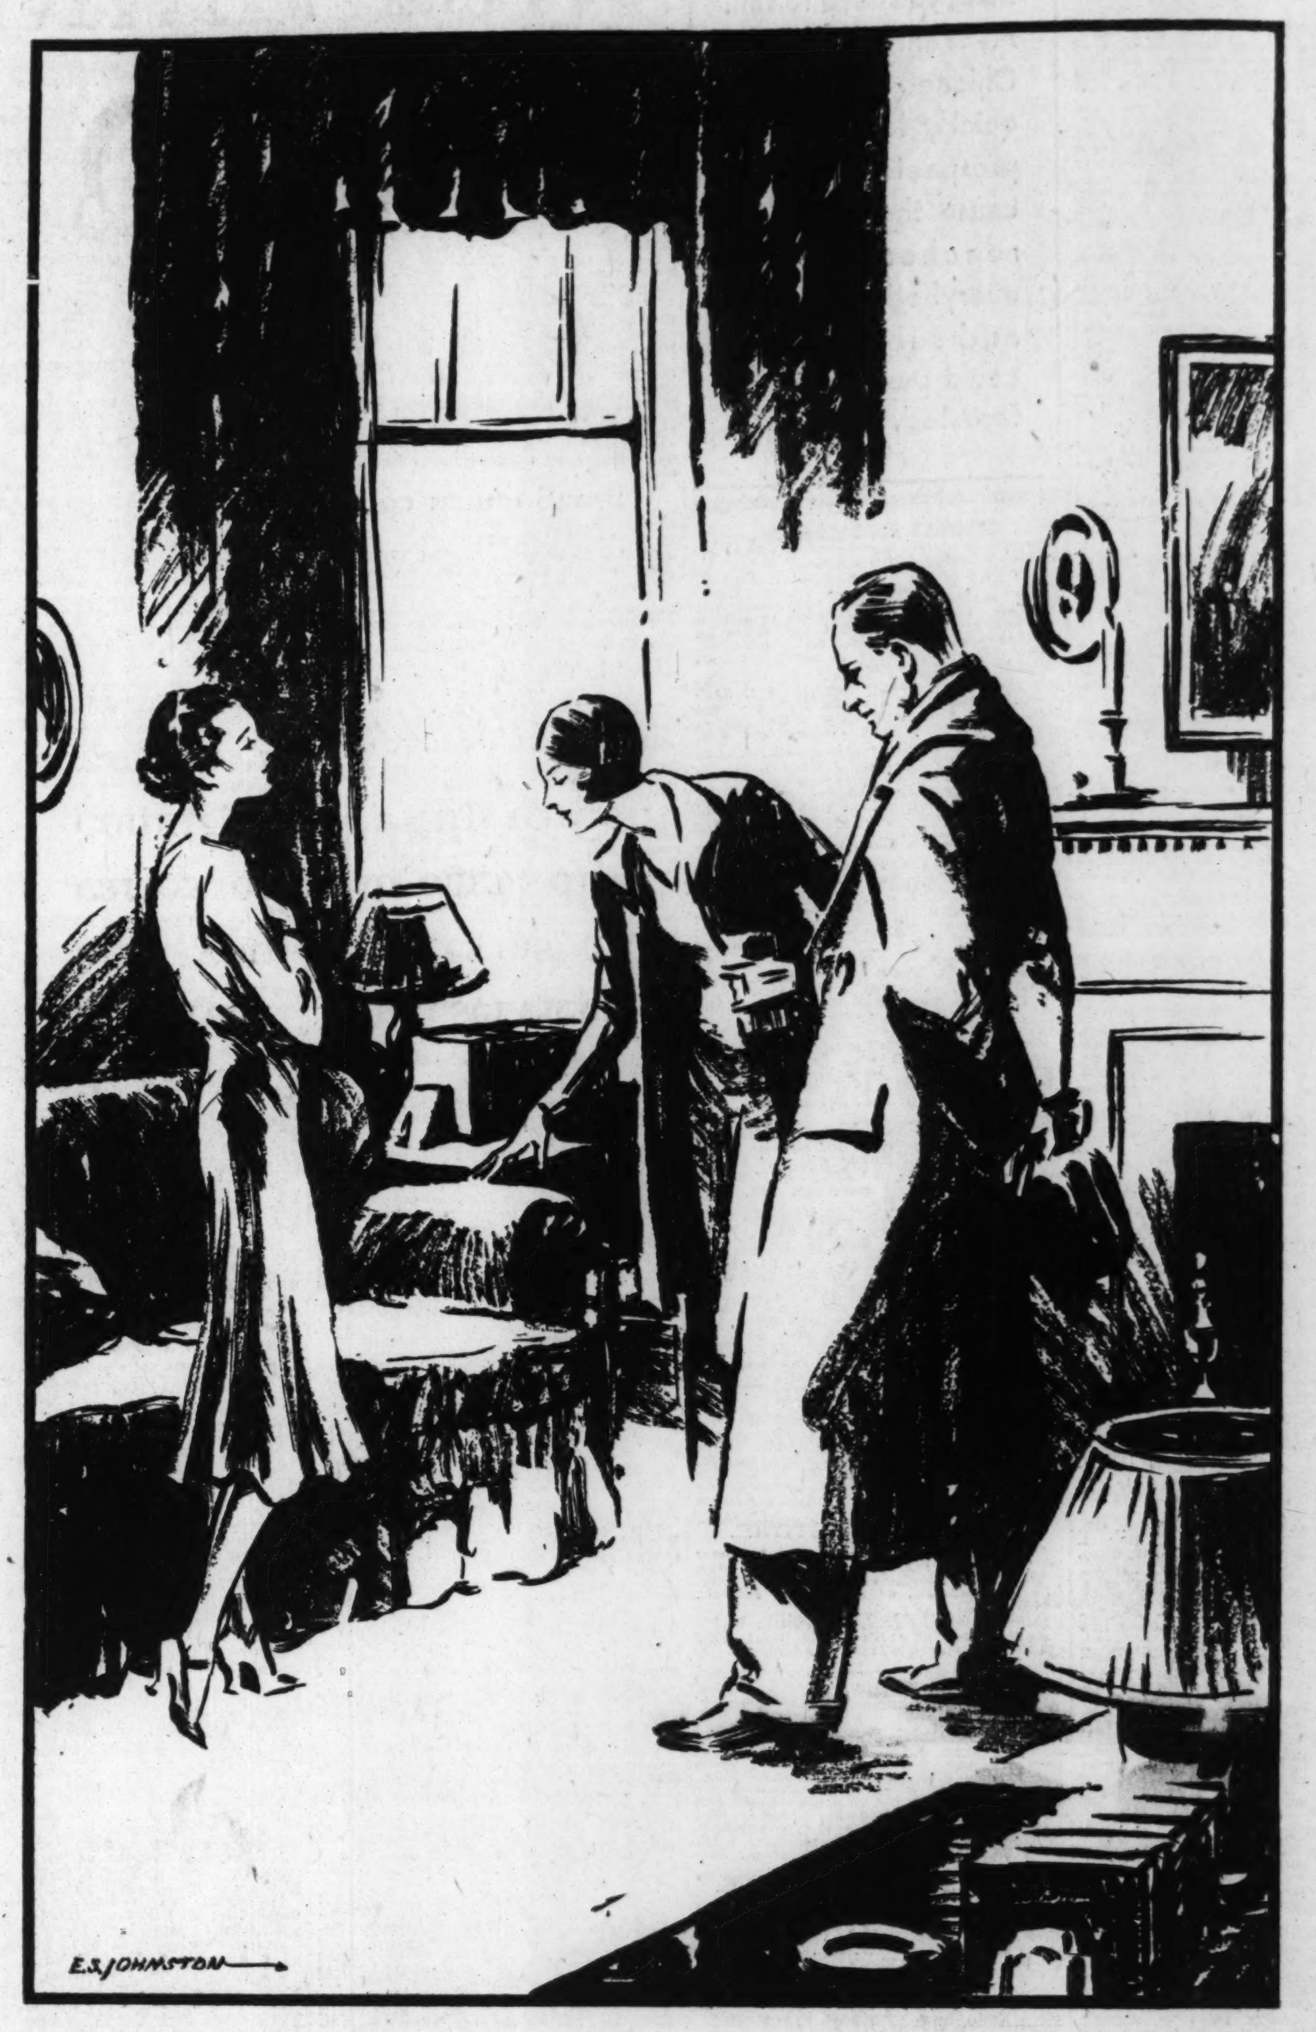
"How can we save money on furniture?"

New in the city, they had to keep the budget low. Yet they wanted to buy handsome, comfortable chairs, an attractive bedroom suite, good rugs for a small apartment. And they had to do it quickly. Hotel bills were mounting.

A native Chicagoan suggested a look into Tribune Want Ads. Surprised, they found more than a column full of Household Goods for sale at prices easily within their reach. One couple, moving out of town, offered complete furnishings, and a lease for a four-room apartment. They took both, saved more than two hundred dollars, days of shopping and moving. Now, for whatever they need, their first thought is Tribune Want Ads.



Whatever you want . . . seek it first in TRIBUNE Want Ads

THEY did what you can easily do with your Tribune any morning. Turning back to the Want Ads, Household Goods column, you have bargains in rugs, furniture, complete suites at your call. There's no trouble about it. It's simply part of your Tribune reading.

And Household Goods is only one department of Tribune Want Ads. Another may list the apartment in which you want to live. Another suggests courses of instruction you could use advantageously in your work or social life. The Want Ad Section lists hundreds of such services, all ready to help you—services as different as a carton of fresh eggs, direct from the country, and a trip to California in a car driven by one who wants company and some one to share expenses.

Use the services here offered! Whatever you want at the present moment, seek it first in the Want Ads for convenience, saving, satisfaction.
